State Representative Walsh Speaks

There once was a farmer who hired a Negro worker. Planning on eight hours of work, the farmer was amazed when the work was completed in six hours. He thought that he had hired a truly exceptional worker. On the following day, the worker did six hours of work in three hours. The farmer was astounded. On the third day the farmer gave the Negro an easy job which he could retail, picking apples from the orchard and setting up three folding chairs for feeding him sitting in front of three very small piles of apples. Determined to find out what had happened with this opening story, State Rep. William W. Walsh, a member of the House Economic Development Committee, spoke at a meeting of the Massachusetts Industrial Council, Thursday evening, Mr. Walsh's day begins at 5 a.m. when he leaves his home for Boston where he arrives at 6:30 to prepare for the day's work. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, Mr. Walsh sits on the Labor and Industry Committees on Wednesday he participates in the Committee for Business and Industry.

The so-called "Lie Detector Bill" was the main topic of the discussion. This bill, after being voted out of the Committee on Labor and Industry for three years, was finally approved by both houses of the legislature. The bill passed the Senate this week by a vote of 26-0, in the House, the bill was passed by a vote of 107-0.

Mr. Walsh spoke on the bill, as the legislation is designed to aid industry by helping it to operate within the legal process. Why is this new law necessary? The 1965 law referring to this problem stated that the lie detector tests could not be used for the purpose of eliminating employees unless the employee voluntarily consented to it. This, however, poses the employee in a position where he must either volunteer or be guilty. Under the use of the lie detector, persons representing themselves to be guilty until proven innocent by the machine, infringing upon the rights of the individuals.

Discussing the provisions of which bills are passed, Representative Walsh mentioned that Massachusetts is one of the few states where there is the "Right of Free Press.

It is the right anywhere anyone where he believes that "there is a need for a certain law, can have his State representative file a bill in that individual's name. The bill is then assigned to the ballot and read the second reading of the bill is passed by the House. The bill then goes to the Senate where it is read and debated. If the bill is passed in both houses, it is sent to the governor. The governor then either signs the bill or veto it. If the governor vetoes the bill, it can be overridden by two-thirds of both houses of the legislature.

The bill is then sent to the governor for veto or override. If the governor vetoes the bill, the legislature then has the option of overriding the veto by a two-thirds vote in both houses. If the governor signs the bill, it becomes law.

The Lack of Government Accountability

The bill also states that the bill is to be read into the record of the House and Senate, and then debated. If the bill is passed in both houses, it is sent to the governor for veto or override. If the governor signs the bill, it becomes law.

The bill also states that if the governor vetoes the bill, the legislature then has the option of overriding the veto by a two-thirds vote in both houses. If the governor signs the bill, it becomes law.

WHAT IS A NEWSPAPER

By Jim Bishop

A Newpaper is an organized collection of news and information. It is made up of articles, stories, and pictures. It is written and produced by professionals called journalists. The newspaper is printed and distributed to readers.
How to Get More Out of Life

Why do people get into a rut? Because they don’t know that a little energy and a little imagination can make their opportunities for fun so much sweeter, or even a lot sweeter, than the chances they’ve been expecting in the country with your spouse?

1. Plan a surprise for your man or date...or your neighbor. Give him an inexpensive little gift today—just because it isn’t his or her birthday. Amy Vanderbilt, probably the foremost authority on manners, calls such presents “gifts of love.”

2. Don’t give up old friends, but do try to make new ones—to gain the stimulation of fresh viewpoints and new ideas. Talk to five new people from the cop on your beat to a new neighbor to a stranger and never-ending meet at church. But be sure it’s at least novel, if not exciting. They’re all unusual, you just have to find them and “grab hold.”

3. If you want to do some cultural travel, there are many opportunities that are free or inexpensive. The library, the art museum, the symphony, the theater...the list is long. Be on the lookout for your new experiences. They’re all around you, you just have to find them and “grab hold.”

4. Improve your posture. Though you may not realize it, how you carry yourself affects the way you feel. Many occupations, especially that of housewife, involve habitual, restless overstrain of muscle groups. For example, many women stand to iron clothes when they could just as easily sit down. According to Dr. James J. Schiffer, of the Health Education Council, such strain induces muscle fatigue, and this is expressed in poor posture, which may give symptoms of foot trouble or backache. You’ll feel better if you “stand tall” and sit down.

5. Establish one hour each day for yourself to read, get some exercise or just sit and rest, or do something you enjoy. Everyone needs a little privacy, yet few people allow them- selves the opportunity for it. Right now is the time to squeeze a P.T. (Physical Therapy) session into your schedule. Develop the sense of humor: learn to laugh at yourself, as you’ll become more self-objective. According to Dr. George P. Lehner, clinical psychologist at the University of California, the person who laughs at himself reveals a certain awareness of his own foibles and idiosyncrasies, a sense of humor prevents us from taking ourselves and our problems too seriously.

Turn your chores into chortles If your club is faced with the gloomy prospect of a fund raising drive, for example, look for a way to make the project fun. Remember, most people want to have fun; it usually takes just one lively person to get a group going. Ask yourself what you’d kick out of—then get the rest of the members interested. An afternoon-night show might be a fun-filled answer to the money-raising problems.

If it works, don’t ask why.

At the 1963 stockholders’ meeting, Arjay R. Miller, President of Ford Motor Company, emphasized the Company’s far-sighted recruitment program and its impact on the management talent:

"Obviously, our long-run future will be determined by the development of our management. Here, everyone of us—at all levels of supervision—recognizes this as his most important function. Since 1946, the programs of recruitment and training have been blended to give us the required combination of tight administration and creative scope.

"Under a carefully conceived management development program, we try to gain the best personnel available, both in training and experience. Once we get them, we have a program for giving them varied opportunities and increasing their responsibility. This programs are in force in all parts of the Company—in manufacturing, finance, styling, engineering and marketing."

"The programs have developed a real depth of management talent in the Company, and we are dedicated to seeing it continued and reinforced. Because of this, I feel not only very fortunate in being associated with this management group, but also very confident of its long-run success. We know our goals and how to achieve them."

AMBER "BOO-BOO"

The amber parking lights which are now standard equipment on new cars could well be the biggest safety "boo-boo" of the year, say safety officials. Their findings come as a result of a hard road survey.

At dusk, when motorists drive with their parking lights on it is virtually impossible to tell if a car is going away or coming straight at you.

At a distance, red tail lights and amber parking lights cannot be distinguished from each other and the situation can give a person a false sense of security. He can think he is merely at the tail-end of a line of cars when, in reality, two cars can be on a collision course.

Charles Hosts Man and Superman

George Bernard Shaw's brilliant comedy, "Man and Superman," opened at the Charles Playhouse as the fourth season of the resident professional theatre, will feature a cast of noted Broadway performers, Frank Supplee and Michael Murphy have announced.

Directed by Michael Murry leading roles in the Shaw play will be played by Patricia Cuts as Ann John Cunningham as Tamet; William Roerick as Roettger as2 in "The Matchmaker," and in the Peter Ustinov production "The Liquidator." Maura O'Brien as Valdr, and Christine Thomas as Mrs. Whitle.

Well-known British actress Patricia Cuts has been seen on Broadway in "Show Boat" and "Porgy and Bess." John Cunningham has been seen on Broadway with Judy Holliday, and was the first American to play Higgins in "My Fair Lady" for the National Tour.

William Roerick's extensive career has included performances on Broadway in "The Matchmaker," "Porgy and Bess," and "Romeo and Juliet." He is also well-known as a "Porgy and Bess" production this year. Others in the cast are James Haggard, Robert Reed, and Edward Hitchcock.

The scene of the story is for the most part the interior and grounds of a large southern mansion, and the color and setting brings this out well. The characters exemplify the gentility and elegance of people who are trying to obtain a high station in life through inheritance rather than by their own wit and right. Although it is a drama, the story is set on the good side of Big Daddy and is so obvious that they desire to be dignified in their behavior. A touch of comedy is that refreshing at times when the story seems to be lagging. The added help to hold the audience's interest.

The setting was well arranged by students and faculty members. Several faculty members also took in the movie. The movie series has become so intense that it is now difficult to look forward to the next movie. The audience is waiting and enjoying both the showing of the movies and the content of them. The quality of the shows and the setting has been growing.

Walking up to Coleman or on the path to the smaller main park, we can notice the grounds crew is even more evident. They do the job for them naturally.

BY YOU KNOW WHO

The story takes place in the year 1946. We have been having sure have been having every week a new look to our own living room. Windows, all we have seen it rain and snow. This is the life we can comfortably discontinue, but to those of you who naturally get that week-end, it is not necessary. You can get back in again to have those same windows in the week-end. The story has been swell. "The doctor does not die" by John Dos Passos, is an important book. Reading this, you can see the main characters of this book. It is about an American who has tried to get into town to see "From the Joads", and has been turned away. The cause of the long seemingly endless lines of people waiting to get tickets may now find that the extra wait in get in can be filled by crossing the street and visiting Cohn's restaurant. This has long been one of the most enjoyable places. It was a place where within the student's budget, and the food was really good. A cup of coffee with that food is not a luxury, but a goodiloribear.

Spotlight on the Sinai Club

In any organization with a connection to religion, there is always a religious group who you have the problem of balancing those values with the social activities. The problem is whether or not the purpose of the club and be club membership, and if so, how to maintain the balance.

The Bahamian Institute Sinai Club is addressing this problem and seems to have solved it nicely. It is a growing and growing club with flexibility and opportunity for members to be exposed in the areas of primary interest to its members. A healthy balance is kept between religious devotion and social activities so that none of these contribute factors with the others. In this way it is hoped to provide opportunities for the religious members for the membership.

Recently the Sinai Club has been sponsored by the college and 2 days of special activities and events in the Fo’zole, Mr. Irving Kaskowitz, J.J. Fulford, and of course the students who have been conserved and involved in the discussions and the programming. The club has been featured in the Fo’zole as a part of the educational excitement and to encourage the students. The students have also enjoyed the discussions and the activities. The students have learned to appreciate the challenges and the successes of the discussions.

Mixers, parties, and events for the club have been especially planned by Mr. Irving Kaskowitz. Although it is not primarily socially oriented club, the Sinai Club has a key role in the college program by sponsoring these special events, such as parties and events for the students. The students have become almost a traditional program since no object leaves hungry. Through December, the Sinai Club has a national group of college clubs which attract the students, members of the club and their friends to the benefits of that organization. There are conferences and conventions sponsored by the national organization, as well as summer camps and other such activities.

Operated under the able leadership of Mr. Irving Kaskowitz, the Bahamian Institute Sinai Club has grown in influence and recognition. With the more organized programming on campus, it is still in the development stage and needs the support of dedicated men with new ideas and energy to be able to be a rewarding experience for those of those members who volunteer to be involved in the programming, such as events on campus.

The Blue Line

BY VERNON MILHAU

I've been working out with 279 minutes in penalties. I've been in jail a few times. These are not the only times I've been in trouble. When I started playing pro hockey, I used to drink a lot of beer. This was the statement that St. Louis, Indiana Howie Young made to the press a few weeks ago. Now he has been suspended from action for five games for a brawl that erupted in Chicago.

Young quit school at the age of thirteen and began playing hockey for money. Now he feels that his life depends upon the game. He says that he is afraid of losing his job and that the game is his only way out of the pool. Yet, I can’t help wondering whether he is giving his excuse for his action on the ice.

We were playing in Chicago and Howie Young was again involved in an incident after a game last year.
