Controversy Hits Primaries

By James R. Auger
Editor-in-Chief

The results of this week's Student Government primary elections have been tallied, and the final candidates for the positions of President and VP Finance have been announced.

In the race for President, Gerald "Sal" Salvatori was the big winner, garnering 293 votes, or 40% of the ballots cast. Jon "Tex" Michelson prevailed over Steve Riedy with 166 votes (24%) to Riedy's 148 (25%).

Salvatori and Michelson will face off in the general elections next Tuesday and Wednesday in the Trice lobby.

Amy Penniman (216 votes) and Cheryl Nestor (176 votes) were able to edge out Nick Walser (173 votes) in the contest for the VP Finance position.

The voter turnout was extremely low, with only 38% of the electorate showing up at the polls; however, the turnout at next week's final elections is expected to be higher.

Some controversy surfaced during the balloting for the student body, as concerns arose regarding the integrity of the electoral process. According to current SGA President Tom Lapadat, Michelson raised the question as to the potential conflicts of interest in having members of the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) fraternity run the polls at a time when another TKE member, Riedy, is running for office.

Appropriately, local executive board members were witness to several violations of electoral rules by the election officials. These violations include the alleged solicitations for votes on behalf of candidate Riedy at the polling place.

They Found the Right One Baby

By Robert Conrad

When people think of Babson, visions of future executives come to mind; not Rap Musicians. Gary Mulligan, known as "Go-Go-C" in rap circles is changing that. Mulligan is the winner of the "you got the right one baby" contest and the recipient of a $5,000 grand prize to be used for his education. A regular guest on the "Late Night with David Letterman" show, Larry "Bud" Melman visited the school to present the award. Mulligan didn't expect to win the whole thing. "When my friends told me I won, I didn't believe them. I thought they were playing some kind of joke," he said.

A.I.D.S. Quilt

The college has hosted a variety of workshops and lectures on the disease during the month of February. Carol Worsh, Health Coordinator at Babson, organized the efforts to have the Quilt visit Babson. With the financial support of the college and other corporations, the Quilt was set-up Thursday.

Opening ceremonies began Friday morning with the playing of the bagpipes. Wearing all white attire, student and faculty volunteers unfolded segments of the Quilt as the names were read aloud to begin the exhibit. Over 300 volunteers helped make the weekend presentation possible.

Although the exhibit was free, $3,162 in donations were collected to benefit the Children's AIDS Program at Boston City Hospital. The Hospice at Mission Hill and Seton Manor: Babson contributed $3,000, while students, faculty and corporate sponsors raised matching funds totaling $3,800 to date for the Names Project. The John DellaRosa Salon also raised nearly $1,000 to benefit the Names project by sponsoring a cut-a-thon. Marra Taylor, a singer and songwriter performed at Knight Auditorium to benefit the Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt as well.

The exhibition closed on Sunday with the addition of new panels to the Quilt. For some visitors, it was the most striking part of the event. The first panel that was added has a Babson emblem, and the names of three alumni, a student and a Babson employee who have all died during the winter semester break. Also a new addition to the Quilt is another panel decorated with a Babson pennant with the name of Fabianne Curtis, a member of the Class of 1994. She died from AIDS in December.

The Quilt will travel to Tufts University in April, but its impact will be around Babson for awhile. After visiting the Quilt, a Babson student said "It reminds you that you are fortunate to be healthy."

Primary Results

Continued from page one second round of voting in order to offset any skewness in the election returns that may have resulted from the alleged violations of policy. After meeting with the other presidential contenders and the current E-Board, however, Michelson dropped this demand and stated his intent to abide by the electoral returns as they stand. Michelson stressed that he did not believe that there were premeditated attempts to undermine the process, but rather that the problem was a systemic one.

Says Lapointe: "In this whole process, I never believed that there was any intentional wrong doing, but the time that I have realized any discrepancies in the electoral process, I have to investigate it to the further degree possible." At press time, none of the candidates have requested a recount.

PepsiCo CEO Speaks

Wayne Calloway, PepsiCo CEO Speaks on How to Succeed in Big Business

By Michael P. Sepso
Business Editor

On Tuesday afternoon the Hourck Executive series presented Wayne Calloway, the Chairman of the Board and CEO of PepsiCo. Mr. Calloway is the head of one of the largest consumer product corporations in the world, and one that is known for taking aggressive stances against its competitors.

PepsiCo has three main bases of consumer product operations. They are soft drinks, snack foods and restaurants. It distributes its products into the markets of one hundred and fifty countries. Last year it made $18 billion in sales, which it converted into $1.1 billion in income.

Mr. Calloway opened his lecture light-heartedly when he opted to impart on the audience the secret of life, rather than discuss marketing or finance strategies. The secret of life, Calloway said, lies in the soul, the spirit and the essential humanity of each individual.

Calloway then told the audience a story about a manager of a Moscow Pizza Hut named Alexander. The story Calloway said, exhibited the type of character that is needed to succeed in business. Alexander was managing the Moscow Pizza Hut during the coup attempt in the Soviet Union. While the tanks rolled down the streets of downtown Moscow, Yeltsin and the members of the Russian Parliament locked themselves into the Parliament building. As time moved on and the stand-off continued, the Parliament members became hungry. One of Mr. Yeltsin's aides called the Moscow Pizza Hut and ordered three hundred pizzas to be delivered to the Parliament building. Risking what Mr. Calloway described as a trip to Siberia and the loss of PepsiCo's welcome in the Soviet Union if the coup was successful, Alexander took the chance and delivered the pizzas, along with twenty free cases of Pepsi.

Calloway stated that it was his ultimate goal to make every employee of the very decentralized PepsiCo act and feel as though he was the CEO. Calloway then presented what he felt were the six personal factors that determine the difference between success and failure.

The first element, as Calloway stated, is insensitivity to other people, or arrogance which is detrimental to teamwork. This is not meant to take away from exceptional individual performance, however, outstanding individuals are needed for the success of teams.

Playing political games for advantage is anathema to PepsiCo. The company wants to make sure that its employees are not just competitive, but also collaborative.

The second element is responsibility. Calloway emphasized that responsibility is not just about being accountable for one's own actions, but also about being accountable for the actions of others.

The third element is being a good listener. Calloway stressed the importance of listening to others, even if they are not in one's own department.

The fourth element is being a good communicator. Calloway stated that communication is key to success, and that it is important to communicate clearly and effectively.

The fifth element is being a good leader. Calloway stressed the importance of being a good leader, and that this means leading by example.

The sixth and final element is being a good student. Calloway emphasized the importance of being a good student, and that this means being open to learning and growth.

We are now finding ourselves smack dab in the middle of that political, once every four years, phenomenon known as the presidential primary. The centers of attention for this week's Meter are the Democratic candidates. Yes that's right folks, those ever so stunning, infinitely charismatic fellows who have risen up to represent their party. All of them have bowed down, as Democrats are inclined to do, to the pressures of political correctness. However in trying to conform to PC demands, as we shall see, they have failed miserably, as Democrats are also inclined to do.

Let's start with Tsongas; his tragic flaw claiming that he is pro-business. You just can't be supportive of business and of affirmative action, radical feminism and gay rights at the same time.

Clinton on the other hand made a great start in PC politics simply by marrying his wife Hillary. Hillary, a Wellesley College grad, was an ardent feminist and highly regarded defender of liberal causes as a lawyer. When she and Bill got married, she even kept her own last name. This was a great move for Bill in PC perceptions. He married a dominant woman, who was not only a radical feminist, but more successful than he was. However, when Bill won the governorship of Arkansas, the negative political pressure was too much for Bill and Hillary to stand and Hillary gave in and became Mrs. William Clinton, dropping her maiden name. This started a downhill tumble on the PC scale for Bill and culminated in the allegations of his womanizing. You just can't support feminism and keep mistresses at the same time.

Then there are those last three guys. Hart, the working man's man has been in Iowa for so long, he probably doesn't know what PC stands for. Kerry lost any PC standing when he told his les-bian sister early in the campaign. Then there's Brown; "Governor Moon Beams." A believer in crystals and higher consciousness, his mind is orbiting the globe somewhere, too far away to register on the PC Meter.

All of the candidates fail the final, most important PC test of all. They are all straight, white, males. All inclusive, the Democratic candidates get a 1.5 on the meter. Not a very good showing for a bunch of guys who claim to be liberals.

Multiculturalism Threatens Academic Freedom

By Mark W. Underwood

What is the first institution you can think of that should diligently support the ideas of free thought and freedom of speech? Obviously, it is a college or university. Unfortunately, there has been a disease that has been affecting students across the country: multiculturism. Many feel that the indoctrination of programs instituted in the name of multiculturism and diversity present great problems not only on this campus but also on hundreds of other college and university campuses around the country and that it is essential that these issues be addressed.

Multiculturism is an offshoot of the political correctness movement. It is an idea in business to succeed, believe that the curricula in colleges and even in modern high schools should be changed to include culturally correct subjects such as homosexuality, feminism, Eastern and African history, and anything not regarding white, heterosexual males. The result of this deficiency is that new curricula and other such politically correct programs are popping up on campuses all around the country. These classes and programs are draining valuable resources from the core curricula of colleges in order to create a quasi "sensitive" and "ethnically aware" environment, while neglecting the more fundamental aspects of the curriculum. Babson is one of these many schools who advocate multiculturism.

Establish Babson as a Center for Higher Learning, Not a Center for PCness.

Part of your $22,000 tuition goes to a fund the Office of Multicultural Affairs, which "activates to increase multicultural understanding on the campus and fosters an appreciation of cultural differences." (Handbook, p. 20) It is designed to help establish a living and educational environment on campus conducive to the needs of people of diverse race, religion, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientations, and all other such categories. I wish more professors and students would join in this important work.

Babson College also wishes to dictate how you think and act. In the Babson College Handbook (1991-1992) it states, "The values of the community are expected to understand, accept, and work with the cultural diversities in the student body, faculty, by country of origin, sexual orientation, etc., . . . ." Actions contrary to this policy are unacceptable and constitute a violation of the General Conduct provisions in the [Handbook]." The college campus has traditionally represented a forum in which students and faculty could freely express their thoughts and ideas on our college campuses is being put in jeopardy by the multicultural movement. The fear of retribution by administrators has forced students and faculty to refrain from expressing their views on certain topics. Freedom of speech should not be protected more on college campuses than it is elsewhere, not less. While Babson is a private institution, and has the legal right to impose such policies, it has elevated itself above the guidelines set forth by the Constitution onto a higher, more "enlightened" plateau. This is the evil of multiculturalism.

Multicultural ideals are also being foisted upon students in the classroom. The fact of the matter is, the differential pursuit of a multicultural or a more diverse curriculum is in fact detrimental to other facets of academic Emphasis on college campuses is shifting from upholding high academic standards and forums for open debates to creating a culturally sensitive environment. All of this is occurring while our nation's educational system is still graduating illiterate students from high school. Where are the priorities? If anything, the understanding of others should come through the social interaction and not through PC-oriented classes or programs. I know I would learn more by interacting with the student from Bolivia than I would learn from a class which I was forced to take describing the culture and customs of Bolivians.

Babson College is not only a threat to free speech and free thought, but also to the quality and content of the education we are receiving. It is a movement which must be actively opposed by all who still believe that freedom of speech is essential for effective education and democracy.

The names expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of Babson Free Press as a whole.

personal gain in the second factor. Executives trying to carry out personal agendas to propel their careers are often not willing to take big risks, such as to identify a new market, a new customer or a new product. This is the third factor: lack of loyalty. People who are unwilling to take big risks will not take the time to build a new market and it is detrimental to their success.

The fifth factor of derailment is a lack of perseverance. The last is a lack of loyalty to the company. All of these factors stem from personal integrity. Calloway said, Executives need to have an open, honest and frank way of doing business. They need to listen and learn. These factors, Calloway said, are the processes why talented business people fail.

BMA Hosts Pizzeria Uno Advertisers

By Kristen Ferguson

Contributing Writer

The Babson Marketing Association hosted Pizzeria Uno on Monday, March 2, at Leslie Tate, franchise advertising manager, and Lisa Piana, advertising manager, discussed their positions with the company and offered a glimpse into their areas of interest to students.

As many know, Pizzeria Uno enjoys great success in the New England area. Recently, the company opened its 100th restaurant in Newton. Future plans to expand include a greater number of restaurants in the tri-state area of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut with the hopes of reaching more of the market and creating more awareness. Pizzeria Uno restaurants are 50 percent company owned and 50 percent franchisees. The restaurants are primarily located in mid-size cities.

The company currently maintains an 865 million restaurant business and a $4 million retail business through supermarkets. Lisa Piana, an MBA student at Babson, manages the advertising of their retail line. Their retail products, a smaller segment of the company at only $4 million, is being advertised on a much smaller scale in comparison to their restaurants. The company does not wish to cannibalize restaurant sales through the advertising and promotion of store goods. The retail is a secondary market. However, even being secondary, the products hold an 85 percent consumer awareness. When asked if the products would go national, Lisa stated that the company is "taking it one step at a time" with the supermarkets. In order to sell the products across the country, another plant would be needed to accommodate the stores properly and keep up with demand. Their current plant in Methuen could not handle production. New plans for the company include a line of cannolis for the supermarkets and a food service called "Uno Express," which would be similar to the Pizza Hut Express Babson has at the Exchange.

As for franchise and restaurant advertising, Pizzeria Uno has an "In-House" advertising department. Leslie Tate, who previously worked for RCG Labs, is a consultant to franchisees' on how and what to advertise. She aids them in developing ideas and advertisements for their local markets. Those restaurants, which are franchised, received promotions and advertisements from the company but are also permitted to advertise themselves. Leslie and Lisa based their advertising and marketing experience, provided BMA members with valuable information on how to get started in advertising. They explained that an advertising career is difficult, requiring a great deal of hard work and long hours. However, in the end both feel that if it can be one of the most rewarding professions for students. Leslie and Lisa suggested constantly "knocking on doors" for opportunities. The job will not come to you. You must go after it. Juniors were told to think strategically about different advertising positions and told that starting in an advertising agency and then moving to a company would be the most beneficial strategy. Agencies provided employees with a wide range of tasks and give exposure to all levels and types of advertising. Both felt that good verbal and written skills would be a definite asset, giving a student a better chance in the job market.

All together, the night proved successful. Students received knowledgeable insight. Many gained a new appreciation for advertising profession, and were able to interact with students and speakers on a personal level.
Think Before You Vote!

It's your choice, but read on to find out what can happen if you make the wrong choice!

(This article was written 30 years ago, and in no way reflects actions of the current Executive Board.)

We, the student body, need leadership in our government, but we are not receiving it. The officers of student government were elected to their positions because it was felt that they could best represent us, but it is not secret on campus that certain officers are not fulfilling their duties and in fact seem to be doing just the opposite. They cannot truthfully deny this - only last week a proposal formulated and nearly endorsed by some of these "leaders" was put to vote before the student body and received a thunderous disapproval.

Good leadership demands that a leader carry out the will of his followers, and to fight for the enactment of rules and policies that will best serve the interest of his people. We have the men in office who certainly have the potential qualities of a leader, but it seems clear that they are more interested in impressing the administration than they are in representing the student body. I don't think any of us would deny the fact that we need restrictions and regulations for good government, but proposals such as the one last week, if put into practice, could produce only animosity. This is not a feeling that a leader who is thinking of his public's interests would produce, but this is exactly the feeling that was produced.

Student government is an organization which if properly led could wield a lot of power when present.

The Ubiquitous Question of Quality: Is it In The Eye of the Beholder?

By Kimberly Gardner
Graduate Editor

Quality was and still is a buzzword you hear in business today. Even the term TQM (Total Quality Management) has various abbreviations which generally mean the same thing. What does quality really mean? If you ask different people you would receive answers that were very different, but some element of their definition would be similar. I would define quality as a commitment to ceaseless improvement. Others might define it as "what our customers tell us it is, and not what we say or think it is." Quality is multi-faceted, subject to constant change, or "quality can only be defined as it pertains to the task at hand." How would you define quality? Think about it for a moment! You use the term in class, you see it in cases or possibly suggest it as part of a recommendation. You also use and apply quality in your everyday life by trying to improve whatever you do in order to be the best. Whether that's at home or at work, you are constantly trying to excel and to improve your own expectations as well as those of others.

The business environment as well as Babson are trying to improve upon the quality of their services or products to be better able to compete. The question is how to improve the quality of our business? Babson, for example, is presently trying to better the quality of all of its services, whether that's between fellow employees or for the students who attend this college. One step Babson has taken toward this constant quality improvement is that it has specific groups assigned to explore and make recommendations to improve whatever needs to be improved as well as to improve upon areas that we might not consider a problem. Babson has always tried to maintain a level of quality throughout its history. Babson has built its reputation due to its history, Babson has built its reputation due to its quality improvements as well as for the fact that it has a known image for high quality professors in comparison to those of other schools.

For those who are working and those that will soon re-enter the work force, firms are dealing with quality issues. Just think of your particular situation at work and how you might improve the situation and add quality to it. Also if your company is international, think of how you look at quality versus other foreign countries. How similar or different is it, really?

Remember the people who constantly try to better themselves and improve whatever situation they are faced with by adding quality who get ahead and not the person who just sit by and watch. You are a Babson student and Babson has taught you well so get out there and add some quality today!

It's that time of year again folks, the time to see who will be our stu-

Government elections. This year, we were fortunate to have a good Executive Board that tried to cater to students' needs. This was not an easy task, and I think that these members should be applauded for their hard work and accomplishments.

Now we have to keep the mo-momentum going and it is the job of the next Executive Board to build on the progress and create a bright future for Babson. The responsibility of selecting these leaders is up to us.
So, when you vote next week, don't don't vote for the most popular person, or your friend. But for the most qualified person. Vote for the person who you think will do the best job to improve our community. If that person happens to be your friend, that's great; however, if your friend is not the most qualified person, then vote for the other candidate.

This leads to the question of how to tell who is the best person for the job. What I think we should look for is choosing the most qualified candidate is initiative and determination. Vote for the people who have good ideas and are determined to carry out these ideas. Find out what the candidate's goals are and then determine if it is logical for these goals to be accomplished.
Look for sincerity. I don't want to shock you, but candidates sometimes fib about what they will accomplish just to get elected. I do believe, though, that we are intelligent enough to figure out who is sincere and who is just a politician.

Voting for someone to vote for in the candidates is who can work with the administration to get things accomplished. Remember to vote for candidates who can work with the administration and not for the administration. This campus does not need puppets on the Student Government Executive Board. We have filled our quota inside the administration already. I give this warning because I do see the potential for some candidates to be pawns of the administration.

NOTE: If you fail to vote, then you really don't have the right to complain about how things are being handled. Voting can make a diffERENCE in this community. I would like to give one piece of advice to the next Executive Board: Act quickly.
As the present Executive Board can tell you, time goes by so fast, so act crrectly and quickly.

Sincerely,

Tom Broderick

Think back to your Junior and Senior years of high school and your college selection process. If your college search was anything like mine it probably involved visiting a guidance counselor, leafing through theHarbin's Guide, and then hitting the road in search of the perfect high school.
The college visit is an important part of any high school student's selection process because it gives an indication of what the next years will be like. Many times the only personal contact a prospective applicant has with the college is through a tour or visit with a current student. Because this one-on-one contact is so important, the Admission Office relies heavily on the volunteer members of the Admission Assistant Program.
The Admission Assistant Program (AAP) was created three years ago for non-students an opportunity to take an active role in attracting prospective applicants.
The program is divided into four groups, each with its own coordinator.
Campus Tours: Other than handing out maps, paper and pointing out buildings, the college

Mr. Tashjian is a senior majoring in Finance and Investments tour gives prospective applicants a brief glimpse into what it's like to be a Babson student. While on the tour, visitors gain vital information about the college which aids them in their selection process. (I've always advised our tour guides for their unique ability to walk backwards talk without being run over by cars racing up college drive.)

The Ambassador Program:
The Ambassador Program allows students to visit their high school alma mater while home for vacations. While there, current Babson students speak with prospective applicants about life at Babson.
They convey, not only the facts and figures, but also the students' perspectives of campus life. Many times the Ambassadors are the only contact high school students have with Babson. (Coordinator: Kim Mattle)

The Overnight Program:
The Overnight Program gives prospective students an opportunity to experience Babson life first-hand.
Visiting students experience residence hall life, college classes, and interaction with other students while staying with their Babson

host. (Coordinator: Kai Young)

Special Events: Volunteers in this program take part in special requests made of the Admission Office. In the past, such events have included VIP tours, guidance counselor visits, and special group overnights. (Coordinator: Karen

Clinton Addresses Babson

To the Editor:

My campaign for the Presidency rests on the central theme that education is economic development. We can only be a high-wage, high-growth country if we are a high-skills country. In a world in which money and production are mobile, the only way middle-class people can find and keep good jobs with growing incomes is to get a good education.

But with the staggering, soaring, cost of education, students all across the country cannot afford to put off this commitment to education. As Governor of Arkansas, I have not, and as President, I will not allow that to happen.

Empowerment through education means challenging our students and every American with a system of voluntary national services like the innovative and successful City Year program in Boston. In a Clinton Administration, we will offer a domestic GI Bill to ensure that everyone, regardless of income, can go to college, so long as they give something back to our country in return. This program is based on the successful GI Bill, the college assistance program our nation provided to veterans after World War II.

As President, I will ask Congress to establish a trust fund out of which all Americans can borrow money for a college education, provided that they pay it back either as a small percentage of their income over time or as a couple of years of national service, as teachers, health care and social workers, police officers, conservation workers, and the like. The student loan program, which is not nearly as cost-effective as it should be. Students, parents and the country will keep the benefits and the domestic GI Bill will pay for itself many times over. It will be the best money the nation has ever spent.

I understand what it takes to struggle to pay for school -- I did it. But what I do not understand is why, for more than a decade, Presidents Reagan and Bush have ignored the most basic tenet of economic development -- education. A Clinton Administration will not only recognize the value of your brain power, but will also empower you and the country by providing the means for you to put that intelligence to work.

I invite you to vote in the March 10th primary to elect a real "Education President". Join me in this fight for all Americans to reach their potential. To get involved in the campaign or for more information about any of my positions on the issues facing our nation, please call the Massachusetts Headquarters at 617-742-9252.

Very truly yours.

Bill Clinton

Dear Editor:

This letter is being written as a rebuttal to the letter written by James August-Jones regarding his participation in the position of VP Licensing. I know you stated this was not a direct attack on the Vice President's of Licensing in the past, but as the current VP of Licensing I am aching my concern about the opinions viewed on the February 27th issue. Here I am offering my "two cents" to your "two senses".

The Licensing position was referred to as a "5500 a year position utilized to rubber stamp business licenses and approve business fair or two." I beg to differ with your comment on the position.

The Licensing position is used to foster, approve, and monitor all 46 student businesses on campus. This sounds very nice but could easily mean just because my report is the last of the VP's during student government it does not mean it is any less of a position. In fact there is a lot of work surrounding this position. True I am in charge of the two semi-annual business fairs on campus, but there is a lot of planning. I personally send letters to each student business, contacting Building and Grounds, get a sign made, buy materials for the fair, create advertisement, and spend all day in attendance. Sure listed sounds petty, but this is all the nuts and bolts that have to fall into place for this activity to go well. Not only that but this was the first year a fair was set up at a homecoming.

Currently, I am also working in conjunction with the Alumni office on the Student Business Initiative Award. In regards to the licensing process, I do not consider it red tape. We are at school to learn. To make someone fill out the proper forms and create a business plan gives my fellow students practical experience in starting a business. In turn it helps the student business to succeed by making them think of a future focus for their up coming years at Babson and eventually beyond our community.

A perfect example of a business taken beyond the campus was SIH-Storage Relief. After operating successfully for three years the business was sold to another student who has not done a successful job at all. This leads me to my next point of taking the time during both semesters to deal with this major problem. I have received calls from outside businesses who have had bills outstanding due to non-payments from Storage Relief. I have received calls from other students at other colleges regarding the problem of storage problems with this business. Although this is considered out of the realm and power of the licensing position I have helped these people considerably.

The bottom line is that there is definitely enough work and responsibility in this position to require an extra body on the Executive Board. You thought the Executive Vice President should take over this position. From my point of view the Executive Vice President's job is as a trouble shooter for all positions and to help the President in his duties. Bluntly, he or she would not be able to handle both duties without sacrificing other duties and other activities due to the time consumption. So your point of incorporating the duties of VP Licensing with those of EVP is not really legitimate. Maybe this section of your letter may not have ever been written if you just asked Before You Spoke... Cordially,

Future Option

Looking for a job? Not having any luck - join the club. This is the worst year to graduate since the early eighties. That's why grad student school is looking more appealing, if not immediately upon graduating, at least two or three years down the road.

Not only does grad school look attractive because of the job market, but a bachelor's degree doesn't carry it weight like it used to. More and more people are going to graduate school.

Babson students are more likely to go to grad school for a Masters of Business Administration (MBA) degree or a Law Degree. That means one of those awful entrance exams. Remember the SAT? Well, if you want to get into a grad school for an MBA, then you must take a Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT), or Law School, the Law School Admission Test (LSAT).

These Leahinsky Cummings, Director of the Boston Educational Group, states, "Undergraduates in their first year of schooling score worst on these tests."

Therefore, it is very important that you consider taking these tests while still in school.

There are more reasons why students should take the entrance exams while still in school. For one, they are in the study mode and in the test mode. Many people outside of school find it very hard to study for an exam after being out of school for any period of time. Take it while it's fresh in your mind! Secondly, it is less demanding. Most people have many responsibilities in the "real world," including a job and a family. Lastly, and most importantly, the test is good for five years! So even if you have a job upon graduation, don't plan to attend grad school for a few years, why put the entrance exam off?

If you feel you might need some sort of preparation for the exam, there are many useful study books available there. There are study books and prep courses. Some prep courses will even give you a free diagnostic exam to point out your strengths and weaknesses. If you need more information on the subject, consult the Office of Career Services or call me at extension 4756.

Mulikgian Makes a Hit

Mulkigian received the official news that he had won, he was ecstatic. "I thought I had a chance to win, because I knew that Larry 'Bud' Melman liked rap music, but I really wasn't thinking of winning." Besides the monetary rewards involved with the contest, Mulikgian decided to enter the contest to show prove his talent. "I had something to prove, lots of people thought that it was a joke when I rapped. I wanted to change that."

Mulkigian has recently signed with Dannick Records in Miami, and has performed in the Boston area. A native of Chelsea, Mulkigian opened for Run-Dmc in a rap against drugs show and he has performed "Step into the future" with Tech and singer Kai. The song was sold out in three weeks at Newbury Comics.

In his eloquent manner, Melman said, "He was just wonderful and that's why I picked him". Melman recently appeared on Late Night last Friday, but worked in the community before being discovered for Letterman. Mulkigian's rap is part of a talent show, and will not be broadcast. Larry Bud Melman solely judged the contest that reviewed over 1,200 video cassettes from 40 schools but admitted that it was not an easy task. "There were so many to choose from, it was more difficult than crashing through a wall for Letterman." Melman said.

Here we go again. Student Government election time has come. Will people ever stop bitching about the social life here? I am so damn sick of hearing people whine about how there’s never anything to do or that Knight parties get boring after a while. That’s great. I’d rather go to a school like BC and have tons of bars right around the corner from me. Yeah, then I’d get to ride the T home late at night and be able to spend all of my money on beer. I wouldn’t have to put up with seeing the same people all of the time so I wouldn’t have to worry about remembering names and other terrible stuff like that. Give me a break. We have to realize how good we have it here. Student Government can only do so much (and they’ve done plenty this year), the rest is up to us.

Too many people at this school have been handed things all of their lives and it seems that they expect the social life to come up and bite them on the ass before they are happy. What kind of business leaders will we be if we expect the world to come to us instead of making things happen for ourselves. If you want to improve your social life than say hello to people on campus when you walk by instead of giving yourself whipping by looking away. Talk to different people instead of your own little clique. Maybe that way you’ll go out to a different bar or hang out in a different corner of Knight the next time.

Speaking of bitching and moaning, who brought up the ludicrous idea to pave the dirt path going from the library to the hill area? Has anyone noticed that there is a paved path going to the same place not more than 15 feet away? To quote my bocce buddy, “If they paved every path on this campus that people made, the whole place would be covered with asphalt.” Come on folks, there are better things to spend Babs’ money on. People who bring up issues like this are the ones who cause Student Government to look like a whiner’s convention. The blame for this issue must fall on the reps, not the Executive Board. SOA has done a great job putting on events and representing the students to the administration this year. The last thing we need is for this to bring the image of SOA down. Stick it up and walk the extra 15 feet. We could all use the exercise.

Of all the articles I have written this year, none has won me to catch more flack than last week’s. The most common comment I received was regarding my cold and cough. The typical response was “Oh great Bill, as if Tron food isn’t disgusting enough, we have to read about your lung stuff during dinner.” I truly felt terrible for grossing others out during dinner (yes, I am shovelling with both hands now). Actually, I had never heard the term lung butter until I did an activity in a class and coughed some up. One of my group members who shall remain anonymous (Phil Castellini) described it that way and I felt a moral obligation to pass this tome on to you. Thanks Phil.

I also had about nine Columbia students ask me if my comment about humorless people applied to them. In case you missed it, I said something like those who equate their own lack of humor to a sense of maturity are going to live a very lonely and difficult life. Well the rule of thumb on that line is this: if you think I was talking to you, then I probably was. A guilty conscience will always give you away.

By the way, the men’s basketball team 811 in New England and 62 nationally start their NCAA playoffs this Saturday at 2:00 PM. You have to buy tickets in advance because they are only going to sell 1000 of them. Babsy is playing Eastern Connecticut and we need to be there to trash their dreams and hopes. Should Babsy win, they will go to play in New Jersey. In other words, this is their last home game so don’t miss the action. The soon to be sold out in full force and we need your help for the team. See you there.

The Comedy of Nuns

By Kristia Green
Features Editor

The Theatre Lobby in Boston Heights is offering a theatre package highlighting the comedic musical Nunsense. The two restaurants present in the Theatre Lobby in this presentation is The European Restaurant and Paolos Ristorante, both of the North End.

Nunsense is not only an exciting, lively musical comedy coming around, the sister of the nun thing is to put together a benefit to raise money for the burial of four sisters being stored in the concrete freezer. The entertainment ranges from singing and dancing to one-liners by Sister Mother Superior.

Sister Robert Anne is the bus driver and star “wanna-be” in the troop. Her choice to lackluster humor and less than divine stunts has the nuns under the watchful eye of Mother Superior. Her moment comes when she is released from the part of undertaker and allowed to shine on her own—oh and shine she does.

Sister Mary Leo is the aspiring prima ballerina whose humor and naturally good nature keep her other sisters at a respectable distance. Her leaps and lines will keep you laughing throughout the production.

Frequently under the wing of Sister Mary Leo is Sister Mary Amnesia who lost her memory and identity after a crucifix landed on her head. Her character is played to the fullest and her act is full of misadventures and outrageously comic blunders. Her found identity is literally a show stopper.

Sister Mary Hubert is second in command of Mother Superior and is a perfect compliment to the strictness that Mother Superior feels she should impart on her fellow sisters. Her frank humor and unashamedly critiques place her in high regard among the other nuns. Watch out if you don’t fell in the audience though.

Sister Mary Regina better known as mother superior tops off the cast with her connection between her duty to keep the convent humble and her secret aspirations to be on stage as well.

When the nuns are on stage the antics are non stop. There is no set pattern to the comic devices of the show but this format adds to the seemingly spontaneous rehearsals that keep the show rolling.

The show itself is performed in a cozy sized room with the seating in a square around the stage. The intimate style and the coming of the nuns encourages audience participation which makes every show a new one for the performers.

These nuns were as fresh as the first day they began and their enjoyment was evident as that of the audience. Nunsense is a must see!

The dinner/theater package is available from 5:30pm - 7:30 Wednesday through Friday and Sunday after the 3:00pm matinee of 6:00pm performance. The Paolos Ristorante located downtown with the Theatre Lobby, offers a grilled pork loin, lamb, or seafood dish accompanied by watercress or career salad, and bread or dessert. The European located upstairs from The Theatre Lobby offers a free of charge, real gourmet meal (no kidding with their own side dish), as well as soups or salad, beverages, and dessert.

The performance schedule for Nunsense is Wednesday through Friday at 6:00pm, Saturday at 6:00pm and 9:00, Sunday at 6:00pm and 9:00. Ticket prices range from $17 to $25, senior citizens, students and clergy are $1/2 price at Wednesday matinées only. The European Restaurant package ranges from $27 to $35. The Paolos Ristorante package ranges from $32 to $35. Advanced reservations are required. For reservations and more information call [phone number].

Special to the Free Press

Dottie Ingels (Julie Kavner) is pursuing her dream of becoming a stand-up comic, and along the way her daughters, sixteen-year-old Erica (Samantha Mathis) and ten-year-old Opal (Gabby Hoffman), must cope with their single mother’s rapid rise in the comedy world.

Dottie works in the cosmetics department at Macy’s on Queens Boulevard, where her hard sell of beauty products tickles the funny bone of blue-haired bargain seekers. She and the girls live with her Aunt Harriet in a row house in Ozone Park, Queens, New York. Each night, as Dottie tucks her kids in, the bedtime ritual includes doing a sketch about her coveted appearance on “The Tonight Show.” Erica and Opal support the mom in whatever she does—and in whatever it takes to be a star. After all, Miss is the funniest lady in the world, and someday she will be sitting across the desk from Johnny Carson.

When Aunt Harriet suddenly dies (tragically but frugally, at a bargain basement clearance sale), Dottie inherits and then sells the house. With her newfound nest egg, she moves her kids to Manhattan to pursue her dream vacation. While Dottie dives head first into the late-night New York Comedy scene, Erica and Opal must adjust to their new school life, new schools, and new friends.

Dottie immediately begins to break through, and soon gets an agent, Claudia Curtis (Carrie Fisher), an associate of the renowned comedy agent Arnold Moss (Dan Aykroyd). Through Claudia, she meets “the Moss”: as Dottie’s girls refer to him, and her career is put on a fast track. Erica and Opal have always believed in their mother, but now that Dottie’s dream is starting to come true, what feels euphoric to her, feels to her daughters like the worst thing that has ever happened.

Dottie goes on the road to perform in comedy clubs, and before long her daughters are seeing more of their mother on television than they do in person. Instead the girls are entranced by baby-sitters—aspiring comics—who impersonate air conditioners, juggle food, and recite poetry about fish. There are other changes as well. A two-week excursion to Hollywood stretches to one month and unknown to her daughters, Dottie and Arnold Moss fall in love. How dare Dottie follow her heart when both girls still need her so much?

Even an exciting trip to see their mother perform in Las Vegas leaves the girls with mixed feelings. While Dottie was once completely theirs, they must now share her with her adoring public and “the Moss.” But the Ingels family, faced with fragmentation, instead rallies together. They will juggle Dottie’s zooming career with the girls’ coming-of-age needs. They’ll do it together. They’ll do it laughing.

This is My Life opens in New York and Los Angeles on February 21 and begins playing in theaters nationwide in the weeks to follow.

Men's Basketball Gets First NCAA Bid

By Sedge Saunders
Contributing Writer

Two weeks ago, the Beavers travelled to Connecticut to play Coast Guard, who had taken Babson into overtime in their first meeting at Babson in which the Beavers eventually won. Coast Guard played tough and scrappy and stayed close to the Beavers, trailing only by 8 at the half. But as has been the case nearly all year, the locals came out smoking in the second half and buried Coast Guard as they rolled to their 21st victory. Matt Miller and Eric Deliasanta had 18 apiece for Babson and "Gipp" Ragan chipped in with 14.

The following weekend, the Beavers played their last regular season game at MIT. It marked the end of the six seniors' brilliant regular season career. Perrakos, Leip, Fuller, Magura, Ragan and Lambert (who unfortunately had a stomach virus and could not make the game) have given us years of excitement and been through the highs and lows of Babson basketball.

The Beavers didn't want to waste what had been a perfect season by losing to MIT and thus came ready to play. Everyone got to play for the Beavers as they dominated the whole game to what was a fitting end to a great season.

High scores for the Beavers were Deliasanta with 18 and Leipiff with 15. The game also marked the beginning of the many awards the Beavers will be given this year. For starters, Jim Perrakos broke the all-time rebounding record at Babson during the game and directly after he was named All-American. It was the second of two great achievements for the four year starter, whose search for an NCAA playoff berth has ended.

The time is finally upon us. March madness is here and the Babson Beavers are a big part of it. The Beavers, now ranked fifth in the nation, will host the first round of the Northeast Regionals.

The 32 team Division Three NCAA tournament begins this Saturday as Babson will take on Eastern Connecticut at 2:00 pm in Staake Gymnasium. The Beavers, winners of 14 games in a row and number one in New England, begin their quest for the coveted NCAA championship. There are a limited number of tickets on sale, so be sure to get yours early. Tickets are on sale in the Athletic Office in the gym from 2-5 pm on Friday. You may also purchase your tickets at the door but be sure to get there ahead of the 2:00 pm starting time to ensure yourself of getting a seat.

We need a large and hostile crowd in the Beaver dome on Saturday to help propel our Beavers into the next round. Babson has yet to lose at home this year and we'd like to think it has something to do with our great fans. Come out of the woodwork and just go nuts as we show Eastern Connecticut what Babson Ball is all about.

There will be sheets handed out at the game explaining the procedure for which the crowd will follow in order to rattle the opposing team. It's going to be Eastern Connecticut's worst nightmare so bring your enthusiasm and bring the noise. See you Saturday!!
Ski Team Places 5th At N.E. Regionals

By Ingemar Stenmark
Contributing Writer

Last weekend the Babson College Ski Team finished another successful season with the men placing 5th in the New England region. First year ski team members Ryan "Canuck" Ewen and Dave "Rimsie" Menzie, Oz "I'm a thoroughbred" Babson, and Matt "Shot Gun Willie" Mogul played a big role in adding depth to the team which was missing last year. Co-captain Skip "It's my equipment" Dennis started slow but finished strong on his new Volklis. Co-captain Paul "I used to be able to ski GT" Bellucci had trouble staying on chair lifts, but still finished as the top Babson Skier in the division. Jim "Charlie" Castetaro placed well all year long and made everyone want to ski on Volklis. Steve "Chewy" Weir finally shaved and found his times improved on already excellent finishes. Senior Jim "Old Man" Kaplan showed that skiing is not only for the young as he skied fantastic this season. Junior Bill "Fever" Shapiro skied on lunch trays when it was icy and still finished strong. Jim "Tony" Pecore found himself on his face more than on his skis, but was able to finish some runs.

The women's team of captain Essie "Sleeps with Bear" Dollney, Jodi "The Nut" Hankin, and Dawn "Snap Dog" Olson skied well despite their small numbers. The women were able to place fourth in the Thompson Division Race at Killington.

Senior Co-captains Paul Belucci and Skip Dennis would like to wish the team well in their hopes to go to Nationals next year. Also, the entire team would like to thank Coaches Joe Hardy, Jeff Shy and Andy Kostic.

Students Invited To Participate In Seville Expo ‘92

From the ECAC Sports News

Students of ECAC member schools who will be in Spain this summer are invited to participate in EXPO SEVILLE ‘92 through the US Pavilion Sports Program.

A major element of the US Pavilion at Seville Expo ‘92 will be a presentation of how sports are an essential ingredient of American life. As part of this presentation the US Pavilion Sports Program needs people - not necessarily outstanding athletes, but rather people (who may or may not be members of a school team) to give a short demonstration of something to do with sports. These demonstrations may be no longer than 15 minutes and may be on subjects as diverse as throwing a fisher; riding a unicycle; rope climbing; pitching horseshoes; skateboarding; javelin throw or other aerobics; throwing a curveball or stick handling in field hockey or lacrosse; one-on-one drills in basketball; and women’s basketball. Some of the sports demonstrations will be given by high-profile athletes. For example, will give a 10-minute demo on blocking sleds; Kareem will give short demos several times a day of his famous Sky Hook; Gaylord Perry may (?) demonstrate what moisture can add to the delivery of a baseball but ass short fill-ins to these demos or ‘clinics’ the US Pavilion Sports Program wants to schedule everyday people engaging in everyday sports and that’s where the ECAC students are invited to participate.

Interested students are asked to contact Ken Richards, Sports Program Director, at the following address:
Mr. Ken Richards, US Sports Program Seville Expo ‘92, Room 561 US Information Agency Washington, DC 20547 Phone 202-205-2481

Experienced - Please note that the US Pavilion does not have a budget for travel to and from Seville. This program is offered to those ECAC students who will be in Europe and who will be willing to spend a few days (by a week) participating in the 1992 World’s Fair which will draw over 8,000,000 people. When in Seville, Ken Richards can provide all participants with lodging at $10 per night and meals at reasonable prices at the nearby Maroon Air Force Base.

Interested students are asked to contact Ken Richards by no later than March 15, 1992.

Inside The NHL

By Chris Bignell
Contributing Writer

The Montreal Canadiens are the first team in the NHL to make the playoffs this year. They earned three points last week to give them 82 on the year and guaranteed them a playoff berth. Even though Montreal hasn't played its best hockey lately, they are still better than the Quebec Nordiques. The Nordiques have a lot of talent but they just can't put anything together. They are still the only team in the league that hasn't won a game on the road yet this year (0-15-8), even the San Jose Sharks have accomplished that "feat." The Boston Bruins are also playing better lately, going undefeated in their last three games. They still trail Montreal by 13 points in the Adams Division and have a solid grip on second place. All star defender Ray Bourque had his 1,000th career point last week against Washington - his 903rd career game. He joins Paul Coffey and Denis Potvin as the only defensemen to score 1,000 points.

The New York Rangers are the hottest team in the league. They have won five in a row and are undefeated at home in their last 11 games (9-0-2). They lead the league with 88 points and have 10 points ahead of the Washington Capitals by eight points over the Washington Capitals. Because the Patrick incentive for the Rangers hasn't clinched a playoff spot yet, but are in no danger of being overtaken.

The closest team to eight points behind, while the next closest is 13 behind. The final playoff berth in this division is still up for grabs. Only six points separate the fourth place Pittsburgh Penguins and the sixth place Philadelphia Flyers. The New York Islanders are three points ahead of the Flyers. Philadelphia is also on a roll; they have won three of their last four and have closed the gap between them and the leaders to three points after trailing by six last week. The trade with the Pens seems to have sparked the team and they are in the hunt for that final playoff berth.

The St. Louis Blues have also won three of their last four and have claimed second place on the Norris all to themselves, 10 points behind the leading Detroit Red Wings. Brett Hull is one of the hottest scorers in the league right now. He has 17 points in his last seven games. He now has 66 goals and 102 points on the year - he's 939 points shy of the 1,000 point scorer of the year. Former Bruins Craig Janney is Hull's main set-up man. Since the trade, Janney has played 11 games and has 19 points. The Blues, the Blues, and the Chicago Black Hawks will most likely make the playoffs again this year with the final berth coming down between the Minnesota North Stars and the Toronto Maple Leafs. The Stars were atop the division last Christmas - now the lead is only five points. The Leafs have played much better since the trade with Calgary. Doug Risebrough has taken charge offensively and has 74 points.

The LA Kings have won four in a row and are slowly but surely narrowing the Vancouver Canucks lead in the Smythe Division. The Vancouver Canucks lead by 10 points now. Since they acquired Paul Coffey, they have played much better hockey. Wayne Gretzky is also on a scoring spree. He has 17 points in his last six games. The reunion of the former Edmonton Oilers has definitely improved the entire team's performance on the ice. However, the Oilers are keeping pace. They have won their last three games and are only two points behind the Kings. Vincent Damphousse has been the unexpected point-scorer on the team; he leads the team with 73 points. At one point in the season, the Winnipeg Jets were in second place in the Smythe only six points behind the Canucks. With the injuries hit them and a major slump has put them into fourth place in the division fighting for a playoff berth with the Calgary Flames. The Flames are definitely having a bad season. In the last five or six years, they have finished either first or second in the division, have gone to the Stanley Cup playoffs, and have won once. This must be one of those "rebuilding years" teams have every so often - especially when they play poorly for no reason.

Mike Cotoia

Dear Editor:

Hi there! My name is Mike Cotoia and I am going to be running as a write-in candidate for Executive Vice President for SGA. I will make this concise and informative. Before I do this, I want to thank Marc and Mike for all the good luck in their run for EVP. I am currently the Vice President of Finance for the Class of 1993 and like many of you, I have made Babson my home away from home. I am not going to waste your time delivering promises that I will never be able to keep. What I can promise you is that I will put my best foot forward as a representative of next year's student body. I spent 99 percent of my time here on campus and witness what is going on for campus life. I liked what I saw this past year. SGA did an excellent job of keeping more students on campus by delivering successful events throughout the year. If elected to office I will be working closely with the President as well as the other members of SGA, will focus my time on helping out any other officer who may need assistance. There is no I in team and if we work well together we can have a great year. I also will be a liaison between the students as well as the faculty and administration. One project that I will focus deeply on is getting alumni and parents more involved with the students. Our Babson experience should not be confined between the bricks and mortar of the school. We should expand our learning to the outside which may benefit us in the future. We should get the parents and alumni more involved with our lives here at Babson. I am not saying that I want my dad going to Knight Auditors with me and then to B-2, but there are events where "relations" of the Babson community should encounter. Please feel free to ask me any questions when you see me around campus because I'll be glad to answer them. And please don't forget to write-in Mike Cotoia for EVP on March 10 and 11.

Sincerely,
Mike Cotoia

Marc Spector

Dear Editor:

Howdy Y'all, my name is Marc Spector and I am running as a write-in candidate for VP Social. As a member of the Sophomore Class Steering Committee, orientation leader, and voice of Babson Basketball, I feel that I have the leadership ability, creativity, and vocal cords needed for the job.

Most of you are probably asking right now why did you decide to run so late and become a write-in candidate? I believe that every one of the candidates running can do the job, but I think that I have a lot to offer VP Social and Babson College. My determination, enthusiasm, and hard working attitude will make me the 2 legged 2 gun.

Did an excellent job last year and I plan to continue it with more flair, new ideas, and good times at B-2. I will not promise you things that I cannot deliver, but I will promise you that I will do the best job to my ability.

If elected next week I will work with Y'All to make Babson not only the best academic school around, but a pretty darn fun place too. I feel one problem is that many people leave campus every Friday departing for either schools or even home. It will be my job to keep those people on campus so we can rock 'n roll the house Y'all!

Remember a vote for me is a vote for you. Write in Marc Spector and elect Spect for VP Social.

Sincerely,
Marc Spector
