FROM THE EDITOR

This BABSONIAN, as are all yearbooks, is put together with a great deal of effort by this staff as well as the consciousness and existence of an entity known as the Babson Experience. But where these pages may differ is in that there is something different that this BABSONIAN is expressing. First, that we, the community at Babson, do not exist in an ivory castle without Nixon, Patty Hearst, gas lines, South Africa, Wall Street, and the gold standard. Second, being a business school, we are involved in the world on a realistic level. Third, that hopefully this BABSONIAN is a representation of our institution which integrates college and world, hence the newsworthy cover. Finally, this book brings you a sense of humor by which realism and compromise may be seen in a sane perspective.

To the office of Public Relations I would like to extend my thanks for cooperation and service through out the creation of this book. To the BABSONIAN staff your reward follows this page, thank you. To the class of 1974, may you look back at these pages and see the reflection of both your college and world. To the future graduates of Babson, may the college present these values to you — an education worthy of four years, a depth of personality, and a sense of humor by which to enjoy all of the above and whatever may follow, i.e. life.

Sincerely,

COVER STORY:

Over the past thirteen years, Babson has changed more than ever before in its history. This period has been President Henry A. Kriebel’s term in office. It is no coincidence that President Kriebel has had to deal with problems he “Never knew existed before.” Prior to his position of president, Henry Kriebel was dean of faculty during the preceding five years and professor of accounting here at Babson fifteen years before being dean of faculty.

There is no question as to the influence this singular man has had on every phase of the college. Academically, President Kriebel has seen the school develop from a three-year institute to a four-year Babson College. He has had to contend with much controversy over the liberal arts program, but he feels sure that it does have general acceptance. He feels strongly that whether a person completes the program in the normal four years, or accelerated program of three years, college must remain a personal path to obtaining a complete education. While serving during his presidency, Henry Kriebel maintained his objective of keeping the curriculum flexible, but always characterized as “institutional training of men and women for management positions.”

Another critical area of concern, especially over the past decade, has been rising costs. President Kriebel’s efforts in this area have been directed toward keeping prices down as much as possible, and still operating as a profitable institution. As a result, we compete with many larger colleges and universities during a period when other small private colleges have met head-on with forced bankruptcy. Our student body continues to reflect our moderate growth rate, and our financial position is quite acceptable.

It has always been Henry Kriebel’s uncompromising optimism that has led Babson so successfully. His accomplishments have shaped Babson’s profile enormously. During this period of explosive social changes in the world, President Kriebel has led us to our current position, and we look good as we stand.

Under the authorization of President Kriebel, we have begun to realize the Master Plan that has brought such physical changes as the new educational center that was dedicated this past fall, the new road system, and the three new dormitories: Canfield, Keith, and McCullough Halls. Another major change under Henry Kriebel’s administration was the change to a coeducational student body. Obviously it is impossible to enumerate all that President Kriebel is responsible for; it is more than evident that he has been the backbone of the college for these past years which he has given to Babson.

As President Kriebel looks to the future, he hopes to see Babson reach the projected maximum of fifteen hundred students, thus keeping Babson a small, private school thriving on basic philosophies, adapting to the world.

As he leaves this most important position, he plans to let things take their course at Babson. He hopes to return to teaching because he thinks of himself as a teacher by trade.

The 1974 BABSONIAN is dedicated to Henry A. Kriebel for his enthusiasm as president and his unselfish efforts towards Babson and the people he has helped throughout his affiliation here at Babson. With sincere gratitude and particular praise, we the staff of the BABSONIAN wish you, Dr. Henry A. Kriebel, happiness and success for the dedication of your life to Babson College.
SEPTEMBER 11, 1973 — Babson enrolls a record of 380 freshmen and new students. This brings the total of undergraduates up to a record high of 1,000. Enrollment in the MBA program is also the largest ever.

SEPTEMBER 11, 1973 — In Chile the armed forces and national police ousted the Popular Unity Government. President Salvatore Allende Gossins died from an alleged suicide, rather than renouncement.

SOC CER:
This year's soccer team did even better than last year! It was quite a challenge for the Babson Beavers to follow their 13-2-2 record of the previous season, but they went on to have the first undefeated soccer season in the history of the school. Captain Jim McGuire attributes the team's success to the team effort put forth by each of the players and to second-time, coach-of-the-year Coach Hartwell.

The senior members of the team were Alex Nweela, Aram Hintlian, David McCullough, Bob Hartley, Gary Cohen, and Captain Jim McGuire. Each of these men brought experience and determination to every match. It was this type of sportsmanship and aggressiveness that brought us victories, even against the toughest opponents. Game highlights of the season were Boston College, a tough 2-1 victory starting off the season, University of New Haven, Norwich University, United States Coast Guard and the last game of the season, when the tension and excitement was at its height, Holy Cross College; after which Babson celebrated its first undefeated season.

The most-valuable-player award went to James Powers, a junior who will be playing on next year's team. The most-improved-player award went to Stephen Balicki. This season produced three N.E.I.S.L. all-stars: Dennis Donahue, out freshman goalie, Mark Barry, and Dale Hollingsworth. Hollingsworth and Barry were also elected to be next year's co-captains of the team.

It is no wonder that the Babson team was Division II champions and winners of the coveted Sampson Trophy. The entire Babson community congratulates Coach Hartwell on his second consecutive season as New England College Coach of the year; and the Babson Beavers for working together to bring us our first undefeated season.
Most-Improved-Player Award: Stephen Balicki
Tiger Award: Alex Nweeia
Most-Valuable-Player Award: James Powers
New England College Coach of the Year: Coach Hartwell
Best Small College in New England Team-of-the-Year Award:
Sampson Trophy, Division II champions, N.C.A.A. Playoffs.

Taking Aim:
How Old We Really Are

by Harvey Fireman

Look at a copy of "Dick and Jane", or maybe the first newspaper you read: "The Weekly Reader" or "Highlights for Children". Only subtle differences are obvious. There might be a few Black and Puerto Rican faces to appease the liberals, but not enough to antagonize the racists. Dick and Jane still run with their dog, Spot. The "Weekly Reader" still prints simplified versions of complicated issues. And "Highlights" still publishes crossword puzzles for first graders. Basically though, the books, magazines, and newspaper we read haven't changed.

The games they play are the same ones you and I played. Sure, there are slight differences. The rules and language might be a little foreign. But still, it's the same.

Did you ever tell a kid to "Cut it out!" when you wanted him to stop doing something? You can bet he'll snap back at you "But I don't have any scissors." It's the same answer we gave.

When I was a kid, and wanted to challenge someone on a point of information I'd ask "How much do you wanna bet?" And then, before my opponent had a chance to answer, I'd say "A million dollars?" Well, kids still say the same thing, without any conception of what a million dollars is worth—or used to be worth before Nixon took office. But that's another story altogether. The questions and answers are the same. They don't change.

Maybe some of the problems are more serious than years ago. A few kids might have moved from booze to pills, or from cigarettes to pot. But for the majority, it's the same as when we were kids.

If there are any differences to be noticed, they're subtle ones. They're not readily apparent to the eye. Certainly, it's not the kind of thing you would notice or think about every day. When you finally do think about it, you realize that it's been many years since we played these same games, and how old we really are.

WHAT HAPPENED?

Lovingly Yours,
Uncle Mac
Dear Uncle and Rahul,
You guys talking about the same meal?
Dick

Dear Saga,
Last nite's performance was an absolute smash. The holiday spirit was truly there. I hope the quality and excellence displayed last nite will usher in next semester. I want to wish Mom Saga and her crew, as well as the rest of Baby, a very merry and happy holiday season. 'Til next year,
Love,
Ms. Santa Claus

Dear Richard,
What's the story with the NAVELS, oranges, that is, the ones you're serving now look 10 years old.
When will you get more?
Sincerely,
Anita Bryant
"Come to the Florida
Sunshine Tree!"

Dear Anita,
The story with the navels is they're not Navels but Temples.
The Navels are very high right now because of the truckers' strike.
We'll return to Navels when their price returns to the normal range.
Dick
P.S. How's your orange bird?

Dearest Dicky-poo,
A dog came strolling by the window at Trim and it wouldn't even eat the gruel you denoted as beef stew.
Love and smacks,
Uncle Al
P.S. Raw carrots belong in the relish tray, not in the beef sludge.

Dear Al,
What did you say her name was?
Dick

Tricky Dick,
I don't know what took longer on Gourmet Nite — the wait in line or the three hours trying to chew the steak.
What happen?
Dixie

Dear Dixie,
Are you sure it was the steak you were chewing for three hours, or some of your words?
Dick
P.S. Sorry about the lines!

Dick,
The roast beef was terrible, the potato uncooked, and the ice cream tasted like a camel's armpit. Improve things or may the fleas of a thousand camels infest your nasal passages!
Rahul of Bayonne, and
Omar the Tentmaker
Dearest Dickie,
Congrats on the new improved weiners.
But don't let it go to your head, perfection must be sought. Send for my new book: "69,000 Ways to be Perfect — Without Being Awake"

Love,
Uncle Mac
P.S. Leftover greasy fish chowder??!!!
P.P.S. Yeech!

Mr. Metzger:
Everyone on our table right now agrees that next Gourmet Night we want chilled salad forks. Warm salad forks are tacky.
Graham Kerr

Dick,
Get the sand out of your clams!

Dick,
Are we ever going to have Big Niles dinner? Like to see it.
The Berger Miester

Dearest Dick,
There must have been a mistake, as I was actually able to eat the entire thing.
Don't let it go to your head, though, as there still is no Dewars or Budweiser dispensers. Get with it!

Uncle Mac
P.S. The greasy fish chowder isn't too bad. Eat it today, wear it tomorrow. Besides, it matches my greasy T-shirts.

Dear Dick,
Dinner reached another fabulous peak of perfection.

Your loving Uncle Alex
This year's hockey team experienced a losing season, with a disappointing 8-10-1 season's record. Next year promises to be a stronger season after building up the defense. The team began by taking five out of six this year and then the vacation came; this hurt, nearly a month of practices were scrapped.

Leading scorer was Jim Powers, defenseman, who was closely followed by next year's captain, Jim Irwin. The most improved player was Scott Freitag and the co-captains Aram Hintlian and Joe Mahoney did well to keep leadership and cohesiveness throughout the season.

With recruiting success and hard practice, the squad promises to be strong and successful during the competitive season.

FINAL RECORD 8-10-1
SWIMMING

The swimming team continued its recent success this year, finishing with an impressive 8-3-1 record. The team also competed in the Coast Guard Relays and did an outstanding job, placing fourth.

Leading scorers were Craig St. Amour, and freshman John St. Amour, junior Jeff Castle, and sophomores Brune Levering, and Paul Gelinas. Gelinas and Gary Troutman added substantially to Babson's success. Each diver improved tremendously and put in many hours of practice.

Craig St. Amour represented Babson at the N.C.A.A. college division championships in Long Beach, California, where he swam outstandingly against the best college swimmers in the country.

The team's successful season was due to a hard working nucleus of men who helped throughout the year. Men like Dave Porter, Grant Kehres, John DiSesa, Rich Walker, and Rich Braerman were integral parts of the total team effort.

Co-captains Craig St. Amour and John Kelley each had their best seasons. John has been on the team for four years and contributed leadership as well as excellent swimming. Craig was leading point scorer and will return next year again as co-captain with Jeff Castle.

Hear me roar
In numbers too big to ignore.

On the college’s sporting scene, Craig St. Amour was named All-American for the second year in a row, Robert Hartwell was named Coach of the Year, by the NEISL, for an unprecedented second time, Rod Anderson named the Senior Athlete and Bob “Dixie” Johnson won the Super-Athlete Contest.

Certainly one of the highlights of the past semester at Babson was the opening of the new PUB. The Beaver Brau provided Babson students with the opportunity to expand their social life, otherwise known as getting bombed.

The hard work and dedication displayed by Debbie Amidon on so many phases of the campus life over the past year are so much appreciated by the entire Babson community. Ms. is currently working on the creation of a student union for Babson students.

Lance Winchester survived a long, harrowing year as co-manager of the Dry Dock, and was pleased to have been in charge for the Dry Dock’s first painting since its construction.

Many students at Babson this past year took part in the numerous social events put on by the school’s social committee. Mike Lee, Jack Tilton, and the other members of the Social Committee certainly made a major contribution to the good life experienced by the past year’s students.

The introduction of the artistic expression in the form of sculpture to the Babson landscape was one of the many additions to the physical campus this past semester. Mrs. Griffiths deserves a great deal of credit for bringing the sculpture to Babson.

Playing the role of crowd pleaser proved to be no problem for Babson’s Mr. Everything, Dr. Norman Govoni. When called upon to chug a beer in celebration of his award as Professor of the Year made at the Blue Key Banquet, Dr. Govoni downed the beer with no hesitation to the delight of the crowd.
The STREAKING epidemic this past spring did not by-pass Babson... Just ask the girls in South, who were treated on a number of occasions to the sight of naked Babson boys running through the dorm halls. The girls threatened retaliation in the form of an all-female streak, but, to the extreme disappointment of the April Fool’s Day crowd, the threat never materialized.

Scheduled for publication in the next Ripley’s Believe-It-Or-Not is the true fact (believe it or not), that STEVE BERG, who came to the college in 1971 at the tender age of 16, received his BS and MBA in the same afternoon at this year’s graduation services. Steve is now an aging 19-year old and is planning to marry this October.

The success of the past year’s MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY YOUTH FAIR was due in large part to outgoing president of the student government, Bob Johnson. Bob was a dedicated president and will be missed in the year to come.

The Babson Mounties, otherwise known as SECURITY, have never had it better. Not only can they look forward to ruthlessly dishing out $5 tickets each day, but, also, playing state trooper on the college’s new super highway. In order to ensure that the mounties were properly equipped for the hazards of patrolling such a large-sized road, the college saw fit to aid the men with their newest toy, the notorious Cushman three-wheeler.

The college is pleased to announce that this commencement was marked by the graduation of the INITIAL FRESHMAN CLASS of WOMEN to enter Babson.

On May 18, 1974, 235 students received their BS degree from Babson. Emblematic of these awards, the cow pictured here has symbolic significance.

DR. HENRY A. KRIEBEL, the college’s dedicated and able professor of accounting, dean of faculty, and president, has announced his retirement. Dr. Kriebel has served Babson from 1945 - 1974. He is thanked for his many contributions to the college.

Making his debut as President of Babson College will be RALPH Z. SORENSON this September 1. The Babson community is looking forward to his arrival as the college is presently in a period of dynamic growth and change, thus in need of strong leadership.

MR. DANIEL F. GERBER ’20, a longtime benefactor and friend of Babson, died on March 16 in Fremont, Michigan at the age of 75. Gerber Hall, one of the college’s three classroom buildings, is named after him.

William J. Usery Jr. made an important decision this past January to remain as director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and turn down an offer to become director of the AFL-CIO's organizational and field services.

Usery, in addition to his role as the administration's chief arbitrator, has been appointed a special assistant to President Nixon to coordinate energy decisions which affect labor.

David Nyhan of the BOSTON GLOBE says of Usery, "A widely heralded professional arbitrator, a Democrat who served on a missile site selection committee for Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, a supporter of Sen. Hubert Humphrey for the Presidency, and a one-time Machinists' Union official, Usery apparently heeded the call that his skills are sorely needed."

"If 1974 is as bad a year as a lot of people in labor and government think it will be," Nyhan wrote, "we may have reason to be glad Usery stayed where he is. He's one of the few people in the Administration who can talk to labor with any prospect of being listened to."

Nyhan was right. No sooner had Usery assumed his new responsibilities, than he was pressed into service to solve the independent truckers' strike which threatened the nation's economy in February.
MARVIN MILLER

Executive Director
Major League Baseball Players' Association

Marvin Miller is best known for his role in directing the Major League Baseball Players' Association in their 1972 strike against baseball's owners. That strike, which won numerous concessions from the baseball owners, including the right of players to independent binding arbitration of wage disputes, has resulted in an entirely new relationship between the players and management.

Miller, an economist, has a broad background in labor management. Prior to being named executive director of the Players' Association in 1966, Miller was associated with the United Steelworkers of America for 16 years as director of research and assistant to the president.

He has served with the National War Labor Board, the Wage Stabilization Board, and the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Miller was also a member of the National Labor-Management Panel, appointed to that panel by the late President Kennedy in 1963 and reappointed to a three-year term by President Johnson in 1964.
JAMES P. LOUGHLIN

Secretary-Treasurer
Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO

James P. Loughlin has been involved in the management of labor unions in Massachusetts since 1937, when he was elected vice president of an AFL Brewery Workers' Union local.

After serving with the U.S. Navy in World War II, Loughlin returned to union activities serving as recording secretary of Local 95 of the Hotel, Restaurant, and Bartenders' Union in Massachusetts. He later was elected secretary-treasurer and business agent of that local, an office he held until February 1962 when he was chosen to serve as secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO.

In a letter to the BOSTON GLOBE responding to an editorial about labor and business, Loughlin wrote, "You state, 'Massachusetts is America's Great Britain, a tiny little island that imports too much of what it needs.' This is and has been labor's cry for quite a period of time. We have both imported and exported many of our jobs away, leaving us with a bad economy. Very little, if anything, has been done to help bring jobs into this state or hold the jobs that are here."
Barbara Wertheimer is an expert on the involvement of women in labor unions. As Labor Program Specialist for Cornell University's Metropolitan Center of the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Barbara Wertheimer has been instrumental in developing programs for women in labor unions.

Her latest, Trade Union Women's Study Program, is funded by a Ford Foundation grant and is designed to study the barriers that keep working women from participating more fully in their trade union organizations. This program is based on the results of her year-long study of women in New York City unions which revealed that the participation of women members is jeopardized more often by lack of information, training, and experience than by lack of interest.

A graduate of Oberlin College, Ms. Wertheimer has worked with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America as an organizer and education director. She earned a Master of Arts degree from New York University, and has served as Community Services Consultant for the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal.
Leonard Woodcock has been president of the United Auto Workers since June 1970, when he assumed the position at the time of Walter Reuther's death. He was elected to a two-year term as the union's president at the organization's 23rd Constitutional Convention in 1972.

The son of a union man, Woodcock worked his way up the ladder in the UAW, serving as regional director, first administrative assistant to Reuther, and vice president.

In 1970, Woodcock led the UAW in its contract negotiations with the auto industry's "Big Three" and won historic gains for his union.

In settling the UAW's 67-day strike against General Motors, the union negotiating team led by Woodcock won restoration of full cost-of-living protection for UAW members. The Nixon administration praised this agreement as a model of responsible collective bargaining.

Woodcock now faces his toughest test as he copes with the effects of the energy crisis on the automobile industry and the consequent layoffs of thousands of UAW members.

MY TURN: Bennett E. Bidwell

Life as a Compromise

COMMENCEMENT SPEECH MAY 18, 1974

I have donned cap and gown only twice in my life . . . and Babson made both occasions possible. I'm particularly grateful that my mother and my uncle were able to be present on both occasions - I believe they remain dumbfounded that I ever got to put cap and gown on the first time, let alone a second time.

So to them, to my family, faculty members, distinguished guests, members of the graduating class and parents of the graduating class, good morning.

I should acknowledge at the outset that I'm painfully aware that being a commencement speaker is a bigger deal for the speaker than for the audience. I must also confess that I can remember neither the identity nor the topic of the speaker at my own graduation exercises. And yet I am aware that if there is any suspense in the air, it has to be with whether - or when - the exercises will be streaked. And what, if anything, at that momentous point, will speaker say to streaker?

All of which remains to be seen. In the meantime, what does the speaker (not streaker) say to a group of men and women as worldly-wise as today's college graduates?

That the world has changed?

That virtue triumphs and cream rises to the top?

That you get out of life pretty much what you put into it?

That the best way to improve a system that's been found wanting is to work within - not outside - that system?

And who - from my generation - has the right to say? The world has changed - it has changed more in the time between my graduation and yours that it did between my great-grandfather's and mine. In point of fact, my sense of values at graduation was probably closer to my great-grandfather's than yours - today is to mine, or your father's.

In the 22 years since I received my degree from this institution - and that, incidentally, roughly corresponds with the life span of the average graduate in the audience - the knowledge, philosophy and way of life that we carried through college have been largely outdated and outmoded.

Outdated and outmoded, and not just technologically. Not only has man landed on the moon in the interim and perfected the computer, invented the jet plane, nuclear sub and color TV and discovered Salk vaccine, but the political and economic systems of the country and world have been significantly altered (in real life, if not on paper) - and not always for better. A seemingly endless war in Southeast Asia has been fought to a vague conclusion, a president of the United States has been assassinated, another stands in the shadow of impeachment and the government from time to time seems to be in a state of near collapse.

A case could be made that if Lt. Hiro Onoda - the Japanese soldier who straggled into the world after three decades in the Philippine jungle - were given an instant replay of everything that has happened, he might come to the conclusion that we really ain't made much progress, except technologically, and that's a mixed blessing.

So what does a representative of the generation that ain't made much progress - and, on top of that, a representative of the business establishment - tell young people heading into a world where all the institutions of the establishment - not only business, but government, church, education, professions, military, labor, press - receive universally low marks in public esteem?

Good News and Bad News . . .

Well, as always, you tell them that there is good news . . . and bad news. In this instance, the bad news comes first.

Part of the bad news is that you're going to find that your ability to control your own destiny - a prime objective of all of us idealists (I use the term "us" advisedly) - is less than you think it should be . . . and certainly less than it was 22 years ago.

Compromise Essential . . .

The decisions that are made today are made by a committee - in business, government, community and social life - and even in the home. The old saw that a camel is a horse designed by a committee contains an element of truth. A committee decision, by its very nature, is a compromise that completely satisfies no individual. In fact, one of the truisms that can be applied to life itself is that it is a compromise. And compromise is foreign to an idealist, particularly a young idealist of the 1970's, as well as foreign to the theme of most commencement messages.

Usually, the charge is don't compromise, don't surrender. But I would submit that there is a distinction between compromise and surrender . . . and it's a distinction that is difficult to perceive when you're on the charge to make a better world or build a better life. To surrender is to give up, to quit; to compromise is to find a way not to give up - to move forward, or sideways, or even to find a way to live to fight another day.

Compromise may seem neither a noble nor a manly art. But it is an essential ingredient to making some kind of peace with the world in which you live, while retaining some kind of peace with yourself.

No Man Is An Island

To be sure, there will be exceptions to this generalization among you. Some of you will be able - because your objectives are different than most and the price you're willing to pay is perhaps greater than most - to work your way through life doing pretty much what you want to do, the way you want to do it, with principles and ideals untrammeled. Others of you will try - and fail - and will come face-to-face with compromise as the only alternative to frustration and defeat.

For the vast majority of us, the phrase, "No man is an island," rings increasingly true; and to the extent that you're tied to the mainland - to society and the rest of humanity - to that extent, some degree of compromise becomes inevitable. To cite a superficial illustration in connection with the automobile business (if you'll permit one regression), you may feel you have the inalienable right to buy a car that will go 150 miles per hour, rip off the muffler and drive without seat belts - and you may, if you own your own island. But not on the mainland, if, in its wisdom, the establishment ordains 55 miles per hour speed limits to conserve energy, ordains noise and pollution control devices to protect the environment and ordains seat belts and shoulder straps (or air bags) to protect you against yourself - in the interest of the common good, as it perceives it. The latter distinction is critical.

For the definition of common good has largely fallen to the two great, overpowering institutions of the day - the government and press (or media). Along with that power of defining the common good goes tremendous control over the private life - and especially the business life - of the individual. The government will define - to a greater or lesser degree - who you hire, what you pay, who you promote, what hours are worked, the design and price of your product, how you advertise, how you package, how you distribute, what warranties you give, what services you provide, etcetera, etcetera, etcetera.

MEDIA REICHS

The power of media cannot be described, let alone quantified. Joseph Goebbels, presumably the premier protagonist of the ages, would have been dumbfounded at the speed and impact around the world of what is called the news and communications process today. It would not be an overstatement to say that the
With regard to media, I would only note that in my youth we must have had all kinds of bad news — or hints of potential bad news — going on all around us all the time. Fortunately, I guess, we didn’t know about most of it. On the other hand, you, as a generation, have been so bombarded with instant news of corruption, scandal, crime, greed, disease, natural disaster, rebellion, labor dispute, race riot, military arrogance, murder and assassination (to name a few) that you have to be convinced:

1. That everything is going to hell in a handbasket and
2. All the people who have been running things are either crooks or crooks or both.

Think of it — you have matured to news of the first truly unpopular overseas war in this country’s history. All we ever had were “good” wars .. . “lovable” wars .. . that everybody supported. Wars that were against really bad guys, who now, ironically, are considered to be good guys.

You are witnessing the potential imprisonment of a president of the United States, on the media, more than any other institution (including church and school), shape the public psyche today — and it is the public psyche that determines, in the final analysis, whether an economy thrives . . . a government falls . . . whether there is war or peace, inflation, depression, anarchy, or the total collapse of the moral standard and the gold standard.

The purpose here is not to contribute to the growing pile of diatribe (much of it self-serving) against governmental intervention or the power of the press, but simply to point out the fact of impact and degree of impact that these two institutions will have, for better or worse, on the life you’re about to lead. My generation has been able to control or contain that impact — whether yours can, or does, will depend on large degree on whether or not it wants to, and how badly it wants to.

But, at a minimum and with regard to government, I would hope that yours would recognize more quickly than mine that any definition of the common good requires trade-offs that there is no such thing as a free lunch.

MY WORLD, YOUR WORLD

The objectives of energy conservation and a clean environment, for example, tend to conflict — not only with each other — but with a third objective: that of maintaining a high level of employment, investment and economic development. Compromise is necessary. Your right not to be discriminated against for any reason whatsoever is my right — not my right to discriminate — but ultimately even into my right to select — to select on the basis of talent, experience or desire. And the wicket gets progressively stickier because there are just so many “rights” and the rights of any group tend to come at the expense of others. Ask the “do-gooders” to prioritize .. . and to list the costs of getting from here to there — from where we are to where they want us to go.

NO FREE LUNCH

For there are no free lunches, even in this area, and there is as much legitimate need for truth-in-lending or truth-in-advertising.

heels of the ouster of a vice-president. All we ever had (from age five to 18) was one president . . . and nobody, but nobody, ever fooled with him — except once every four years somebody ran against him and got clobbered and that was all there was to it. The institutions may have been remented and we may have chafed under them, but no one ever challenged them successfully. So, in my day, we were content to wrestle with the real issues; whether, on average, you made out better at Pine Manor or Wellesley . . . and who had the book on Clint Petersen’s last four exams.

So I would say to my generation, which tends to despair because your values are so different, that we should stand in awe that you have values and that they bear any resemblance at all to ours .. . that it is a minor miracle that you accept any of the teachings you have received, have any respect for the institutions of the day and, in fact, approach life with some measure of hope and determination. And therein lies the real bedrock of the good news of the day — that, on balance, you have and you do.

ATOMIC HOLOCAUST

The other piece of good news is related to the same perspective. People have been giving commencement speeches on the same theme for decades: the theme that things aren’t what they used to be, that the world is going to pot and it’s up to you — the young — to get your hands screwed on right and get it fixed. Admittedly, the problems may have seemed less complex in days of yore, but the consequences were as dire:

- By now, according to the prognosticators of the late 40’s and early 50’s, we should have disappeared in atomic holocaust .. . and we have not.
- The earth should have been struck by at least two other heavenly bodies.
- The church should be dead, our cities in ashes from race riots, the environment poisoned to the point that it could no longer sustain life and
- Anybody who escaped that chain of disasters should have been felled by Asian flu.

Incidentally, on the side of trivia, a United States senator named Robert LaFollette predicted that gasoline prices would go to $1 a gallon . . . in 1923. The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company advertised, in 1916, that the gasoline supply of America, at the then present rate of production and consumption, would be exhausted in 27 years — or by 1943 — but if everybody used Goodyear “Cord” tires, it would last another seven years . . . until 1950.

THREE OUT OF FIVE

The point, I guess, is that while the middle-aged tend to despair of all the bad news — probably out of sheer frustration — the young do not. They head out into the world and, if they don’t fix it (it’s probably not fixable), they do do at least manage to keep it running somehow. For virtue does triumph and the cream does rise to the top . . . in the long run. You do get out of life about what you put into it . . . on average. The good guys do lick the bad guys . . . about three out of five.

And — most importantly — there are still mountains to climb, sunrises to watch, girls to kiss and wine to be drunk. All are worth doing (with the possible exception — in deference to the memory of the founder of this school — of drinking the wine) . . . and all are worth doing well. And none, incidentally, are resources in danger of depletion.

REBELLION BUILDS NOTHING . . .

So the message is — don't you despair; don't you despair of the institutions of the day. Rebellion is a nice, self-satisfying luxury . . . but it doesn't build anything. Rejection of the system is O.K. — and may even be desirable on a limited scale — but somebody still has to go in and run the system. Compromise need not be surrender.

And there is continuity, in the midst of change. It is a reasonable assumption that one of the highlights of your life — 25 years or so from now — will come when you go to your son's or daughter's commencement . . . wondering how either of you ever made it.

And it is also a reasonable assumption that the only sour note on that day will be a commencement address . . . by a self-styled oracle who will talk too long and say too little. But even that will pass, eventually.

THE BABSON TEAM . . .

A final note . . . about Babson and about continuity. Only three men (two of them deceased) have served as its president since I came here in 1950 . . . and all three . . . Edward Hinckley, Gordon Trim and Henry Kriebel . . . were on this campus in 1930. On the campus also were the others who run this institution today — Walter Carpenter, Everett Stephens, Paul Staake, Clint Petersen, Carl Bowen, Joe Alexander, Wally Mors, Ed Handler, Ed McGee and Bob Wertheimer. The purpose is not to say that they've grown old (I don't think I have) . . . but to pay tribute to almost unprecedented continuity in the midst of change, and of unparalleled progress . . . progress whose physical evidence can be seen in any direction you choose to look.

They have built this school — as individuals and as a team — without ever taking a single step backward or even succumbing to the impulse to tread water. Theirs is a truly remarkable record — and I think it contains a lesson for us all. God bless you and Godspeed to you, Henry Kriebel. Thank you, very much.

Jane Yuile
Thus grew the tale of Wonderland
Thus slowly, one by one,
And now the tale is done
And home we steer, a merry crew,
Beneath the setting sun.

-Lewis Carroll
