Former SGA President Welcomes Class of 2004
Evan Gross
SGA President 2000

This article is reprinted from the August 27, 2000 edition of The Babson Free Press.

Welcome brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, cousins, grandparents, boyfriends, girlfriends, moms, dads, but most importantly, welcome class of 2004, new transfer students and exchange students.

As the president of the student body, on behalf of all fellow students, I would like to welcome you to your new home away from home.

Ladies and Gentlemen, please close your eyes. Imagine that it is tonight, around midnight. You have just returned from meeting fellow classmates and it is time for bed. When the lights go out, the question arises...what do I say to my roommate? Do I say, "goodnight?" Or do I say nothing? Better yet, when you have to do laundry for the first time, and you don't know if you should use warm or cold water when washing lights and darks, do you go ahead and ask the person you have always wanted to talk to?

I am sure numerous thoughts are running through your mind. We all have apprehensions in many different areas. Like you, my sister is going to be a first year student this year at the University of Miami. Throughout the summer Stef has been asking me questions about college, from how to handle an academic issue to how to balance time between her academic, social life, sports, and of course, going to the beach.

The fact of the matter is that throughout the next four years,

President Brian Barefoot addresses the class of 2004 during the graduation ceremony held on Saturday, May 15th, 2004.

Paul Orfalea Addresses Graduating Class of 2004
Louis Belott
News Editor

This year during the 85th Commencement ceremony at Babson College, Paul Orfalea was keynote speaker and was awarded with an honorary degree.

Orfalea is the founder of Kinko's, which was recently purchased by Fed-Ex. However, in order to get to this position, Orfalea overcame many difficulties.

Paul Orfalea could have given up many times throughout his life. A severe dyslexic, Orfalea went undiagnosed as a child and was unable to read at all as late as eighth grade. After failing twice, he finally graduated high school with a 1.2 GPA. Having started prior businesses with varying degrees of success, one could say that Orfalea fit the stereotypical entrepreneur profile perfectly.

After college, Orfalea borrowed enough money to set up the very first Kinko's nearby the University of California Santa Barbara. The 100 square foot store shared space with a taco stand, and was so busy at times that the only copier needed to be rolled out onto the sidewalk in order to be used.

After the success of the first store, Orfalea encouraged his friends, several of whom helped run the first store, to branch out and move to other college towns. Kinko's has been growing ever since.

"It was an easy business," says Orfalea. "How did I get the idea? I used to have a roadside vegetable stand."

President Barefoot's Last Words to the Class of 2004

It's my great pleasure to welcome you to the 85th commencement exercises at Babson College. This is the day you've been waiting for—and the entire Babson community shares your excitement.

You've been a terrific class—and we've had memorable moments working together to improve the student experience on campus. It was in large part through the leadership of your class that we've been so successful.

We've been through some difficult times, but I will not forget how you rallied after the tragedy of 9/11 to support each other and find strength as a community.

Over the past four years you've spent nearly 1,600 hours in the classroom and probably twice as many hours preparing for classes. You've also tried new opportunities, club participation, volunteer projects, start-up business ventures, and much more. And you've put just as much effort into creating a new Babson spirit on campus.

You might ask what was all of this intensive training for? What were we preparing you to do?

Our goal has been to prepare you for success not only in business, but in life. I believe you're prepared to make an impact, to show results and most importantly, to make a difference. How you'll make a difference comes from the attitude you bring with you to Babson, the skills you've developed, and the experiences you've had since you arrived on campus.

In the classroom or in consulting projects—through FME or MCE—you learned the importance of helping non-profits meet their financial and management challenges. You also provided leadership in a wide variety of volunteer activities.

Now you are uniquely prepared for the world—not only as it is today, but as it will be in the future. You have an advantage that is powerful and uniquely suited to a world that's rapidly changing.

We live in a world that is, and will be, increasingly driven by technology. The Internet and its successor technologies will enable all of us to connect in new ways. This will require new mindsets—and create them at an accelerated pace. There will be less time to consider opportunities.

Congratulations Class of 2004 From Dean Greene

I send every single member of the Class of 2004 sincere congratulations. But in addition, please accept my appreciation for helping me through my first year at Babson. You are an amazing class and you should celebrate this! Babson is known for being a college with an exceptional curriculum and you've come through with flying colors.

I have set a new Babson record for your four year graduation rate. Members of your class account for a wide variety of areas, including writing skills, business acumen, entrepreneurial prowess, and humanitarian practices. Way to go!

From you I learned about the Babson curriculum, hearing what you wish every next generation Babson student had to go through in IME, now that it is IME. I've learned about scholarship at Babson, sometimes from the Honor Students and sometimes from other students dedicated to learning more about a subject that they were really passionate about.

I learned more about athletics, seeing many sports that were new to me and learning new aspects of those sports, including such things as rugby scrums—are cute! And diving rules are elegant, and ice hockey rocks.

Talented artists at Babson create in almost every form of art imaginable. Your theater presentations are thoroughly enjoyable (it is not for nothing that Dean Mandolfo's office is now labeled the "Office of the Mayor").

Finally, know that you can dance. The Babson Dance Ensemble shares with the rest of us a talent that is admirably less talented to the ability to move in the most miraculous and enslaving ways.

However and perhaps most importantly, your sense of community defines Babson.

I can't wait to hear more about what you do next...the jobs you hold, the businesses you start, the way you give back to your communities, and the future Babson students you mentor and programs you advise. I am truly honored to be a part of the Babson community.

You helped me make this transition and I am grateful to you for that. This is an amazing place; you, along with your faculty, staff, curriculum, and programs are strikingly different than almost every other school. Now that you are alumni (almost), we look forward to your continued partnership in this continuing adventure.

My absolute best to you and your families,

We are fortunate to have the opportunity to take part in the developements—current events—of a Constitutional Law nature that have taken place today.

Three to come that have not yet been resolved, and I hope you will want to look at whether the law is sound, whether our class is over, your grades have been turned in, you're in your room, you're looking forward to whatever the future holds.

On the topic of Freedom of Reli- gious Speech, we're going to see what the Supreme Court decides the case. The Court's decision is due any day now. Will we have to scrap our greenbackers—the ones that say 'In God We Trust.' On the topic of Equal Protection, the same sex marriage decision could have a significant effect on Massachusetts on May 17.

We talked a little in class about the new health care reform. There might get amalgamated and about the effort under way to amend the U.S. Constitution to ban these drug cases in the years ahead. I hope that one thing you take away from class is the ability to read about these and other topics in the future—to no longer feel like you have no clue, and to think about them with a little more analytical ability—because of our time together.

Congratulations to the Class of 2004

TIM MANN
DEAN OF STUDENT

I hope that as you prepare for your graduation ceremony, that you have not been too busy these past four years at Babson College and truly believe that they were the best years of your life.

Your graduation is an outstanding accomplishment and I am certain that you will continue to take part in the activities of my choice. I was able to play on the hockey team, and I should have been able to take a leading role, timing which will be an everlasting part of your family's memory book.

As you embark on your professional careers and strive to maintain the many friendships that you have created at Babson, I hope you keep in touch with all of us here on campus. Whether it is by email, letter, or a visit, we look forward to being updated on your careers and professional accomplishments. I hope you pride in your Babson education will never fade. I hope you pride in you as Babson graduates.

I look forward, on behalf of all of us in Student Affairs, congratulations on your upcoming graduation! I am proud to have welcomed you at Commencement and soon after at your first homescoming celebration this fall.

In reference to the amazing people that Babson College is, I've been at Babson College, I propose all tell our incoming freshmen (who that they will be different from now or earlier.

I believe, imagine Babson College as its own little life system, no different than itself. The process of students growing up and maturing, as a student, is one that can be an adventure to achieve.

I believe, Babson College and Babson College leaving their imprint on us last more than four years, but when we hear the campus this May, we've gone. We're history.

Before graduating, we did our liv- ing at this wonderful institute for some time and it's time to "pass on" to the next generation of Babson students.

Do stupid things. Build relationships. Do good things for society. Take a debt and start a business to come out of debt. Don't live in a world of ord- inary. Don't make the same mistakes. Push your ambitions and you will get rejected. Start writing for the free press or just a club. College is about experiencing. Studying a specific topic has definite benefits, but the real education comes from learning who you are, not who your target market is. College may be four years and that

Going to school at Babson, it’s very easy to focus on money; after all, it is what we study in one of the top business programs in the nation. When choosing a job or a career, it is also very easy to focus only on the money involved and forget the other aspects of one’s life and career.

Last year I had a chance to listen to a lecture by Harvard Professor Dr. Mark Albin. He told a story about a group of 1000 undergraduates from an Ivy League school.

Upon graduation, they were asked what they were going to do with their lives. Five out of six, or about 1200 respondents, said they were taking a job that wasn’t exactly to their liking. The remaining 100 undergraduate with whom they wanted to pursue a career.

Why? Most likely because the job was nowhere near their interest seemingly available, or they were offered more money. As the other 250, they decided to go out and make money. They didn’t want to face the difficulties in the field in which they wanted to pursue a career.

Surely. Why? I mean, wasn’t it what you were working for all these years?

They are all working for a job, aren’t they?

If you’re a professional football player, then sure, you are working for a job. If you’re an artist, then you are working for a job.

The key here is that you are working for a job, not working for yourself. For yourself, you are working for yourself, but you are working for a job. If you’re an artist, then you are working for a job. If you’re an artist, then you are working for a job.

The key here is that you are working for a job, not working for yourself. For yourself, you are working for a job.

CDW Wishes the Best to The Class of 2004

The Center for Career Development would like to extend warm congratulations on your graduation from Babson! We have enjoyed helping you navigate the career development process over the past four years. Creating strong student profiles, interrupting and writing “thank-you” notes are activities you will continue to do throughout your career and our hope is that you leave Babson with a solid foundation of skills.

And now that you’ve graduated, you will need to use some of those skills. One of the key skills you will need to use is a job search tool that will continue to play an important role in your careers. Let your classmates know what you are doing, where you are living, what you like about your career choices. Always keep in touch with your faculty members. They enjoy hearing from alumni, and before long you may be requesting letters of recommendation from them for graduate school.

We hope you will keep in touch with CDW staff members who have helped you over the years. We remember your struggles and your successes, and we look forward to hearing more about your careers as they develop.

We encourage you to return to campus and help our current students prepare for their careers. You know better than anyone that advice from alumni is most compelling!

For those of you currently seeking employment, we hope that you will continue to work with us in the coming months. Regardless of where you are in your search, we can offer you resources and direction.

As you say goodbye to your undergraduate years keep in mind the following words of wisdom from Babson alumni, parents, faculty, staff and supporters. Your relationship with Babson is not ending, it is simply changing. We look forward to working with you as alumni and for you to gain the confidence and success in your career paths you have chosen. Good luck and best wishes for a wonderful journey!

and perhaps even less time to discover areas in which your skills you’ve learned here will be more valued than ever.

The world has changed. The technology that you act on and transform into entrepreneurial leaders, Babson-style leaders. This distinguishes this type of leader.

First, you have to have the opportunity to act and to see projects and opportunity and to act decisively. The opportunity may not in the form of a letter or a phone call. It may be an initiative in an existing company or a program in your community. The point is to always be looking for new and better ways to do things.

Second, you need to know how to motivate people who can help to deliver on the opportunities you identify. This means understanding the talents you need on your team and the configuration of those talents that work well with the very best people.

Third, you must have a willingness to take reasonable risk and to take advantage of the opportunities that are available. Most successful entrepreneurs incur failure before they have achieved their initial success. They have the courage to take the challenging path.

Finally, entrepreneurial leaders pay attention to a number of factors that are not just the financial metrics, but also a set of core values which include integrity, a sense of giving back to the community.

Our commencement speaker and businessperson extraordinaire Paul Orfalea, founder of Kinko’s, is a great example of what I mean. When he was in college, standing in line to use one of the campus copy machines late one night, he wondered why there weren’t more facilities to meet the high demand of students in the world stands in lines—and then complains to the people behind him, “It’s not right.” Not many see an opportunity.

Of those who see an opportunity, think there has to be a better way—very few have the courage to figure out ultimate and then get them done.

Paul was one of them. From his idea Paul had while waiting in line, Kinko’s has grown to become the world’s leading document and business services chain with more than 1,200 stores worldwide. Everyone here has much, much more than just a business.

The world has changed. The technology that you act on and transform into entrepreneurial leaders, Babson-style leaders. This distinguishes this type of leader.

For example, just last month, the Wall Street Journal reported that 27 million people are now using the Internet, and most of them use the Internet to shop online. The Internet is now a $50 billion industry. The world is changing, and you are part of that change.

To Media Services Seniors: Good Luck

JONATHAN GAWNE

To all the Media Services Seniors: So you’re all leaving and now will be expected to work for a living. Everyone wishes you good luck.

As always I feel it is my sacred duty to continue my tradition of giving you words of advice that will serve you well in the future. Things you may have slept through when we discussed them will come to teach it to you in a class.

Now you will no longer have the luxury of “sleeping through a 9AM class”, but will have to wake up far earlier to get to work on time. I know that some of you think you can do any job and still have a good time, but there are still some things you need to know.

The first isadvice you should always remember: Winning is better than losing. Being a难人 is always possible; Being able to laugh at oneself is extremely important; Experience often has a way of breaking down our brains; Money is not a true measure of success; Anything advertised on television is not necessarily a good deal; It is always easier to get a job when you have one; The answer, all the time, to “do you have a car?” is “yes;” Being a good listener is always a good idea when asking for favors; Good dogs will love you even if you bought them from a breeder; Never turn down a job (as long as it’s legal); Always marry the right person; Good food is always good; Nothing any good was written after 1988; Always vote for the most predictable candidate in this together; Poor corruptions, Power corrupts, Power corrupts absolutely; and of course...

Dear Jeremy,
From a very young age, you have had to deal with many, many challenges. Somehow, you maintain a positive attitude and rise above the difficulties. You move forward in strength, something I admire tremendously in you. For me, you personify you email signature:

"Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not, nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not, unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not, the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent. The slogan 'Press On' has solved and always will solve the problems of the human race."

- Calvin Coolidge.

Using your talent, genius, and education, may you continue to persevere and know you will always have my support and my love.

Courtney,
The road you have traveled thus far has been blessed with family, friends, and good fortune. Roads however, can prove to be difficult to travel over great distances. Your destination has yet to be chosen and the road you will travel surely will be set with curves, mountains, and maybe even treacherous terrain to cross. Be sure to always focus on the destination regardless of the roads you may travel... Values, which you, and only you, hold in the sanctum of your mind and heart, will provide safe passage.

Congratulations!!!

Track & Field

Katrina Majuk

Katrina was the captain of the women's Track and Field team. She was an incredible leader and a great competitor. Although she just missed earning All-NEWMAC, Katrina had a great season and scored a lot of points for the women's team. Her dedication, leadership, and work ethic will be missed next year.

Steve Marek

Steve set the school record in the 400 meter dash this spring. Battling injuries left over from his hockey season, Steve worked extremely hard to get himself into great shape for the big meets. Steve has an infectious personality, which always kept the team relaxed.

Cross Country

Matt Veilleux

Matt ran several personal bests during the cross country season. He also provided some of the more humorous moments during the season. Matt was a great leader and asset for the underclassmen. His ability to keep the team relaxed will be sorely missed next year.

Track & Field and Cross Country

Chris Perry

Chris was selected to the All-NEWMAC team after placing 5th in the league Cross Country Championships. He was also named the teams MVP. During the track season, Chris qualified for the DI1 New England, where he placed 6th. That showing earned him All-DI1 New England selection. Chris was a co-captain for both the Cross Country and Track & Field team.

Despite breaking his wrist during the cross country season, Matt ran some great races. It was his work ethic and dedication that earned him the Cross Country Award for Performance, Dedication, and Achievement. In track, Matt set the school record in the 1500m run and qualified for the DI1 New England and the ECAC Championships. Matt was a co-captain for both sports.

Swimming & Diving

Anne Gordon

Anne was the diving captain during her senior year as she brought a happy atmosphere to the diving board. Throughout her time diving she was a two time National Qualifier, four time top eight in NEWMAC Championships, and second in Meter diving record, and

Holly Hebert

Trying to balance two sports that overlapped, Holly found herself the captain of both the Women's Swim Team and Rugby Team. She helped lead both teams to successful seasons this past year and will be missed by both coaches for her hard work and dedication to the teams.

Lindsay Jones

Shortly into the new season, Lindsay needed emergency surgery that sidelined her for much of the first semester of the season. However, she still showed support for the rest of the team and made a comeback during the training trip to Australia and New Zealand. Lindsay helped the team conclude one of the women's best seasons with her great leadership.

Heather Zola

Heather came to the diving program, now to the sport, during her sophomore year. She showed great progress during her two seasons diving. Her senior year Heather proved again to be strong, and as she was one of the few who successfully made the transition from diving to swimming. Her improvements continued this time swimming in the pool.

Josh Woodbury

Josh was the captain for the men's swim team this past season. During his tenor he helped set records for the 800yd, Freestyle and 400yd Medley Relays. He led the team to a successful season through his example and out of water gatherings.

Ben Coffey

Ben concluded his swimming career at Babson with an awesome NEWMAC Champions meet. He helped lead the team to a state championship and was one of the few who successfully made the transition from diving to swimming. His versatility across the events will be missed in the years to come.

Kevin Ferrazzo

Kevin transferred to Babson for his sophomore year, and after taking a year off, he returned to the team his senior year. He was instrumental to the team's national provender and was a co-captain for both sports.

Max Leestringt

Max is only a year old in college, but he already has had an impact. Max is looking forward to improving his times and helping the team.

Additionally, Colleen was recently named Babson's Female Athlete of the Year. She was a 3 time Conference All Star, NEWMAC Rookie of the Year, ABC Regional All American and 3 time Babson softball MVP.

Lacrosse

Sarah Siciliano

Sarah is a 3 time all-newmac award winner and this year has been nominated for the Miss America Award to play in the North/South all star game in Maryland. She is outstanding in class and in the classroom with almost every statistic in all of NEWMAC. Sarah has lead Babson to one of its best records (10-7) and has lead us to a possible ECAC title (turnaround begins wed). If it is possible to be in place to 5 in place at the same time, then Sarah does it. She is everywhere on the field at all times. Sarah is the hardest worker I have ever coached. Sarah is a co-captain this year and will be VERY hard to replace next year.

Kaitlin Mackenzie

Kaitlin only started playing lacrosse her freshman year of college and has grown into a great player. Her hard work and determination showed by the fact that got her voted co-captain for the 2003-2004 season. Kaitlin's love of the sport is contagious and she makes all her teammates love the sport as much as she does. Kaitlin is the spiritual leader to the defensive unit and has led them in a very positive manner throughout the entire season. Kaitlin will be greatly missed by all her teammates.
