

The New Dilemma

By Roger W. Babson

Published by the Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, 1934

Babson writes this book to argue that the current administration under President Roosevelt's leadership is not consulting the most knowledgeable source to find ways to alleviate economic problems. Instead of politicians, Babson argues that experienced industrialists are the people whose advice should be sought to alleviate unemployment and other plagues, as industrialists have created successful businesses. Chapters include "Capitalism or Capitolism" and "Fake Patent Medicines."
