Winter Weekend '84 was plagued with difficulties. What is to be a celebration of the rites of winter, was turned into a celebration of the rites of spring as the snow melted and the grass began turning green in the warmth of the day. Problems with film and photographers left few remembrances in print. Despite these problems, the olympic spirit kept enthusiasm high as Baboites "Went for the Gold" and had a great time at all the events. In the end most everyone fared well, except the few that felt the pains of defeat on Monday morning and the ones that withdrew from the Babson Competition for the weekend.
