DR. RUTH AROUSES BABSON INTEREST

On September 30, 1985, Babson played host to nationally reknown sex therapist, Dr. Ruth Westheimer. Her lecture was both informative and entertaining.

She hopes that people can start to feel more comfortable with open, serious discussions about sex. Her lecture stressed that both men and women should realize their social obligations to be responsible in their sexual lifestyles. She wants people to learn the facts and bury the myths. Throughout her lecture, she continually stated that students should stand up for their personal values and not submit to peer pressures.

At the end of her lecture, she fielded questions from the audience and answered written questions. The audience cheered when she finished with her traditional sign-off, "Good night and good sex."

1. At 4'10", Dr. Ruth has to stand on a box to reach the podium.
2. Standing room only, many students were turned away.
3. Admirers were anxious to get her autograph.
4. Dr. Ruth fields questions from those brave enough to ask.
Sophomores
1. Dean Girdis is in good shape as he completes the first half of the course.
2. Cheers from friends atop the Nike Wellesley help Priscilla Burke manage a smile through the pain.
3. Washington Street is crowded by runners and fans.
TAKE THE MONEY AND RUN

With the arrival of the Boston Marathon we know that spring is not far behind. This year's marathon brought with it a new incentive. For the first time in its ninety year history, the marathon offered prize money. This step away from tradition signaled its intent to remain atop the marathoning world.

Australian Rob DeCastella pulled away from a pack of runners at eight miles to win in 2:07:50. The women's race was never contested as Norway's Ingrid Kristiansen led from wire to wire to win in a time of 2:24:14.

Over a dozen students lined up in Hopkinton to test themselves against the hilly Boston course. Some chose to run half-way, an accomplishment in itself. Still others chose to try the entire 26.2 mile course. Among those attempting both the half and full distance were sophomore Dan McAllister, juniors Priscilla Burke, Donna Prevett, Ed Kinnaly, Chris Colias, Kevin Shaughnessy, John Baggott, Brian Thornton, and seniors Matty Gibbs, Larry LaBonte, Paul Cunningham, Dean Girdis, and Sean Andrews.

Ed Kinnaly
Sophomores
Good Times for All

When the legal drinking age in Massachusetts increased to 21 years old last summer, administrators were faced with a problem. Although the "grandfather clause" permitted 20 year olds born before June 1, 1965, to drink, only about 40% of the campus met these requirements. Many college campuses had already gone "dry" and it looked as if Babson would soon follow.

But a better solution was found. This was the first year that the Beaver Brau was open to the entire campus. By offering foods like nachos and pizza, and sponsoring events like Comedy Night and Talent nights the Pub was able to preserve the social atmosphere of the entire campus. The Pub proved that you did not have to drink to have a good time.
1. Alan Glick is all smiles as he sets up a date for Saturday night.
2. Another busy day in the life of an activities director.
3. Attending student organization meetings is just part of the job that Alan enjoys.
4. In her first year, Val had to tackle many important issues.

Jeffrey Reese
Scott Reith
Rolf Reiksten
Michelle Resteghini
Daniel Retallata
Carole Reyeal

Kirsten Rhodes
Maia Ricci
Michael Richard
Lynne Riordan
Barry Rosenberg
Richard Ross

Margot Roth
Miguel Royo
Sally Ruben
Gonzalo Ruiz
Timothy Ryan
David Sachs
New Faces

Newcomers Val Caso, Director of Residential Life, and Alan Glick, Director of Student Affairs, agree that their first year has been a learning experience. Val and Alan have tried to place more emphasis on nonalcoholic social events.

Alan's answer to this problem is to focus on social events during the week such as movies, comedy acts or various speakers. Alan wishes to change the emphasis from business oriented to more social type events to give students greater variety in their education. He foresees that this will widen the horizons of many groups.

One of Val's most difficult tasks is to displace students for their sophomore year. Although the "New Dorm" has alleviated much of the problem and displacement is decreasing, there is still a shortage of housing due to increased student enrollment.

Hoping that next year will be exciting and unique, both look forward to the next year with anticipation.

Eugene Sanchez
Janice Santos
Thomas Sasso
Elizabeth Scaccia
Thomas Schaefer
William Scherber

Heidi Schuerch
Jill Schwartz
Cynthia Shaw
William Shea
Edward Sherr
Carol Smith

Jay Smith
Shelley Southwood
Lynne Spadafora
Margaret Spangenberg
Andy Spencer
Philip St. Germain