Founded by co-presidents Becky Wong and Brenda Rogers, Women's Outreach to the World (WOW) had a very successful first year. The club was established to provide a place where the unique problems of women in the working world could be discussed. Both founders recognized the lack of such an organization at Babson, and felt that this would be an ideal time to begin such a club because of the growing number of female students at the college.

During the year, a number of speakers were brought to the college by WOW. These ranged from women speaking about job experiences in different fields, to a lecturer on U.S.-U.S.S.R. trade relations. In addition, social events such as the dance on Parents' Weekend were held. The Babson campus continues to look forward to good things from WOW.
