TAKING ADVANTAGE

Each year a number of students take advantage of the unique opportunities found when studying abroad. The number of universities providing opportunities to American students continues to grow. Another alternative is the Semester at Sea program where students study while travelling to different countries.

The campus was able to get a good picture of life abroad from "World Columnist", Peter Slattery, who shared his experiences in London via the Free Press. Time spent meeting new people, learning about different cultures, and adjusting to a new environment take on as much importance as time spent in the classroom. Studying in a foreign country is an excellent way to provide a well-rounded education. Experiencing life in a new, and at first frightening way, can only serve to enhance a Babson education.
Priscilla Burke
Candace Burns
Timothy Burns
Angel Caban
Cynthia Cabral
Patricia Cahill

Brian Con
Maria Catalano
James Cellucci
Oliver Chamberlin
David Chan
Monica Chang

David Chariton
Linda Chee
Nelso Clark

Peter Clark
Denise Cohen
Christian Collas

Stephanie Collins
Alexandra Conley
Claudine Coppotelli

Kent Coughlin
Arthur Couture
Donald Cranley

Colleen Critelli
Michael Crosby
Leo Crowe
Mary Curran
Angela D'Uso
Christine Darling

Juniors
A View from the Hill

On April 24, flames roared outside of the New Dorm and dark clouds of smoke could be seen rising high above the Hill. But there was no need to be alarmed — it was just the members of the class of 1987 as they gathered together for a cookout.

Juniors got a chance to chat with friends as they waited in line to get a burger or hot dog. The weather outside turned cold and everyone retreated to the New Dorm lounge. Inside it was hard to be heard above the many conversations and the sounds of laughter.

The afternoon passed quickly and all too soon "good-byes" were being said. The Junior Class Cookout was a great way to relax and a perfect end to the junior year.

1. Brian Pinkle likes his burger with everything on it.
2. "Come and get it!"
3. Pete Stein, Scott Sagan, and George Ryan cook like they've had plenty of experience with backyard bar-b-ques.
4. Junior Class President Chris Reilly and Chris Fraga, who seems to be enjoying his burger.
IN SEARCH OF...

Trying to find a job that matches your expectations is difficult. The Office of Career Services has become a second home to many seniors in their endeavors to find a job after graduation. O.C.S. offers many workshops on interviewing, resume writing and researching the prospective company.

It is best to start early. In the fall, Career Expo is a great way to find out about all the different opportunities in your field. Once you decide which career path you want to follow, your work is just beginning. Now you have resumes to write, letters to send out and interviews to set up. The best advice is to start early and let O.C.S. help you in your endeavors.
1. Starting early on his plans for a career is Mike Burke.
2. Jean Arthur listens to representatives while Lucine der Manuelian takes notes.
3. Jennifer Gibbs reviews some material before a big interview.

Shawn Nestor
Robyn Nicodemus
Kathleen Noonan
Richard Nuenighoff
Brian O'Donnell
Tracy Okamura

Mark Oppenheim
Caroline Owen
Glenn Oxford
William Peck
Michelle Pelletier
Steven Pennucci

Valerie Peraud
Jeffery Perry
Paul Philbin
David Pina
Cristina Pinzon
Brien Pikel
Suzette Sparks
Peter Stein
Jacob Stott-Nelson
Christopher Strong
David Sullivan
Glenn Sullivan

Denise Taché
Brian Tavares
Paul Taylor
Pamela Tenny
Kelsey Thies
Jennifer Thoman

Cynthia Thomas
Brian Tobey
Robert Trevianni
David Unger
Charles Utter
Jill Van Heertum

1. Third floor residents Laura Stanford, Peggy Hall, Lynn Carr, Anne Love, Andrea Patotta, Kristin Coughwell, Amy Foster, and Lisa Winer think it's a great place to live.
2. What we saw just before we left for the summer . . .
3. . . . and what we found when we returned.
Last spring, my friends asked me where I was living for the next year. "The new dorm," I replied. They would say, "Have fun camping." With such optimism, I could envision all 150 students camping on the Hill.

When I arrived in the fall, I was amazed that the dorm was finished except for unfurnished lounges. Later, I switched on the light and thought I was in the Transporter Room of the Starship Enterprise. "Beam me up, Scottie," I screamed as I stood under the single spotlight. No problem. The room would be bright in the morning, since there were no shades on the windows.

All that remains is to give the dorm an identity. How about "The Pleasure Dome?"