What's Inside This Week:

On Campus
This is the last issue of the Babson Free Press for the semester excluding a special graduation issue that will come out on May 12

Lifestyles
Alternative Options for Graduates According to Robin... page 8

One student's plan for life after Babson... page 2

Opinions
Politics? Religion? Something lighter? Got an opinion? Write it: email babsonfree-press@gmail.com

Finance
A weekly update from the Investment Management Association... page 3

International
Do you know someone abroad? Tell them to share the experience with the Free Press.

Sports
Baseball won NEW-MACs... page 8

For more, such as current updates, polls and babsonTV, check out babsonfree-press.org and don't forget to add our Babson Free Press Facebook application to your profile!

Babson Film Festival
Sarah Winnett Staff Film Critic

When asked what he thought about the quality of this year's contribution to the Babson Film Festival, Filmmaker's Club president Jason Pockett replied, "I think this year's films looked really good! They're very varied in genre, so it was really interesting to watch. We got a little comedy, some drama, a few documentaries, and even a foreign language film (in Spanish) so the films that were shown never seemed repetitive. This viewer would have to agree. The results were varied and for the most part, well made and interesting. While scheduled on the same day as the Spring concert, not all hope was lost for getting an audience for the festival. As Packett said, "to be honest, having the Film Festival on the same day as the Spring Concert was not our first choice. We had originally wanted to have the Film Festival the night before, on Thursday April 17, however there were too many scheduling conflicts with Banana Splitz Day and the BEI speaker. But I think it really turned out to be a blessing in disguise, because I think people were looking for something fun to do before the Spring Concert, so I think having the Film Festival lead into the Spring Concert worked out really well. The Film Festival started at 5:00, and it ended around 6:30 or so, and then we had Bernucci's pizza in the Sorenson lobby, so people could grab a slice as they headed over to PepsiCo for the concert. I think we linked the two events made for a really fun night of entertainment." When first walking in, I did not know what to expect, especially given the fact that some of these student films created by business students. While the first entrant, Entrepreneurship by Priyanka Khetrapal did not do much for me. Though simply shot and at times funny, it seemed more like a submission to the recent Berkshire Center contest than to a film one. The second film, A Normal Day by Dan Raffeld was the one that turned me around. The film followed a man's morning routine. Using a simple score and black and white photography, Raffeld created a nuanced piece. By using interesting shots and angles, without dialogue, this became my favorite entry of the night. The next entrant, The Run was shot

Best Buddies Visit Campus
Nicole Smith Editor in Chief & Yianni Douras Best Buddies Co-founder

In February, the Free Press covered the formation of a new service organization group on campus, Best Buddies. Throughout the semester, that organization has grown rapidly and its presence on campus has impacted the entire community- more so than even the founders could have imagined.

"With so many things Public Safety is managing it was great to see such care and support from the officers." Yianni Douras, Co-founder of the organization.

Yianni explains the rest of the visit. As the three of us spoke that

Continued on page 2

Proof of the awareness of the Best Buddies organization was offered one evening when an event which was supposed to be canceled was pushed onward. The Buddies, mentally handicapped residents of the towns surrounding Wellesley, were to arrive on campus to 'hang out' and visit with their Babson Buddy counterpart. The event was scheduled for the Friday evening before spring break and so most students had left campus, forcing the organization to cancel this event. Due to a communication glitch, two Buddies, Doug and Ally still came to Babson and met with Yianni Douras, co-founder of the organization.

Yianni explains the rest of the visit.

For more, such as current updates, polls and babsonTV, check out babsonfree-press.org and don't forget to add our Babson Free Press Facebook application to your profile!
One Graduate's Plan

Meredith McLeod Sears Senior

After two and a half years of prayerful consideration, after mental and emotional setbacks that nearly broke me and my family, I have decided to live in Ghana after graduation. I am going there to pursue economic and community development projects in some of the poorest areas of the world. These are the areas where there is no running water, minimal access to sufficient food, and low—if any—access to education.

My heart has called me back to Africa after my recent microfinance work in Ghana, 6 weeks teaching entrepreneurship in rural Rwandan schools, and Babson business consulting trip to Uganda. I am going only out of my passion for the people of Africa. I am also hoping to reconnect with the passion, commitment, and side of myself that I often feel I have lost some touch with after 4 years of emotionally and professionally intense business school. I want to reconnect to the God who is calling me to Ghana. The one who will provide. The one who will provide when I am scared, alone, and far from home.

God who will be my support system when Ghanaian life is challenging, beyond measure, and the only option seems to be to give up.

Just as I did when I began this prayer years ago, I will give all my heart, mind, body and soul God to God and in doing so to this next phase of my life. It is my only option. I do not know what the future holds, but I do know what the results will be, and I take in that result I will give it all to God to leave the rest to God. I seek to be bold enough to travel beyond the limits of my own limits and of humanity in this process. Let me never forget that I am but one person among an infinite God.

Without a doubt, Babson has stretched me. Personally, professionally, and religiously. Over the past 4 years, I have continually hit walls in leadership activities, academic work, and in relationships with others and myself. Babson has taught me to be bold enough to travel beyond those walls by nurturing my ability to think innovatively of alternative solutions to problems. More than anything, Babson has shown me my own capabilities. Every time I approach a personal or professional wall, I am reminded of all of the ones I have burst through over the past 4 years.

But I haven’t broken down because of the amount of support from professors, Gerri Randlett, administration, and staff. Babson has been the silent forces behind my continued success at Babson. As a student with a learning disability, I have received academic support at Babson that has allowed me to excel. Babson has committed to my success like no other school I know. Because of the Babson community’s commitment to my success, I am leaving Babson in a mere few weeks feeling extremely capable of anything that I desire to achieve.

An education that has prepared me for any career or endeavor is, in my opinion, priceless. When I first arrived at Babson less than 4 years ago (as a displaced Texan), I remember Gerri Randlett telling all of us at freshman orientation that “it’s possible to do anything at Babson.” At that time, I thought it was slightly hokey, but now I know it’s completely true. During my time at Babson, I have interacted with two student organizations, been the president or senior officer of one, have met hundreds of people in the country without being too heavy-handed for my taste, have made many interesting viewing experiences. Love, Reuse, Recycle by Jefrey Pfeffer was one, a sweet, swell, good film. It was an original concept again about different uses for water bottles. Neutral thinkers like ourselves can find opportunities.

Entrepreneurs (and Babson students) are the crazy innovators who think anything is possible, and we are the source of change and progress in the world. Not just students, as innovators and change-makers, what will you do with your skills and education? Search yourself. Are you ready to be in the heat of the moment? Are you ready to help create the future of the world? And if so, we are the Filmmaker’s Club, we thought what better way then to make a film! It really served the Babson community....

My call to seek global change begins, developing countries are incredibly fun places. Yes, I did say fun. Fun, because they, like Babson, are professionally and personally very challenging and require continual flexibility and innovativeness in one’s thinking and action. Traditional methods for running a business are interesting, but they will work differently in a developing country. If you love moving walls as much as I do, then you’ll find work and life thrilling, intellectually stimulating, and just damn fun in Africa. If you would like to talk more about internships or educational development opportunities, I am always available. Just email me.

Best Buddies from page 1

night and planned what we were going to do for the time they were on campus. I learned that Ally wants to be a firefighter and Doug is a police officer. Doug was actually wearing a blue police officer jacket with a gold badge. So, I took Doug and Ally to Babson Public Safety where they got a chance to meet two officers, Mr. Santik and Steven Sullivan, who were on duty. They showed Ally and Doug all of their equipment, the Police Car and both of them to park the siren in the vehicles which they later got their siren. Doug and the officers had a great time visiting with Ally and he got all his questions answered...the officers really enjoyed it. So, instead of being a firefighter Ally changed her mind and wanted to become a policewoman. Ally and Doug each want to help people when they grow up, they said.

I wanted to share something both the officers said. As we were leaving Babo the police officer, the officers pulled me aside and said the following: “You (our organization) really do good work...”

This really meant a lot to me as we at Babson have not only the opportunity to connect with students who have had on campus as a group of students with a shared mission to enhance the cultural dynamic of the community at Babson...”

The point is so many things are great to see such care and support for our students, and we have grown this organization in over thirty members, and still there is so much room for growth. We are so great to see such care and support for our students, and we have grown this organization in over thirty members, and still there is so much room for growth. We are so proud of what we have achieved in our passion and leadership.
International News: Central Banks and Global Monetary Policy
Priyanka Chanchani

Before the financial crisis, the markets adjusted as bankers measured risk and lent money, and central banks were able to calibrate interest-rate tools efficiently. Since the crisis, the role of the central bank has greatly changed—before it was the last lender and now it is the first. "When you question the basic premise which you have worked under for the last 15 to 20 years, which is that markets are rational and efficient, there is a case for a different approach to both monetary policy and regulation," says Thomas Mayer, chief European economist of Deutsche Bank.

The Global Crisis, though stabilizing, is not getting better and most central banks are pulling out all the stops. The Bank of Canada and the European Central Bank are both considering purchasing corporate debt to boost credit ratings. Yet, Germany has only recently started to "bail-out" its banks, like Hypo Real Estate, which was the worst hit. Germany offered to buy the company from shareholders in a way to remove bad assets from the banking system. Moreover, developing countries are receiving funds from the IMF—Pakistan, Mexico, Columbia as well as a slew of Asian and African nations have all applied or applied for funding.

Though all problems are being solved slightly differently, the banks are clearly taking more drastic measures to prevent deflation. Yet, no one knows what all of this will lead to and discovering a new target goal is something that many economists, bankers, and market professionals have been asking themselves. Two arguments that are brought to the table are the way monetary policy is addressed by the banking system as a whole and the process of supervision. Mr. Blanchflower, a Labor Economist articulates the problem, "inflation targeting alone (is a highly used macroeconomic tool) will not suffice." Though this seems unlikely as many banks have taken time to use this as a way to establish their credibility, and until now, it seemed to do the job.

In regard to regulation and "macroprudential" supervision (the regulation of accumulating risk in the marketplace) is strategy that has been communicated by Mr. Bernanke, where it centers localized or regionalized problems to the market efficiency as a global issue. However, one is to look at the Bank of Canada in Australia and Canada, that have minimal regulation in this regard; they have both been successful in overall comparison.

Both of these arguments come to a head when politicians are involved in creating regional oversight and probing into the markets. As global markets become more relevant on one another, while central banks take a larger role in credit markets, it will require a shift in monetary policy—macroeconomic stabilization policies used by these banks will most likely have to look further than overnight interest rates, as they have done until now.

Oracle Outmaneuvers IBM for Acquisition of Sun Microsystems
by Perla Redmond
Oracle (ORCL), a Redwood City, CA, based company recently announced its agreement to acquire Sun Microsystems (JAVA) for $7.45 per share in cash, or $7.4 billion ($5.6 billion of Sun’s cash and debt). Although Sun is perceived as primarily a hardware company, Oracle will benefit by two strategic software assets, Java and Solaris.

Oracle CEO, Larry Ellison, has acquired more than 50 small companies since 2003. Oracle estimates that the acquisition of Sun will add $1.5B to its operating profit. The purchase closed weeks of speculation about Oracle’s potential acquisition of Sun. IBM CEO, Sam Palmisano has bought 70 small companies totaling $27 billion since 2003. This move highlights a recent trend by huge tech giants to encroach on each others’ primary markets. For the first time, Oracle will go from producing no hardware to becoming the world’s fourth largest maker of blade servers (compact servers meant for the fastest growing computer segment, back-office computing). Currently this market is dominated by 55% market share, followed by IBM and Dell. Cisco Systems announced its entrance into back-office computing, in January. The acquisition gives Oracle control of Java, which is used to build software for websites and cell phones. It is currently open-source, meaning that it is free to low-cost, and anyone can access Oracle Microsystems, was known as an innovative Silicon Valley company which was better at creating ahead-of-the-curve products. Oracle, which has reaped the benefits of the business technology industry by banks have taken time to use this as a way to establish their credibility, and until now, it seemed to do the job.

In regard to regulation and "macroprudential" supervision (the regulation of accumulating risk in the marketplace) is strategy that has been communicated by Mr. Bernanke, where it centers localized or regionalized problems to the market efficiency as a global issue. However, if one is to look at the Central Banks in Australia and Canada, that have minimal regulation in this regard, they have both been unaffected in overall comparison.

Both of these arguments come to a head when politicians are involved, as a result of federal oversight and probing into the markets. As global markets become more relevant on one another, while central banks take a larger role in credit markets, it will require a shift in monetary policy—macroeconomic stabilization policies used by these nations will most likely have to look further than overnight interest rates, as they have done until now.

Finance Page Brought to You by the Babson Investment Management Association
Looking For a Great Leadership Opportunity?

Join the Babson Free Press!

Opportunities available in:
Finance, Arts, Lifestyle, Opinions, and Sports

babsonfreepress@gmail.com

Northeastern University
School of Technological Entrepreneurship

Do you want to help solve the country's economic problems? Become an Entrepreneur!

Are entrepreneurs born or bred? No matter how you answered this question, you will appreciate the Master's Degree offered by the School of Technological Entrepreneurship (STE) at Northeastern University. Our one-year program provides top-quality classroom education in a truly interdisciplinary environment with an exceptional opportunity to be involved in the creation of a new technology-based venture.

The STE has the distinction of being the first independent school devoted to technological entrepreneurship in the nation. Our Master's program is an intensive one year (Sept to Aug) 10 course sequence that teaches you what you need to know to be a successful entrepreneur. In parallel with your classroom experience, you will also join a multidisciplinary 1-2 person venture team whose mission is to start a new company. Among the program's goals is to teach the art of collaboration, which is key to turning new technology into marketable products and services. In this program, you will:

• Work on projects in multidisciplinary teams to solve problems in integrating technological issues with business needs,
• Gain the ability to see both the technological issues and the business issues from an integrative perspective,
• Learn how to be successful in creating businesses, and
• Engage in venture creation as a member of an 1-2 person team.

We are currently accepting applications for the fall. To learn more, please visit our website at www.ste.northeastern.edu.

For more information, contact Margarita Sier at 617.373.2780 or via email at ste@neu.edu.

graduated to a better life: manhattan.

Informed representation for today's buyer.

148 East 84th Street NY, NY 10028
646.422.0424 | 646.292.5115

www.acquirenewyork.com

7 New Street Huntington, NY 11743
631.423.8300 | 646.292.5115
Adventuredian: Review
This film is nothing like the trailers would have you believe. Although directed and written by Greg Mottola who directed Superbad, it is more of a Scandinavian version of a story that is a comedy and has its share of funny moments, but it takes itself more seriously among the slacker comedy roots would you have believe. Set in the late eighties, Adventuredian follows James (Jesse Eisenberg), a recent college graduate who returns to his Renaissance Literature and is as he says, "not even qualified for manual labor." He wants to become a journeyman and has never held down a job in his life. His family has fallen on hard times and he is forced to take on a summer job at Adventuredian, working at the great outdoors.

He does not want to be there, a feeling shared by most of the other workers, except for the bosses (brilliantly played by Bill Hader and Kristin Wiig), whose biggest worry is that a player will win a big million dollar lottery. When all the other workers, there are Em, (Kristen Stewart) a more sarcastic version of herself."Sunshine Cleaning: Review

Sunshine Cleaning: Review
This breezy tale and the fact that it starts one of the smartest actresses currently working (Amy Adams), Sunshine Cleaning is a surprisingly dark comedy, which at times struggles with its tonal shifts. The film is produced by the same people who made Little Miss Sunshine and this one at times tries to veer away from the previous film's tone, switching to a more customary quirky comedy. The more interesting parts focus on aspects of the characters' lives which are a bit more serious. Rose Lorkowski (Adams) is a former homecoming queen and cheerleader who in the ten or so years between have fallen into a less than picturesque perfect life. She still puts Post-it notes in her alarm clock mirror to remind herself that she is a winner, but in her heart knows that she has not done much. She works as a maid, but claims to be training to be a realtor, and is carrying on an affair with her former high school boyfriend Mac (Steve Zahn). He is now a cop and married with two children. Rose is also struggling with her son, whose misbehavior and precocious behavior is mistaken by his school as signs of a mental disorder.

Rose's sister Norah (Emily Blunt) is even worse off. She is floating from dead end job to dead end job constantly being fired for having a bad attitude, and is still living with her. When Rose's son Oscar (Loy) is expelled from yet another school, Rose takes upon herself to try and get him into a private school. To raise the funds, Mac helps her set up a business after seeing that the people that clean up after crimes earn a lot of money. She and Norah start working together while trying to reconcile themselves with their mother's tragic death years earlier. This is not often spoken of, but always present. In the meantime, Norah tries to create a friendship with the daughter of a dead woman whose house they clean. Rose tries to readjust her life so that she can actually be proud of it.

The cast includes two of the best up and coming actresses currently working, Emily Blunt of The Devil Wears Prada, and Amy Adams, the two shine in their respective roles bringing more depth to their characters than they deserve at times. Both shine in their own ways, but Emily Blunt manages to steal every scene with her魅力 and comic timing, while Amy Adams is always on point for comedic timing in each. The supporting cast is quite strong, as are the performances of the supporting cast. The film is a bit uneven in its pacing and editing, with a few scenes feeling a bit too long and others feeling rushed, but overall, it is a well-crafted and entertaining film.

The overall tone is a bit too dark, but the performances and the chemistry of the cast work well to keep the audience engaged. The story is a bit predictable, but still manages to keep the audience投资 in the characters and their journey. Overall, it is a solid film that is enjoyable and worth watching.
The Who, Where, When, and Why Campus Calendar from portal.babson.edu

Wednesday - April 29, 2009

Times are Mean, We Should Go Green

Description: There are many opportunities with real estate development, however, "Green Buildings" are the future of both commercial and residential real estate. Come join us to learn about the opportunities and challenges the Tim Pappas, President of Pappas Enterprises, Inc, and his team faced when developing the Macal- fies building in South Boston; the first residential LEED Gold rated project in Boston.

This event is free for students, faculty and staff.

Contact Name: Eiffie Fyros
Contact Phone: 781.239.2221
Location: babson College, Olin Hall, Needham, Wellesley Room 7:30 AM–9:30 AM

FME Reports to the Community Description: The first year students will be Reporting to the Community throughout the day in Tomato Hall. The presentations are at 9:45am and 11:30am.

Contact Name: Sandy Siciliano
Contact Phone: 781.239.4223
Location: Tomato Hall 8:00 AM–1:00 PM

Retirement Party for Hope Tillman Description: After 18 years of service as Director of Babson’s Horn Library, Hope Tillman is celebrating her retirement. Please join us in the library. Light refreshments will be served.

Contact Name: Jane Vecchi
Contact Phone: ext. 4473
Location: Horn Library Lobby 3:00 PM–4:00 PM

KKG Semi-Annual Professor’s Tea Description: The women of Kappa Kappa Gamma cordially invite you to our semi-annual Professor’s Tea.

Contact Name: Catalina Ortiz
Contact Phone: 617.605.0061
Location: Olin Hall Cafe 5:00 PM–7:00 PM

Yoga Description: Gentle-moderate yoga

Contact Email: Bonnie Jeanne Casey
Contact Phone: 5636
Location: Office of Spiritual Life 5:00 PM–6:00 PM

The Babson Boston Alumni Club of Worcester Networking Social Description: Connect with local alumni and enjoy selections of the Tribeca’s premium, freshly prepared hors d’oeuvres. Cash bar.

Contact Name: Brenda Yeomans
Contact Phone: 781.239.4165
Location: Tribeca 6:00 PM–9:00 PM

Outdoor Movie Description: The Class of 2011 Steering Committee is sponsoring an Outdoor Movie: Quantum of Solace. This event will be catered by Qloba Mexican Grill.

Contact Name: Dan Kwash
Contact Phone: 329-6002

Sponsor: Class of 2011 Steering Committee Location: Park Manor Quad 7:30 PM–10:00 PM

Friday - April 30, 2009

Graduate Evening Finals Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

Make-Up for Day Classes for Founder’s Day Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

FME Reports to the Community Description: The first year students will be Reporting to the Community morning and afternoon in Tomato Hall. The presentations are at 9:45am and 1:00pm.

Contact Name: Sandy Siciliano
Contact Phone: 781-239-4223
Location: Tomato Hall 9:45 AM–3:00 PM

Baseball vs. Southern Maine Description:

Contact Name: Athletics
Contact Phone: 4250
Location: 3:30 PM–6:00 PM

Harvard Square Church Meals Description: Every Thursday, Babson volunteers serve about 100 meals to those in need and help clean up afterwards. At the First Church in Cambridge.

Contact Name: Josh Stevenson
Contact Phone: 5565

Sponsor: Lightner Center for Public Service
Location: First Church in Cambridge 4:30 PM–8:00 PM

Commencement 2009 MBA Student Speaker Contest Description:

Contact Name: Sarah Herchel
Contact Phone: 3401

Sponsor: Graduate Business Programs and Student Affairs
Location: Olin Hall, Room 225 5:00 PM–6:30 PM

WLP Farewell Dinner Description: Farewell & well dinner for the seniors from the women’s Leadership Program

Contact Name: Jennifer Whelan
Contact Phone: 5001
Location: Needham Wellesley Room 5:00 PM–7:00 PM

Spirited Away JIC Movie Night Description:

Contact Name: Amy Knauf
Contact Phone: 362-9911
Location: Olin Auditorium 7:00 PM–9:30 PM

Friday - May 1, 2009

Reading Day Make-Up for Day Classes for Snow Day Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

Sponsor: Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

Location: Needham Wellesley Room 5:00 PM–7:00 PM

Friday - May 1, 2009

Reading Day Make-Up for Day Classes for Snow Day Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

Sponsor: Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

Location: Needham Wellesley Room 5:00 PM–7:00 PM

Sponsor: Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore Description:

Contact Name: Donna Dubrowski
Contact Phone: 5438

Location: Needham Wellesley Room 5:00 PM–7:00 PM
Crossword Theme
The Same Coming and Going
Across
1. Fuel in England (8)
7. Duetist’s cry (7, 7)
18. "The universe lies in that belt."
19. Knight’s vulnerable state
20. Actor Cheney
21. “Give it a little _ _”
24. Commuter’s tool
27. This
29. Black Bart
32. Bliss, for short?
33. Either
34. Sweet Sixteen group
35. Lambchop’s cry
36. Hypnosis’ state?
42. Racist’s way of seeing (abbr.)
44. Fik’s other fear
46. Jiffy company
48. Napoleon’s complaint
51. _ _ Officer
52. Stage mom’s pride
53. Four per deck
54. Actress Carrere
55. Good monitor
56. Weight of the world on his shoulders
59. Spicogirls’ hit
63. 1948 Nobel Prize winner
67. Creepy Peter Lorre film
68. First player to pass 500 runs
69. Meg Ryan’s internet choice
70. Politician’s plea
74. Child’s dream
75. New parent’s least favorite place to be (abbr.)
77. Audio input
78. Turkish dancer Nejla
80. Impatient writer’s frustrated cry
82. Not great, but... (4, 4)
84. British Hey
86. Concert jumper
87. Bessie’s sound
89. Senator’s League (abbr.)
91. “I’m only _ _ for one.”
91. Me
92. Hickey
93. Orange school (abbr.)
94. Scooby Doo’s channel (abbr.)
95. _ _ _ _ of Dr. Moreau
99. Actress Aishwarya
100. What a train whistle does
101. Federal drug enforcement (abbr.)
106. Pennultimate pharaoh
107. Closer
109. Oscar nominated Slumdog song
110. Skier’s vacation spot
112. Stingy person’s trick
113. Actress Mia
115. Smells like rotten eggs (abbr.)
116. Escargot
118. A Corolla

Down
1. Dishes of corn gag
2. Cupid’s driving service?
3. Hairdresser’s direction
4. Next Generation Enterprise helmsman
5. John’s wife
6. Slothful male puppy? (abbr.)
7. Fourth letter
8. Actress Mercedes
9. Sumerian sky god
10. Mount Rainer state
11. Mined substance
12. Faith Hill has four
13. Nasty substances do it
14. Dryer
15. Jewish brotherhood for short
16. Nutritionist’s suggestion (abbr.)
17. Jack Black’s Teracous _
22. Witness’s fear
23. Use a calendar to
25. So Bright, So Strong is
26. A Spanish man of the ocean (abbr.)
28. Hall and...
30. Sonic enemy
31. Squashed unagi maki
37. Gordon Summer concert series
38. Tony Lovato’s band
39. Pitcher’s stat (abbr.)
40. In 2008, Obama was the president
41. Christmas Carol and Santa
42. Claus
43. Strategic planning method (abbr.)
45. Boston _ _ _ _ Party
49. Use outlook to create
50. Baby’s yelp
57. Austria domain code
58. Martyr, for short
59. Golden King’s cry
60. Siwak’s are two
61. Scottish man’s comforting phrase
62. Momentum (abbr.)
63. The Enormous Room writer
65. German airline (abbr.)
66. Priestess transformed into
67. The Fine Tree State (abbr.)
70. Hip hop star
71. Calculator makers for short
72. Comedian Morton
73. Technical Institute
75. Fredo’s death place
79. Before the soul there was the
81. Sea maid
82. Largest arteries
83. Batman villain Ras al
85. The Prairie State
88. Green Lantern Corps planet
90. There’s Verizon and T-Mo- bile and Cingular... _
93. A note to follow so
94. Russian heavy machine gun
96. Drug made from Hagemia
98. A loose panel
101. Nobel Prize winning The Silent Cry writer
102. _ _ _ Goopy
103. The Dark Materials heroine
104. Basketball player Ming
106. Young Turks host Kaspar- ian
108. For example (abbr.)
111. Cyrillic- _
112. 1983 film _
114. New Times Head Film Critic_ Scott
117. Element 53 (abbr.)
118. Not any particular

The Babson Free Press Staff
Nicole Smith
LaShonda Cooke
You
Iza Izrailov

Amanda Medlin
Jazz Brodmyer
Sarah Winnett
Ryan McNamara

You want to work with us.
Email babsonfreepress@gmail.com
There are few second chances in life, but there is no better time to take a risk, right? When the economy sucks, there's no place to go but up, and we're supposed to be the ones turning crisis into possibility. Doh.

Where are the heck are all these fabulous opportunities, you ask? Fine, fine, dear Babson graduating Seniors, if you BEO me to, I'll be happy to give you some advice on how to enter the "No Such Thing as the Real World". For me, I've frequently been called "the Left and right, I hear Babson students saying that they can't find a job. You're probably thinking, 'Let's do the normal job-search-and-interview process, don't get stuck in a desperate industry, don't think that businesses have a good reputation right now, etc. etc. Hello people! Those are supposed to be MY lame excuses for avoiding the corporate leah.

So, the economy sucks. The job market is a shit-ash-blicky show. But to be honest, it sucks a lot less for Babson than it does for anyone else. You've attended the number one Entrepreneurial School in the world for you've done the right thing. Now, we have all experienced what it's like for a business to fail (or was that just MY FME business?). It's not that this is a "Big fail" usually isn't what it appears to be. And to make a wild assumption, there probably are a few first generation Babson students with support systems in place who won't allow for "failure,. You might visualize yourself: "I call it "family". No really. Most people's parents will allow for a few failures. While you're waiting, swearing to your parents that you're looking for a responsible job, there are so many other opportunities to the Beavers over Wheaton 8-7 on Saturday in come-from-behind fashion.

The Engineers would not go away however, tallying single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to stay in the game. MIT starting pitcher, Greg Magauran (Sandy, UT) doubled with one out in the fifth, scoring on Hyatt's second RBI single of the afternoon. In the sixth, David Nole (Torrington, CT) was hit by a pitch leading off the inning, followed by a Kenneth Lin (Castro Valley, CA) single to center that moved Nole over to third. Nole would score on a Brian Doyle (Hopkins, MA) RBI groundout, as MIT pulled within 2-1.

MIT threatened in the bottom of the eighth, chasing Bart- ton from the game and loading the bases. And there's no better time to take a risk, right? When the economy sucks, there's no place to go but up, and we're supposed to be the ones turning crisis into possibility. Doh.

Where are the heck are all these fabulous opportunities, you ask? Fine, fine, dear Babson graduating Seniors, if you BEO me to, I'll be happy to give you some advice on how to enter the "No Such Thing as the Real World". For me, I've frequently been called "the Left and right, I hear Babson students saying that they can't find a job. You're probably thinking, 'Let's do the normal job-search-and-interview process, don't get stuck in a desperate industry, don't think that businesses have a good reputation right now, etc. etc. Hello people! Those are supposed to be MY lame excuses for avoiding the corporate leah.

So, the economy sucks. The job market is a shit-ash-blicky show. But to be honest, it sucks a lot less for Babson than it does for anyone else. You've attended the number one Entrepreneurial School in the world for you've done the right thing. Now, we have all experienced what it's like for a business to fail (or was that just MY FME business?). It's not that this is a "Big fail" usually isn't what it appears to be. And to make a wild assumption, there probably are a few first generation Babson students with support systems in place who won't allow for "failure,. You might visualize yourself: "I call it "family". No really. Most people's parents will allow for a few failures. While you're waiting, swearing to your parents that you're looking for a responsible job, there are so many other opportunities to the Beavers over Wheaton 8-7 on Saturday in come-from-behind fashion.

The Engineers would not go away however, tallying single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to stay in the game. MIT starting pitcher, Greg Magauran (Sandy, UT) doubled with one out in the fifth, scoring on Hyatt's second RBI single of the afternoon. In the sixth, David Nole (Torrington, CT) was hit by a pitch leading off the inning, followed by a Kenneth Lin (Castro Valley, CA) single to center that moved Nole over to third. Nole would score on a Brian Doyle (Hopkins, MA) RBI groundout, as MIT pulled within 2-1.

MIT threatened in the bottom of the eighth, chasing Bart- ton from the game and loading the bases. And there's no better time to take a risk, right? When the economy sucks, there's no place to go but up, and we're supposed to be the ones turning crisis into possibility. Doh.

Where are the heck are all these fabulous opportunities, you ask? Fine, fine, dear Babson graduating Seniors, if you BEO me to, I'll be happy to give you some advice on how to enter the "No Such Thing as the Real World". For me, I've frequently been called "the Left and right, I hear Babson students saying that they can't find a job. You're probably thinking, 'Let's do the normal job-search-and-interview process, don't get stuck in a desperate industry, don't think that businesses have a good reputation right now, etc. etc. Hello people! Those are supposed to be MY lame excuses for avoiding the corporate leah.

So, the economy sucks. The job market is a shit-ash-blicky show. But to be honest, it sucks a lot less for Babson than it does for anyone else. You've attended the number one Entrepreneurial School in the world for you've done the right thing. Now, we have all experienced what it's like for a business to fail (or was that just MY FME business?). It's not that this is a "Big fail" usually isn't what it appears to be. And to make a wild assumption, there probably are a few first generation Babson students with support systems in place who won't allow for "failure,. You might visualize yourself: "I call it "family". No really. Most people's parents will allow for a few failures. While you're waiting, swearing to your parents that you're looking for a responsible job, there are so many other opportunities to the Beavers over Wheaton 8-7 on Saturday in come-from-behind fashion.

The Engineers would not go away however, tallying single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to stay in the game. MIT starting pitcher, Greg Magauran (Sandy, UT) doubled with one out in the fifth, scoring on Hyatt's second RBI single of the afternoon. In the sixth, David Nole (Torrington, CT) was hit by a pitch leading off the inning, followed by a Kenneth Lin (Castro Valley, CA) single to center that moved Nole over to third. Nole would score on a Brian Doyle (Hopkins, MA) RBI groundout, as MIT pulled within 2-1.

MIT threatened in the bottom of the eighth, chasing Bart- ton from the game and loading the bases. And there's no better time to take a risk, right? When the economy sucks, there's no place to go but up, and we're supposed to be the ones turning crisis into possibility. Doh.

Where are the heck are all these fabulous opportunities, you ask? Fine, fine, dear Babson graduating Seniors, if you BEO me to, I'll be happy to give you some advice on how to enter the "No Such Thing as the Real World". For me, I've frequently been called "the Left and right, I hear Babson students saying that they can't find a job. You're probably thinking, 'Let's do the normal job-search-and-interview process, don't get stuck in a desperate industry, don't think that businesses have a good reputation right now, etc. etc. Hello people! Those are supposed to be MY lame excuses for avoiding the corporate leah.

So, the economy sucks. The job market is a shit-ash-blicky show. But to be honest, it sucks a lot less for Babson than it does for anyone else. You've attended the number one Entrepreneurial School in the world for you've done the right thing. Now, we have all experienced what it's like for a business to fail (or was that just MY FME business?). It's not that this is a "Big fail" usually isn't what it appears to be. And to make a wild assumption, there probably are a few first generation Babson students with support systems in place who won't allow for "failure,. You might visualize yourself: "I call it "family". No really. Most people's parents will allow for a few failures. While you're waiting, swearing to your parents that you're looking for a responsible job, there are so many other opportunities to the Beavers over Wheaton 8-7 on Saturday in come-from-behind fashion.

The Engineers would not go away however, tallying single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to stay in the game. MIT starting pitcher, Greg Magauran (Sandy, UT) doubled with one out in the fifth, scoring on Hyatt's second RBI single of the afternoon. In the sixth, David Nole (Torrington, CT) was hit by a pitch leading off the inning, followed by a Kenneth Lin (Castro Valley, CA) single to center that moved Nole over to third. Nole would score on a Brian Doyle (Hopkins, MA) RBI groundout, as MIT pulled within 2-1.

MIT threatened in the bottom of the eighth, chasing Bart- ton from the game and loading the bases. And there's no better time to take a risk, right? When the economy sucks, there's no place to go but up, and we're supposed to be the ones turning crisis into possibility. Doh.

Where are the heck are all these fabulous opportunities, you ask? Fine, fine, dear Babson graduating Seniors, if you BEO me to, I'll be happy to give you some advice on how to enter the "No Such Thing as the Real World". For me, I've frequently been called "the Left and right, I hear Babson students saying that they can't find a job. You're probably thinking, 'Let's do the normal job-search-and-interview process, don't get stuck in a desperate industry, don't think that businesses have a good reputation right now, etc. etc. Hello people! Those are supposed to be MY lame excuses for avoiding the corporate leah.

So, the economy sucks. The job market is a shit-ash-blicky show. But to be honest, it sucks a lot less for Babson than it does for anyone else. You've attended the number one Entrepreneurial School in the world for you've done the right thing. Now, we have all experienced what it's like for a business to fail (or was that just MY FME business?). It's not that this is a "Big fail" usually isn't what it appears to be. And to make a wild assumption, there probably are a few first generation Babson students with support systems in place who won't allow for "failure,. You might visualize yourself: "I call it "family". No really. Most people's parents will allow for a few failures. While you're waiting, swearing to your parents that you're looking for a responsible job, there are so many other opportunities to the Beavers over Wheaton 8-7 on Saturday in come-from-behind fashion.

The Engineers would not go away however, tallying single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to stay in the game. MIT starting pitcher, Greg Magauran (Sandy, UT) doubled with one out in the fifth, scoring on Hyatt's second RBI single of the afternoon. In the sixth, David Nole (Torrington, CT) was hit by a pitch leading off the inning, followed by a Kenneth Lin (Castro Valley, CA) single to center that moved Nole over to third. Nole would score on a Brian Doyle (Hopkins, MA) RBI groundout, as MIT pulled within 2-1.

MIT threatened in the bottom of the eighth, chasing Bart- ton from the game and loading the bases. And there's no better time to take a risk, right? When the economy sucks, there's no place to go but up, and we're supposed to be the ones turning crisis into possibility. Doh.

Where are the heck are all these fabulous opportunities, you ask? Fine, fine, dear Babson graduating Seniors, if you BEO me to, I'll be happy to give you some advice on how to enter the "No Such Thing as the Real World". For me, I've frequently been called "the Left and right, I hear Babson students saying that they can't find a job. You're probably thinking, 'Let's do the normal job-search-and-interview process, don't get stuck in a desperate industry, don't think that businesses have a good reputation right now, etc. etc. Hello people! Those are supposed to be MY lame excuses for avoiding the corporate leah.