FRATS PLEDGE FORTY-EIGHT

Last week, Babson's three professional fraternities invited new men into pledgship. The response of the fraternities, according to Prexy Capella, Dean Harris, is the highest in the history of the three fraternities, was extremely gratifying. For the most part, the pledges seemed anxious to learn about the fraternity system at Babson and how to finance it. The newly initiated pledges are:

BABSON GRADS GIVE ADVISE

This past Thursday, January 25, in the Babson College Management held a panel discus- sion that pitted the most interesting and informati- ve projects of the year. Three graduates were invited to participate in the panel discussion on the topic: "How Well Babson Has Pre- pared Them for the Business World, and What Changes They Think SHOULD BE Made."

The first guest was Mr. Stephen Dopheorie, Class of '63, who is an active member of KAM, Alpha Fraternity, and the Alpha chapter's Advisor. He is now employed by Price Waterhouse as a public accountant.

Also from the Class of '63 was the second guest Mr. Charles A. Dale. Formerly a distribution manager, Dale is now working for Donald Advertising Agency as a real estate zone manager. While at Babson, he participated in the Blue Key, Student Judicial Court, and Student Government.

Educated as a pricing analyst by Edgarson, Gehrmann, and Grier, Inc. in Mr. Larry Pinnock's Department, the third speaker. As a graduate student, he was a production major, and a member of the Student Senate, and Kappa Psi.

Mr. Douglas Johnson, acting moderator, began the discussion by asking the panel how Babson had prepared them for the business world.

In answer to this question, Mr. Dopheorie, a junior accountant, said that he likes the work on the side of a balance sheet and in charged by the company as a liability. At school, the principles and funda- ments of accounting are taught in a broad sense. When you begin working on the outside, detailed work and accuracy are stressed more such as with subsidiary ledgers, and physical control of inventories, field work.

Mr. Dopheorie was not a state job- 10.

It is dynamic, interesting and never changing. Mr. Dopheorie stressed the amount of personal contact with management and superiors and their superiors as well as their clients. For two out of six months, he was traveling to

BUSINESS-EC CLUB TO HEAR POLITICIAN

State Representative Malvin Kir- wald of Gardner, Mass., chairman of the House Committees on Labor and Industries, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Eco- nomic Club of Babson Institute Thursday evening, January 30 in the Y.C.A.

Representative Watl, a member of the House since 1961, will discuss an average day of hearings before his committee and explain the procedures followed in reaching de- cisions and recommendations which ultimately result in legisla- tive action. The so-called "in- camera" bill, a recent contro- versial issue, will be explained in detail. The legislation prohibits employers from requiring employ- ees or applicants for employment to take polygraph tests. Such tests may be made, however, during a formal investigation by the State Police.

Watl is also the author of the legislation concerning the dumping of industrial waste in inland waters of Massachusetts, the bill, which has passed in the House and is now before the Senate, calls for fines from $250 to $2,000 per day if the law is violated, another Watl bill, setting up a code of ethics for newspapers in the handling or pre-trial material, is now before the Judicial Council.

Representative Watl, an over- veteran of World War II, is a past president of the Gardner City Council and was formerly employed by the Florence Stone Co. of Gardner in an administrative capacity. He has been long active in veteran affairs, and is a former Commander of the VFW Post 224.

BABBON "ON THE AIR"

Plans are made for the construction and operation of a radio station on the Babson campus.

There are two types of radio sta- tions that have been considered. The AM station was a possibility, but it was later decided that an FM station would be more appropriate. With the Administration, the second possibility is termed as an AM station.

Barry Goldwater seems to be making a terrific comeback from the effects of President Kennedy's death. It was in the ranks of the Republican party leadership that Barry's support had weakened. They didn't like his, "Dozens of demoralized Goldwaterites chances for a victory in Dixie," Goldwater's strong grass - root popularity rallied to his side and has shown him to be the only possible Republican candidate who can win the upcoming Presidential election.

Conservatism and Barry Goldwater, to some uninformed people, sounds like extremism. People have said such things as, "Goldwater would dump the U.N. into the East River," or "he wants to slice the coast east off and set it adrift," or that Barry would lead us to the bevorment of a new nation. Our Federal Government has become a power-hungry, inefficient, bureaucracy that is costing the American people more and more. If Barry Goldwater can win, it will mean that many federal government agencies should be decentralized and put under the authority that is closest to the needs of the people. It be-it the states or local communities.

There are many other issues that Senator Goldwater has made controversial, like victory over communism, aid to communist countries, taxes, and so on. Whatever the outcome of the election, the fact that many federal government agencies should be decentralized and put under the authority that is closest to the needs of the people will stand for.

"Third stream jazz"

It seems generally agreed that Gunther Schuller is responsible for the creation of this category — "third stream music." The first big gait to capture currency in one of the New York Times head. In the assassination of a great concert of Schuller, works John S. With the most recent example of the United States, a number of albums with the participation of both artists and material. The flavor of "third stream" music is described by the improvisational spontaneity and rhythmic vitality that stands in contrast to the compositional procedures and techniques adopted in Western music during 700 years of musical development.

The "third stream," piece involves a concert grosso-style structures combining both classical and jazz musicians on the same platform, the classical players to serve as the "orchestra" and the jazz players as the "soloists or concert." There have been some differences between the elements of the concept, far, and some-out-and-out trash. How to Boost Your Self-Confidence

There are rich rewards in knowing just how good you are, in owning your own self-confidence. A self-confident person can do almost anything he puts his mind to. You can learn to be self-confident, to love yourself, to believe in yourself. It's not something you can adopt overnight. But there are steps you can take in the right direction.

YOUR PLUS QUALITIES

First, make a list of your positive plus qualities—the things that are good about you. You should have a good idea of what you're good at. What do other people think of you? You might be surprised at how many good things there are.

YOUR LOOKS GIVE YOU AWAY

Whether you like it or not, your looks play a part in the way people perceive you. In the real world, people judge books by their covers. In most cases, your looks can give you an advantage or a disadvantage. But you can use your looks to your advantage by focusing on the positive aspects of your physical appearance.

Once you've formed a REALISTIC perception of your abilities, focus on developing them to reach their fullest extent possible. Always keep your goals in the forefront of your mind.

In the end, you're worth more than you think, because you're worth what you make of yourself. And you're not alone. Thousands of other people feel the same way. The world is waiting for you to show it what you're made of.

Actually, on a more practical level, there are a few things you can do to make your self-confidence stronger:

1. Write a list of things you're good at.
2. Practice feeling good about yourself. The more you focus on your positive qualities, the more you'll start to believe in yourself.
3. Surround yourself with positive people. Spend time with people who make you feel good about yourself.
4. Set realistic goals for yourself. Celebrate your successes, no matter how small.
5. Remember that you're not alone. Everyone has their own insecurities, and everyone is working on overcoming them.

In conclusion, boosting your self-confidence is a journey, not a destination. It takes time and effort, but the rewards are worth it. You're worth more than you think, and you're capable of achieving great things. Start believing in yourself today, and watch the world change around you.

...and his view of the world is so intimate... and in the end, each of us is left with his own perception of events. It's the way we choose to see the world, not the way it actually is, that matters. This is what I mean when I say that the world is full of beauty. It's not that the world is inherently beautiful, but that we are able to see beauty in it, and that we are capable of sharing that beauty with others.

THE NOONSELL...HEEL OR HERO
BY KENNETH HUMPHREY

The recent verbal attack on Celtic owner Walter Brown was a most unusual remark. Very rarely has there ever been any evidence of harsh comments concerning any- one in the organization. Ever since the Celtic world that began scoring championsships back in 1927 the team and the front office alike have been like a big happy family.

The chief question dealing with the entire matter, thanks to Mr. Brown, is whether or not the Holy Cross All-American is really the number one heel in all space. Is Heimsoeth a heel or is he really a hero? To answer the question one must have an adequate knowledge of all the facts.

Tom was only doing his job, the best he could. As president of the championship team, Tom was merely acting on behalf of his constituents with the intention of upholding the players' rights. It is unfortunate, however, that the en-

OPINION POLL

Questions: What is your opinion on the new four credit curriculum?

Paul Werhulsh: I think it's good because it enables a student to concentrate his efforts more deliberately into his studies due to the fact that he has less classes previously and can devote more time to each. It leads to a greater comprehension of subject matters.

Steve Schiltz: I think it gives the student a better idea of what he wants to achieve. He doesn't have to worry about everything being done by not placing too much emphasis on any one course to the point where one can lose a student's average. On the other hand it over emphasizes major courses.

Michel Perouta: I would say it's ridiculous. This program implies that there is an equal amount of material and work in all the courses at the school. As for this nonsense about giving the student more time to concentrate, I would say that the previous term's experience would show conclusively that it did not help. The nature student should be able to pass six exams as easily as four or five.

Jeff Green: It rejuvenates the student from the burden of so much learned in a given area. An example of this is that some courses have been combined to deal with related objects.

Smokely the Bear is a creep. Ever since the Animal League gave him a pair of jeans and an old Monticello hat, he’s been romping around the hills shaking his bowl at anyone trying to keep warm.

Are we to stay cooped up in our overcrowded cities just because the noisy bears want to romp around in the woods? Are we to lose our homes and our chance of account of one rather silly-looking bear.

This was not the idea of our founding fathers. They envisioned a great nation, stretching from shore to shore, not a sanctuary for a moronic, howling,-brained brute in our country's great western prairie, our ancestors met with many hardships such as starvation, timberly cold winters and Smokely's ancestors.

But let's examine motives. Could Smokely be covering up something besides burn-out campfires? In his financial efforts to stop happy campers from blazing up the

First Home Victory
By Ture Sodobu

In their second home start of the season, the Beaver basketball team was a sparsely attended New England College 65-63. Although Boston took an early lead, the game was anything but settled. The Beavers used their height and agility to score, often taking advantage of the New England turnovers, and generally lacked the court leadership that腐蚀

Although the game was played under the warm-up, the crowd on hand really didn’t pay much attention to the work on their opponents. Steve Zager, as the Beaver’s leading scorer, was pair of free throws. The score remained at 6-0 before New England called time out after having scored for the first 3 minutes and 10 seconds. New England Captain, Gentile, at last got his eye and put a 2 point layup for Boston’s lead to 8. "Moose" Morris, possibly playing to show his 400th game, was injected, and quickly added 4 points to the Beavers’ score. Morris also rebounded well, often gaining good position on his opponents. The Beavers lead was stretched to 9 points before it was cut back by the New England fast break, continuously set up by Beaver’s forward, Eugenio. The Beavers took the lead on a fine fifteen-footer by Gentile only to have it cut back to 35-32 as a buzzer in a gegen by Randy Poole. Down 5 points, Boston had time to think of how to get into the free throw line, but two on to one again gave the lead to Beaver, as New England could not make a basket with a basket of their own. However, this was only a momentary lead, quickly tied again. Both teams had their share of momentum, as the score stood at 30-26 at half.

As in the Nassau Game, the Beavers were once again bothered by the turnover. As in the first half, with co-captain Aldo accounting for 7 of the Team’s 11 turnovers, Boston’s 11 points, Coiner/Tyler was the only point in the first half, and to his credit, the 2nd half was played with only 3 committed to the Beaver’s in the first half.

Boston’s lead was never in doubt, as the men were evidently against some very keen competition. Seventeen players, including the Wilson/Clark/Coleman/Hunter, were playing against the Balloon/Carb/Clark/Coleman/Hunter, who were a very capable squad.

On Saturday, a first-year man on the squad, has shown a great deal of promise. This year, the team has shown constant pull together so far this season. Boston has shown great progress and promise, in the 100 yard, backroom, 400 yard and the mile events.
