

Washington and the Depression: Including the Career of W.N. Doak
By Roger W. Babson
Published by Harper & Brothers Publishers, New York, 1932

<http://babsc.iii.com/record=b1084701~S0>

This book is the third of a series Babson wrote to help business employers and employees with regard to the government and national economic condition. By showing what happened in the collapse of 1929 and showing what can be done to restore wealth and prevent any similar catastrophe from occurring in the future, Babson presents a hopeful outlook during a difficult time for Americans. His optimistic, proactive attitude intends to uplift the reader and illuminate the nature of the depression crisis.

Babson College Archives copy: Gift of Utopia College Library in Eureka, KS, to the Babson College Library
5 x 7 1/2", blue cloth cover, 296 pp.

Archives
HC
106.3
B33
1932