Health Services Cut As NWH Faces Inquiry Into 4 Deaths
Students’ welfare in question as numerous deficiencies uncovered in government probe of hospital

Jessica Burtt
News Editor

The Newton-Wellesley hospital faces public suspicion and loss of confidence after a report by the Department of Public Health (DPH) on July 25, 1999, and a recent article in The Wellesley Townsman. The report, released in late August, is a response to the deaths of three women treated at the hospital within the past six months.

Newton-Wellesley responded to the community by issuing letters to area households and recent patients. In one such letter, the hospital admitted that a patient “may have received too much medication.” The patient was one of two women who died, within two days of each other, after being admitted for post-natal care in March. Another letter stated that the other woman’s death was “not preventable.” In addition, the DPH did not receive notification of the death within the mandatory 24 hour period.

The report stated that “there is no reason to believe that the quality of care to patients in the hospital.” The DPH found, overall, that the staffing and quality needs were inadequate, internal and external residents were called upon too often to make critical medical decisions, and cited incidents as an emergency resuscitation team responding without the proper resuscitation equipment.

At the center of a massive government probe, Babson’s local hospital comes under serious scrutiny for the quality of treatment offered.

Women’s Soccer Team Leaves Bryant College Out To Dry, 1-0

Joe Senosi
Assistant Sports Editor

On a perfect day for soccer, the Babson girls soccer team outplayed, outdistanced, and just plain outplayed Bryant College in their game against Bryant College. Although the final score was 1-0, the score could have been anything but. There were seven goals in the match: four for Babson and three for Bryant.

The Lady Beavers came out in a 4-4-2 alignment. Since this alignment featured two strikers, it allowed them to put a lot of pressure on Bryant’s defense. Karen Pagliaro and Nicole Barnapo applied the early pressure, which led to the ball deep into the Bryant zone. At 2:32 in the match, Barnapo scored the decisive goal off the cross bar. Karin Heine, attacking from the left wing, hit the ball with much force and many shots throughout the first half due in large part to the extended pressure. The second half was played by Morgan Wegrzyz, Karen Donahue, Lesley DeMauro and Nicole Barnapo.

Lesley DeMauro runs up field while receiving a pass and fending off a defender from Bryant College.

Olin Digs Deep for New Engineering School

Daniel J. Keefe III

Representatives from the F. W. Olin Foundation have announced that they will help fund a new college of engineering in conjunction with Babson College.

The new school, called F. W. Olin College of Engineer- ing, will set new and higher standards in the field of engineering education. Olin’s vision is, “To prepare its students to meet the engineering challenges of the twenty-first century and enhance the contribution that science and engineering makes to the community.” To fulfill this vision, the Olin Foundation is investing upwards of $200 million into this project and expects the first enrollment class by the fall of 2001.

Babson plans to sell 80 on the Needham side of Babson’s 450-acre campus to the Foundation for the construction of the new college. This college is to be a freestanding, nonprofit institution which will act as a separate entity from Babson. However, there are plans in the works for sharing of resources between the two schools with cross-registration and shared facilities.

PE Credit Requirement is Eliminated

Daniel J. Keefe III

It's two days before graduation. The projects are done, you've received your final grades, and you have survived once again, onto graduation right? Not just before you take the final walk and grab your degree. A $120,000 piece of paper that proves you are educated, the phone rings. On your voice mail the message says, "You haven't fulfilled your PE Credit requirement. You cannot graduate." The message repeats and mocks you as an individual forming on your forehead. A single thought reverberates in your head, "What if I am denied this, this PE Credit, no graduation?"

This is, of course, a worst case scenario. In past years, Babson required that each graduating student complete two physical Education Credits before allowing the student to graduate. This may come as a relief to some to hear that the PE Credit system has been eliminated.

How did all this come about? Originally, the purpose of the PE Credit requirement was to encourage students to emerge from the/professional cores of their curriculum, and stay in touch with their muscles instead. "It was never intended to stop people from graduating," comments Frank Millerk, Director of Athletics, "just to get students to participate in some type of physical activity."

In years past, the PE Credit program evolved into a physical and health related activities. About 80 plus percent of students generally participated in some sport or activity. However, this took a toll on our seniors on various health issues. To curb this, the Babson Credit system is being eliminated. This cuts both in the Athletic and Health departments.

"There is a terrific class that is not having the abrasive qualities of the press applied to you daily... Even though we are now on this new level, I feel that we wish they didn't write it, and even though we disagree, there isn't any derelict that would not do the job all at a free society without a very, very active press." — William Glanvill

We Don't Apologize for the Truth

Picture this: It's 7:45 a.m. on Sunday, August 31, in the Webster Center. Countless new parents arriving on campus: eager, new students anxiously waiting for their first time away from home. College officials scurrying about trying to make sure everything goes "so planned." Then, all hell breaks loose—the Free Press is here!

"What's the problem?" shouts one administrator. "What did they write?"

We were in the Webster Center in the middle of setting up for the onslaught of too many new students, a voice boom out, "What the hell are you thinking...Touing Nightmares?" As the official in charge of Orientation marches over, I see another administrator frantically wave for me to get the Free Press out of Webster.

Why all the fuss about what administrators and faculty alike called "a well written article"? Simple, the College didn't want its student newspaper reporting facts which reflected poorly on Babson.

As a matter of fact, some individuals didn't want the Free Press around, they did it to ensure this newspaper wouldn't be seen by parents and students. Their actions included moving our bins from their normal stand locations, tearing down newspapers, turning over copies in their stacks, and throwing 500 copies away from a crowded Trim Dining Hall. Besides these acts of sabotage (discreetly conducted is the official term used by the College to describe these acts), one individual even had the audacity to threaten a Free Press reporter, "You'll have to deal with these very actions. No need to say, the Free Press is pressing charges and investigating any action undertaken against the organization.

All of this sabotage, however, was just a symptom of a larger problem which exists at Babson. Essentially, the whole web was thrown away the newspaper ran a headline and saw our organization's role on campus is. So, we all have to look at what it is in the Free Press is supposed to be.

First and foremost, the Free Press is just that, a free press. We have the right to print the facts of the day any way we see fit. What if we print false statements which damage someone's reputation? We get sued. We are, unlike any other organization on campus, open to libel lawsuits, and we have seen those in the past two years. The point is clear. We must zealously protect our organization's fundamental right to freely print whatever facts our professional staff feels is important. If we mess up, we pay dearly in court.

Second, the Free Press must report the truth. Every day our staff strives to report the news in a completely open and straightforward way. We do not hide facts. We do not lie to students. If we make a factual mistake and are aware of it, we will print a correction. However, we do not apologize for the truth. We do not run from it. We must embrace it and report it fully, even when it embarrasses a member of the Babson community.

A perfect example can be found in our last paper. When the Admissions Office caused a major overcrowding problem because their summer melt projections were completely incorrect, it was our job to report this. We didn't look to our issue with "nightmare" or "fiasco" or "disaster" or "tragedy," they failed to realize the word "nightmare" was an understatement. Tim Mann and Campus Life had to move heaven and earth to get all of these new students housed on time. But, the truth still was the Admissions Office caused a "nightmare" of a problem, and we reported it.

Being free to report the truth is what the Free Press is about. We must be free, and we must report the truth no matter what it reveals. It is our duty. It is our passion. It is idealized in a famous quotation which I deeply believe: "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." That is the Free Press role on campus.

I've Got the Bookstore Blues

Has anyone bought books recently? Has anyone beside me experienced problems with the Babson bookstores? Tons of people have approached me saying how terrible the bookstore has been functioning lately. The items were sold, the book and bookstore is the normal planet which the College treats students; not as a customer paying nearly $30,000, your book, but simply a captive audience with no other supplier from which to purchase their books. I find this mentality frightening.

One student described her bookstore experience as "the worst it has ever been in my four years here. Before, things could start looking at its departments to write case studies about, rather than going to outside corporations." She went on to describe how her Consumer Behavior book, which has yet to come into the bookstore, has already been referenced in class with required readings. Even her teacher admitted he had no idea what book came in.

Another student said his marketing class pack is scheduled to arrive sometime later this week. In addition, by buying the textbook listed in the bookstore as required for the course, the professor informed him the book he bought was the wrong one, and the bookstore had misplaced the text. He then returned the book and was informed that the correct book would arrive "in a while." Many students have faced similar problems: mis-priced books, late arriving case packs, etc. Of course, the twenty-five people-line line at the register was the normal planet.

Currently, I am waiting for books required in one of my poetry class. How many poetry courses are there? One, maybe two? How hard is it to order the books for one class of twenty people? By the way, I think these problems are my job. If the bookstore doesn't have the book, they get to copy someone else's. Maybe when they start looking money, they'll get their act together. If anyone else has a complaint, please drop the Free Press a note. If enough people speak up, things might just improve around here.

Society Mirrors, A Sad Image

The most beautiful woman in the world died last week. I did my fifth grade term project on her. In seventh grade, I published an article of mine for my fifth grade term project, which was figured in my interest group. When I went to college, I played at being a journalist. She was the only one I would marry. I was ten years old then. Her beauty—she was alluringly strong and beauty. Her presence made the world inhospitable to her, and her natural kindness a breadth of fresh air in a sea of stuffy royalty. But still, she was no Mountain dew.

Princess Diana died, she was plastered over every newspaper on our planet. Everyone was writing essays and articles by columnists and editors. Princes Charles was very special, but she did not have the strength, the magic, or the unconditional love of Mother Teresa. One was called "A People's Princess" and the other "The Saint of the Gutter". She was, in every way, the saddest. The contrast in the media coverage about their deaths is sad too. Maybe it is a reflection of our society, of what we value as being more important. Maybe we need to think about changing that.

Challenges in the SGA House of Representatives

Alexander Handy
Thinker and Theorist

Opportunity presents itself when the Student Government Association (SGA) of Babson College (BC) holds elections for Representatives of the SGA House. The elections present an opportunity for change at BC, but the opportunity may pass. Candidates with no leadership ability and no ideas will rise, like yeast in leaven bread, at voting time with their half-witted speeches in front of a crowd of no one but their and their opponents' friends. It does not have to be this way. If a few of BC's intelligent leaders would pull together, the result would be a movement. This student movement would exist instead of the status quo idleness that leaves students unrepresented.

The issues that need solutions are endless. After adjusting to BC too many students see them as a way of life that is unchangeable, rather than ob

SIG Ep Wins Prestigious Buchanan Cup

Edwin Gaines
Contributing Writer

After their first two years on campus, Sigma Phi Epsilon brothers at Babson College have been honored with the school's Outstanding Chapter Award, the most esteemed honor bestowed on any campus organization by the university. The award is presented to superior chapters every two years at a national conference attended by SIG Ep college students, alumni, and world-renowned CEOs. Babson's Jay Rivera and Eddie Gaines were among representatives to attend this year's conference in Phoenix, Arizona.

Chartered in 1956 at Babson College, the Massachusetts Theta chapter has grown over to 200 campus leaders, athletes, and scholars, and has received national recognition as the youngest chapter to win the famous "Buch Cup." This Babson chapter is among many in the country embracing the balanced Man program, a unique concept that eliminates many of the negative stereotypes plaguing Greek Life in the United States. The program is in progress, and each member is continuously monitored by a SIG Ep staff member, joining Sigma Phi Epsilon this month will enter the Sigma stage while those Babson seniors graduate in the Epique stage. The end result is an array of community services, social interaction, academic progress, and personal support — a Balanced Man.

The 1995 academic year marks a significant milestone for the Massachusetts Theta. The university is now realizing a reward for their perseverance as founding fathers, and an inevitable conclusion to their undergraduate years in the chapter. The chapter wishes to thank Kristen Sako, Dean Ford, and Patrick O'Byrne for their continuous support of the fraternity.

Do You Have What It Takes? Professor Profile & Student of the Week

Angelo R. Frumolo II
Features Editor

Welcome back to yet another fun filled semester at the Buchman Baptist Press. As you flip through the paper, you may be asking yourself "Where is the Student of the Week?" or "Did they stop printing that thing about the professors?" The answer is, they are both forthcoming...with help from the readers, the makers of The Babson Free Press.

For those of you new to the Babson scene, we'll start by explaining that each of these columns is basically in-depth interviews with friends and members of the school. They are weekly episodes on an outstanding student or faculty member here at Babson College. Fast Student of the Week and Story of the Week are your chances to meet our current SIGA president, RAS, and athletes. You may also recognize some of the names gracing the pages of the Professor Profile as well. Professors such as Bill Brown, Brian S eta, and Richard Mandle have all been included. Here's the fun part. Previously, both the Student of the Week and the Professor Profile candidates were chosen solely by the editors and writers of The Babson Free Press. Beginning this year, the entire Babson campus is able to submit their choices for these two features articles. All that is required is that the student nominate and describe the qualities of why he or she should be featured as Student of the Week or Professor of the Week. Submissions must be made in writing and may be e-mailed to submissions@babson.edu. Submissions may also be "snail" mailed to the paper. All entries remain confidential.

Behind the Brew: Bermuda Beer Safari

Daniel J. Keefe III
Managing Editor

Over my summer vacation, I managed to get down to Bermuda for a few days. Unfortunately, there wasn't much to do on the island; you just sit on the beach and the beach. Before the first day was over, I got engaged in my favorite activity: the brew hunt. The great thing about a brew hunting country is that everything is now, and even familiar items have a different brew perspective. I visited a variety of different igloos and bars, trying to hit the mother land on exotic, hard to find beers. That is itself a story for another day.

My first brew discovery was a local Bermuda drink called Dark and Stormy. It is a local brew modeled after a popular tourist drink on the island by the same name. Dark and Stormy is a mixture of ginger beer and Gingerline's Rum, a local product of the island. Unfortunately, the brew was not the highlight of my vacation. It smelled like an odd ginger ale but tastes like beer in the most intense way possible. The first touch of your tongue, its intriguing and slightly sour taste, would have had you wanting more.

The next brew is an English ale that can be found in Boston. Ras Rod, as its known as, is a bitter ale. I am afraid that this brew would not be found on the island, but it would be perfect for this particular brew. Essentially, Ras Rod is remarkably bland. Feel free to stop by the Rar Roof on Boynton Street in Boston where you'll find this cl intersection. It is good luck finding it in a store.

Finally, my Brew Safari lead Director of the Babson Free Press, an English connoisseur. At first, he looked at me like a fool, but then changed his mind, impressed, and uneventful. It also knows a particularly obscure invention. Do not knock you don't know.

Health Services has also changed its hours. The new hours are Monday through Friday, 8:00 AM to 8:00 PM with a nurse practitioner available from 9:00 AM to 8:00 PM. Physician and allergy clinic hours will remain the same: Monday, 12:30 PM to 2:30 PM; Wednesday, 12:30 PM to 4:00 PM; and Friday, 1:00 PM to 1:00 PM. Few students were in need of after hours services that it was the consensus of the administration and the director of Health Services that an appropriate and good solution be found. Therefore, the Health Services will be open nights or weekends with nursing available. Other services, continue to call Public Safety at extension 5555. Fine! Life should be as much fun. Learning and fun should be integrated with aspects of campus life.

Socialice nice can be pretty intense. We get to see a fair number of you struggling with these issues. It could help to know that it's normal, but you would not do. “Safer sex” is for real. If you should choose to go it on your own, then be sure that you are fully informed. Use condoms! If you are not sure about the facts, we are available as a non-judgmental resource. Pick This Up Pronto

Kevin Black
A&E Editor

How long has it been since a hip-hop group come out and represented with dope beats, challenging lyrics and fit the entire project on one compact disc. The wait is over. The CRU has arrived. After taking the high and low roads of the music industry, CRU is putting their name on the streets. The release of their underground single, Pronto, showed their funky beats and unique lyrics up front. The first single depicts the fast paced life of the music industry as well as their own lives, past and present. This funky track is supported well by the CRU lyricist Yogi and Chanelle, who have been fighting their way to the top for the early 90's. In addition, Pronto transgressed the underground radio waves and moved into commercial radio which has solidified their arrival above ground. After a half year of prontolishing on the radio, CRU's second single Just Another Case featuring Slick Rick of Children Story fame was released. This single included a combination of Hardcore, jazz, blues, sample oriented beats with laid-back lyrics.

CRU is a combination of Hardcore, jazz, blues, sample oriented beats with laid-back lyrics. Typical east coast hip-hop with a little twist. Some dance beats as well as some hardcore, in the sewer beats make this album and group versatile as well as interesting. Songs such as eastern Plague featuring Ras Kass, Goin' T' Work and Just Another Case depict the plague of the street life dealing with drugs, guns, garbs, economics and the intellect. On the other hand, the hardcore face of CRU appears in songs such as Blunts and Bicycle and That $H$. The creativity of the group appers in the songs Ten to Ten and Armageddon. The lyricists use the names of other rap stars in a very unique way.

Although the album is good, there are some items on the album which they will hopefully improve on with time. Some of the lyrics were straight out of an old school hip-hop movie. However, where the CRU sometimes lacks in lyrics, they will make up for it with their beats. What really keeps the listener going are the clever interludes involving DJ Foot-long as well as several skits that refer to Q-T. The CRU's face is full and smiling.

Boot Camp Clik

Kevin Black
A&E Editor

Be prepared for war because the Great 8 a.k.a. The Boot Camp Clik has arrived. The self-titled album was released in the beginning of the summer and it is still one of the doppest rap albums out. The Boot Camp Clik includes Buckethead a.k.a. the B.D.I. Emcee of Black Moon fame, Stilk N’ Wesson a.k.a. the Coco Strokes, Heihachi Sleekht, and the Original Din Comper. Each member of the crew has personalized themselves as soldiers of war who are prepared to take over the world by storm with their intellect as well as their physical prowess as in and as a group.

After the release of Black Moon's Don't Stage the Battle, Buckethead decided to go solo and assist his fellow Clik members in pursuing their dreams, educating their listeners, and having fun. The Coke Brosda followed with 'The Stage with Dal Shihin which continued the Boss down beats on Black Moon made popular.

Due to lack of promotion and other logistics, the Coke Brosda, Buckethead and their manager, Dru 104, decided to make a change. They canceled their contract with Nervous/Wreck Records and shipped around for a new label. As a result, they decided to open their own management company, Buck Down Management, and was supported by Priority Records. This new deal with Priority gave the Clik the funds they needed to continue their militant style in the hip-hop world.

Heihachi Sleekht released their album Nocturnall which sold 500,000 units-Gold. The Clik was back and firing up for the top of the hip-hop industry once again. Nocturnall was followed by the crossover album Da Storm by O.G.G. This album stayed true to the Clik's goal of spreading knowledge among their old and new street soldiers. What followed was a selection for hip-hop and the Clik.

In addition to showing their individual lyrical skills and boss down beats on their respective albums which lead the street soldiers of the world to constant self improvement and mental stimulation, the Clik has risen to a new level in the hip-hop world. Lyrically, everyone took their rhythms to a new level. Although still preaching the aspects of having fun while self-improving, they also released their strains that has been created by their critics throughout the years.

The most surprising charge was change of their music producer. Instead of relying primarily on the drum less sound of the Beatmasters, they stayed true to themselves and beat down by using piano and guitar riffs as well as scree dance beats to exercise their rhymes and flow for their listener. Also, the humorous interludes of several telephones call the Clik has received over the years can remove some of the seriousness out of the album, but it is still a good balance. Some examples include the "Hard Ride" by Heihachi Sleekht Part II, "Iills Noyz", "Ohshoedae" and "Hijack Your Life". The war has started and the Clik is ready to attack. The King and I

The new Tony Award-winning production of Rodgers & Hammerstein's The King and I, which critics have called "the most ravishing Broadway show you'll ever see," has added a third week to its engagement at Boston's Wang Theatre due to popular demand. The famous musical that the New York Times calls "seductive and spectacular" will now play September 24-October 12.

Since opening on Broadway in 1949, The King and I has been awarded both critical and popular acclaim, and was among the first four Tony Award winners including Best Musical Revival. Mr. Mills originated the role of Anna in this production when it had its world premiere in Australia.

The King and I is one of the best loved musicals of all time, The King and I is Rodgers and Hammerstein's most successful work, with a score, including "Whistle While You Work" and "Getting to Know You, "Hello, Young Lovers" and "Shall We Dance," a new in the exotic and opul-
Women's Tennis Loses a Tough One

By Preem Aithal

On Saturday, in blistering heat, the Women's Tennis team lost their opener to the Springfield Pride 8-1. This was a tough opener for a team that only had four players remaining from last year's team.

But fortunately, she lost the deciding set 6-3.
The second seed, sophomore Katie Blasser, played the most entertaining match of the day as there were numerous lengthy rallies and hard-fought points.

Unfortunately, she too lost two crucial points in the third set, and lost the contest 6-1, 6-7, 6-4.

In Blasser's only win, sophomore #3 Julia Kelting anilihasted her opponent 6-2, 6-3.
#5 Mariana Pargura lost 6-0, 6-0, but she was bothered by a possibly fractured wrist.

In other matches: #4 Cami Edell lost 6-0, 6-1. Mariana Pargura was defeated 6-4, 6-0.

The team lost all three doubles matches as Springfield's net game was too dominant. The number one team of Steel and senior Nicole Schechter lost their match 8-2. The #2 team Kelting and Pargura lost their match 8-4, and sophomore Jordy Corey and senior Cinena Ho, the third seeded team, lost 8-3. In an exhibition match, juniors Amber Hoscok and Irene Hoose dropped their match 8-2.

Coach Bill Cole stated after the match that Springfield, in general, had a very adept net game and that is why they swept the doubles.

Field Hockey Opener

By Preem Aithal

The Babson Field Hockey team finally begins their season today as they travel to Bridgewater State to play a 4:00 PM game.

The team is led by senior captains Kristin Meulendyk and Lauren Sposti. According to new head coach Rikka Bowery, these two are leaders, both on and off the field.

Sposti, this season's haul, was the leading scorer a year ago, while Meulendyk, a midfielder, is known for her aggressive play.

Other players that should be a major factor include senior sweeper Mandy Kent, Kelley Coxmorly (a right midfielder), sophomore midfielder Brandy Prieser, and goaliekeeper Tanya Josie, a junior.

The team lives by the motto "Success is a choice" as they arrived early today for pre-game grueling double sessions on August 24th.

Coach Bowery states that despite their stressful determination and focus, the players come together and focus on success.

The team is relatively young, as they currently have nine freshmen and four sophomores on their roster.

This squad will face a tough, opening schedule as they start off with two road games in the span of three days, one of which is formidable opponent Bowdoin. They then face another tough opponent Middlebury, or next Tuesday at a neutral site.

The team will finally play their first home game against Springfield, who recently converted from a Division II to a Division III program. The game will be held on Thursday, September 18th at 4:00 PM.

Chuck's Tips For Freshmen on studying:

- Don't feel like you have to cover all of your credits in four years. Pace yourself.

I recommend French as your foreign language. The ladies go crazy when they say, "Je m'appelle Chuck."

You can use your Bank-Boston Card to buy stuff all around town. You can even use it to buy books. Personally, I prefer to wait for the movie.

Premonitions: An NFL Preview

Preem Althal
Sports Editor

The NFL season has finally begun and there have been no mercurial surprises even during the first couple of weeks of the season. In the AFC West, San Francisco 49ers' All-pro receiver Jerry Rice went down in the first week, and the Denver Broncos with a torn ACL. In the same game, Steve Young pulled a hamstring another concussion, resulting in another set of rumors that he might retire soon. They have already started the NY JETS' season 2-0, and they have a better record than the Green Bay Packers.

About the Packers. They were unimpressive in their first game on Monday Night Football against the Bears, as they only won 38-24. In their second game, the Philadelphia Eagles shocked them on national TV, winning the game 10-9. Did anyone think that after two weeks, the Packers would have a better record than the Pack?? And what about America's Game? every Monday Night Game, there would have been a better record than the Packers. Let's lose to the Arizona Cardinals in a Sunday Night game. They showed that they are not as good as they thought they were.

Pennant Races Heating Up As Season Winds Down

As mid September draws near, many mlb teams are gearing up for the stretch run at either their division or wild card spot. Let me first begin discussing the National League.

For the first time in a long time, the S.F. Giants could go down as the team that shocked the Dodgers. Currently, the Dodgers have a two game lead; however, with the Giants catching up in the division, Wilson Alvarez and Shawn Estes are both pitching well for the team. The Dodgers have won 23 games (90% for the fifth time in his career), and Jeff Kent has been consistent every week. However, the Dodgers are not slackers. With the big four: Piazza, Mondesi, Karros, and Zellie they are poised to hold off the Giants. Still, the Giants will play more together and win the division.

In the Central, things are heating up for the Pirates and the Astros. The Pirates have silenced all their critics and the Astros have been the dominant team in the Central. With the killer B's (Bagwell and Biggio), the Astros have possible the best one-two punch in the game. And, with solid pitching by Daryl Kile and closer Jeff Phillips, they should have enough fire power to hold off the Pirates. The Pirates are a pesky team with a couple of future stars and some has been; they all get together and have a very good season. In the East, the Brewers have been dominant all year; however, through interleague play, American League teams have found a few holes in the armor. Florida has put much pressure on the Braves but are playing for the wild card. It will be interesting to see the outcome.

In the Central, the small market Brewers are chasing the high-powered Central. What appears to be similar to the NL Central race. The Brewers are playing well, but have nothing to lose. Former Indian Jerome Burnitz has had a good season, Gerald Williams has been huge, and Jeff D'Amico appears to be the ace. The Indians have a lot to lose, but have a high powered and overpaid lineup, including David Justice, Marquis Grissom, Matt Williams, and Manny Ramirez, they have to win. I think that the Indians will buckle under the pressure and the Brewers will come big and take the Central. In the West, The Mariners, with Griffey, Buhner, Martinez, and Rodriguez, have all locked up, however, the Angels with Jim Edmonds, Garret Anderson, Tim Salmon, and Todd Zeile have put together a high powered lineup and have a very good season and will put one last shot to make a run at the playoffs, with Sandy Johnson out for the Mariners.

Well, baseball division races are heating and are getting some very good exposure to some small market teams. It will be interesting to see which teams can pull away and which teams will make up the difference. Whoever these teams are, it will be fun to watch.

Babson Men's Soccer

Loses Opener, 2-0

Joe Senos

In general, a lack of pressure and the unmatched talent of the opponent will make winning any soccer game tough. This is what happened when the Babson Beavers soccer team played Plymouth State College in their first game of the season.

The first ten minutes of the opening half set the stage for the rest of the game. Babson came out of the block playing good defense; however, they never established control of the midfield or put pressure on the PSC goalkeeper. Captain Dan Pucci and Jacques Gossip did their best to establish the midfield, but no two people could accomplish that themselves. Babson's biggest chance came midway through the first half when PSC defender John Jacobson was shot, but did not convert. The goalkeeper cleaned up the rebound with a nice kick.

For all this, going on during the first couple of weeks, here are my predictions:

AFC East: New England
AFC Central: Jacksonville
AFC West: Denver
NFL East: Dallas
NFL Central: Green Bay
NFL West: Carolina
Wild Cards: Tampa Bay, San Francisco, Philadelphia

Looking for a Super Bowl prediction midway through the season.

In the second half Babson came out with a 2-0 lead, as well as a more alert team. The defense was working very well and the midfielders were trying very hard to establish themselves and control the field. Babson played this way for about 15 minutes, but PSC came back and kept clamping Babson. In the second half Babson continued to try to move the ball out of the zone, but it seemed every time the high pace, PSC would be there and kick it back. Dan Pucci initiated two nice plays within the span of two minutes, but it was all
