Inauguration Events Sure To Be a Hit on Campus

VICKY TO
News Bureau

This weekend, President Brian Barefoot will be celebrating three major events this weekend, including the Inauguration of President Barefoot. Homecoming and the Babson College Symposium on Global Management.

On Friday, September 23rd, Babson College will be inaugurating Brian Barefoot. The ceremony will take place on upper fields from 3:00 to 3:00 PM with a reception following.

The keynote speaker for the ceremony will be Thomas S. Murphy, former Chairman and CFO of Capital City. Special guests, including Richard M. Santorelli, President of the Franklin W. Olin School of Engineering, will also be present at the ceremony.

His presence is a symbol of the partnership between Babson College and Olin. Professor of Economics, will serve as the chief marshal, and the president of Olin will be William Mark My '64, chairman of the board of trustees. Over fifty accredited colleges will be taking part in the ceremony.

Students are strongly encouraged to celebrate the inauguration of President Barefoot. Therefore, classes during the time of the inauguration have been rescheduled so that all students will be able to attend the ceremony.

Friday at 8 PM a black tie President’s Ball will be held in the Webster center. Alumni, students, faculty, and staff are invited.

2001 Finances Show Drop In Endowment, Operating Loss

DJ SCHIEFNER
Consulting Editor

According to Babson College's Chief Financial Officer Hank Deneault, the college had an operating loss of $37.5 million in the fiscal year ending June 30th, 2001, with a drop in the endowment of 16.8 percent.

President Brian Barefoot commented, "We are not in serious trouble. We have our challenges, but we are not in serious trouble. The world has changed." Deneault noted that the drop in the endowment came because of two factors: a drop in investments, but more importantly, the use of endowment funds to run the college's operations.

The endowment fell from $217,455,391 in 2000 to $192,153,371 in 2001. Deneault notes further, however, that our endowment was consistent one of the highest performing in the nation according to a benchmark study conducted by Salomon Smith Barney, including a 40 percent growth rate five years ago.

The Babson Free Press is available for Free delivery in most major areas. Call (781) 329-0204 or fax (781) 329-0204 for subscriptions and advertising information.

Vol. 63 - No. 3
Thursday, September 19, 2002
INTERNET: WWW.BABSONFREEPRESS.COM

Inauguration Events Sure To Be a Hit on Campus

VICKY TO
News Bureau

This weekend, President Brian Barefoot will be inaugurating Babson's 11th President, and the first alum to lead the college. Babson will be celebrating three major events this weekend, including the Inauguration of President Barefoot. Homecoming, and the Babson College Symposium on Global Management.

Scott Timmons, Babson College's Marketing Director, stated, "This will be a blockbuster weekend!"

Inauguration weekend will begin this Thursday, September 19th, when MTV's "Say What? Karaoke," will perform in Knight Auditorium. David Holmes from MTV, will host "Say Babson Karaoke" beginning at 8 PM. The show is free of charge to all that attend.

On Friday, September 23rd, Babson College will be inaugurating Brian Barefoot. The ceremony will take place on upper fields from 3:00 to 3:00 PM with a reception following.

The keynote speaker for the ceremony will be Thomas S. Murphy, former Chairman and CFO of Capital City. Special guests, including Richard M. Santorelli, President of the Franklin W. Olin School of Engineering, will also be present at the ceremony.

His presence is a symbol of the partnership between Babson College and Olin. Professor of Economics, will serve as the chief marshal, and the president of Olin will be William Mark My '64, chairman of the board of trustees. Over fifty accredited colleges will be taking part in the ceremony.

Students are strongly encouraged to celebrate the inauguration of President Barefoot. Therefore, classes during the time of the inauguration have been rescheduled so that all students will be able to attend the ceremony.

Friday at 8 PM a black tie President's Ball will be held in the Webster center. Alumni, students, faculty, and staff are invited.

2001 Finances Show Drop In Endowment, Operating Loss

According to Babson College's Chief Financial Officer Hank Deneault, the college had an operating loss of $37.5 million in the fiscal year ending June 30th, 2001, with a drop in the endowment of 16.8 percent.

President Brian Barefoot commented, "We are not in serious trouble. We have our challenges, but we are not in serious trouble. The world has changed." Deneault noted that the drop in the endowment came because of two factors: a drop in investments, but more importantly, the use of endowment funds to run the college's operations.

The endowment fell from $217,455,391 in 2000 to $192,153,371 in 2001. Deneault notes further, however, that our endowment was consistent one of the highest performing in the nation according to a benchmark study conducted by Salomon Smith Barney, including a 40 percent growth rate five years ago.

The Babson Free Press is available for Free delivery in most major areas. Call (781) 329-0204 or fax (781) 329-0204 for subscriptions and advertising information.
Dave Santino  Staff Writer

Four years ago, Babson College had a dream — to renovate and expand the Center for Executive Education.

Now, after what seemed like eternity, the construction, that dream is a reality. The new facility, financed through a $52 million fundraising campaign, is the latest edition to the Babson family, housing the graduate and undergraduate business programs, and doubling the capacity of the dining room.

William J. Bigoness, Associate Dean of the School of Executive Education, said the expansion was essential. “For a number of years the demand for space at the CEE has exceeded our capacity. Thus, we were turning away business. The expansion will better enable us to meet that demand. In addition, our new classrooms and break out rooms contain several features designed to provide our participants with the optimum learning environment. We are excited to share this facility with the very best in the nation.”

The CEE has been in the expansion business for over 25 years. It currently offers three types of programs, including day, overnight, and long-form programs, consortium programs that involve a small number of non-competing companies, according to Bigoness, and custom programs, generally designed to meet the needs of a single client company.

Bigoness said that the center is one of the best in the nation. “We have been ranked by Financial Times for many years. Babson’s executive education program is also in the ‘Star Faculty’ category. CIO Magazine has also praised the program.”

The first year, CFO.com named the CEE’s custom program with EMU one of the ‘Top Introducing Programs’.

Bigoness believes that the CEE has several advantages over competitors. “We believe that three factors distinguish executive education programs at Babson. First, we offer in-depth knowledge and the client-firm we work with. We call this acquiring customer intimacy. Second, we teach our programs in an integrated fashion. Class sessions are focused around business challenges, not business disciplines such as finance or marketing.”

Third, our programs have a practical orientation and immediate feedback for firm participants when they return to work.

“The Center refers to its laurels, however. “Our vision of the CEE is not only to maintain, but to strengthen its reputation as one of the premier providers of executive education, said Bigoness. “Within five years we plan to be among the top ten Schools of Executive Education in the world.”

Bigoness also believes that soon-to-be inaugurated President Brian Barefoot will help the CEE achieve its goal. “President Barefoot has made it very clear that he is strongly committed to executive education at Babson. He is willing to help in any way he can. His business experience and network of corporate executives will be helpful to us moving forward.”

The slow economy has had a substantial impact on CEE, but Bigoness is confident that the Center can rebound. “The past year has been a very challenging one in the field of executive education. Nationally, executive enrollment numbers are down 25 percent. Babson is right at the national average in diminished business. We are confident that once the economy improves and the international situation stabilizes we will see increased demand for executive education.”

For more general information or to contact the CEE’s programs, e-mail exec@babson.edu.

Andrew Lyons for The Babson Free Press

Public Safety Stats

Prove Campus is Safe

Continue From Page 1

one arrest in 1999, two in 2000 and none in 2001. The arrest in 2001 was naturally the most significant, according to Larkin.

Similarly, drug abuse violations rose from 1999 to 2000. For 2000 there were 13 drug abuse violations, but in 2001, there were 42 violations, resulting in no arrests.

When asked about the rise in drug abuse violations, Larkin commented, “a lot of it was reported through various means.” Through the hard work of student advisors and members of the faculty.

School Posts $3.1 Million 2001 Operating Loss

Continue From Page 1

For the same year, the endow- ment at Bentley College also was down for the year. Bentley started the year with a $52 million endowment of $164,990,450 and ended the year at $164,106,480. The drop was 1.8 percent, slightly below that of Babson’s.

Babson’s endowment, $96 million, for tax purposes, is the Common Wealth of Massachusetts, noted a deficit of $8.1 million. Revenue was down on the form were $113 million. Contributions for fiscal year 2001 were at $11,000,000, down from $12,600,000 for the 2000 fiscal year, and Bowman, Babson controller, commented that contributions could be expected to continue to be low in the future. Both Babson and Babson, including the receipt of a large gift in fiscal year 2000.

The endowment at Bentley College was $31 million for long-term activities. Bentley had a $6.5 million deficit for fiscal year 2001. Babson had a $9 million deficit for the year 2001, and approximately $2 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, calls, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.

At the end of fiscal year 2001, Babson had $9 million in venture developments, sales, call on monies, on a similar amount, Babson’s remaining expenses would have been $2,053,000 for the year ending June 30th, 2001, or approximately $1 million for every dollar in contributions.
Soccer, Baseball Fields To Be Dedicated Saturday

Continued From Page 1

and William Rogers. Rogers graduated from Babson and served as an assistant coach and head coach of men's soccer. In 1976 and 1980, he coached Babson to NCAA Championship titles.

Robert Hartwell was the former Director of Athletics and head of men's soccer coach. In 1976, he coached Babson to its first ever NCAA Championship. He is currently the Athletics Director at Adelphi University.

Hartwell replies, "Babson continues to be internationally recognized for excellence. Having my name associated with a great institution means a great deal to me. My sincerest congratulations to Billy and Norm." Babyson is showing that history and tradition is the foundation to greatness.

Along with the new athletic field dedications, changes have also happened on the fields themselves. A fence and storage box was added to upper fields. Bleachers and a press box were also added to upper fields that look out on both the soccer and AstroTurf fields. Dugouts were complete on the softball field and a new backstop and batting cage were put in. A recreational volleyball pit was also constructed. Though most changes have been done, there are still minor changes that remain.

Francis Millerick, Director of athletics, comments, "We in the athletics department are truly excited about the completion of the Upper Fields Project. It has been a goal of ours dating back a few years and we now believe Babson has a first class, state of the art, outdoor athletics complex. Not only will this facility benefit our intercollegiate programs - men's and women's soccer, men's and women's lacrosse, field hockey and softball - but this will also enhance our recreation and intramural program. It is a terrific facility and one the Babson community should be proud of."

The Govoni field will be dedicated on Saturday morning at 9:15 and the Hartwell-Rogers field will be dedicated at 2:30.

Public safety chief John Jackson awaits his fate as he sat in the dunk tank at last Friday's organizational carnival.

Correction:
Last week's issue incorrectly stated that students will have the option to purchase their laptops at the end of their Babson career. Instead, students will have the option of purchasing a brand new laptop through ITS's offer.
Get the best in entertainment and information with AT&T Digital Cable and Broadband Internet.

If you’re a student, you need to call AT&T Broadband now. You’ll not only catch every new episode of TV’s most dysfunctional family, you’ll receive up to 200 of the hottest cable channels and premium movie networks. And with Broadband Internet, you’ll get a high-speed, continuous connection to everything the Web has to offer, including all The Osbournes music and images you can stomach!

1-866-309-4630

Sign up for both today and get FREE basic installation! Plus one FREE month of Broadband Internet and Select Digital Value Packages.

attbroadband-ne.com/fall

Confin restrictions apply. Call AT&T Broadband for complete details about services and prices. Certain services are available separately or as part of other levels of service, and all services are not available in d all areas. Additional charges for non-standard installation, additional outlet, equipment, change of service, programming access, wiring, and materials may apply. Franchise fees, taxes and other fees may apply.

Offer of free installation valid with purchase of select Digital Value Packages and AT&T Broadband Internet. AT&T Broadband Internet is provided separately than fulfilling of the Basic installation offered on DTV coupon only. Free value of coupon will be $41.95 which will be applied against regular installation charge of Basic installation ($41.95). No cash value for coupon. Please allow 4-6 weeks for delivery of coupon from date of installation. Credit Card will appear within 60 days of customer being contacted and receiving coupon to AT&T Broadband. This offer is valid for new customers only and does not apply to re-internadil or current customers, including customers who have been cancelled for 6 months. Digital cable installations after 120% of normal cable service. Digital cable installations offered only if TV AT&T Broadband Internet Basic installation incl

©2002 AT&T. All rights reserved. Offer expires 10/31/02.
Babson Ranks 31st in US News Business Rankings

LOUIS BELLOTT
Staff Writer

For the sixth consecutive year, Babson University, which is ranked 31st in entrepreneurship by U.S. News & World Report, Babson also ranked 10th out of 58 schools in the category of "Best Undergrada-tute Business Programs," a drop from 9th last year and 21st in 2000. Babson placed 10th in a new ranking called, "Programs That Really Work," a category that attempts to measure how well students apply classroom knowledge in real world situations through classroom activities and internships.

Babson's MBA program also received acclaim this time coming from the Wall Street Journal. The program named the, "#1 Hidden Gem," for the 2nd straight year and Ranked #5 in the Entrepreneurship category, behind Stanford and Harvard.

The college was also listed in Princeton Review's top 345 schools, and as many students learned via email this week, Babson also made Seventeen's list of "50 Coolest Colleges For Girls."

"It's very good for the school and it gets our name out," said Senior Kevin Denny. "It puts us on the map next to other business schools. It's especially important since we're such a small school."

Freshman Julie Iren added, "It's

Homecoming

To Sport

Five Contests

Continued From Page 1

chance to socialize and network. Kiddie rides, a bounce house, pony rides and other activities will be offered to younger children. Admission is $5 for those over 18, $10 for students 12-17, and free for 11 and under.

Wrapping up the weekend's events will be a special comedic performane by Chip Etten and Colin Mochrie from the ABC hit series, Who's Line is it Anyway? Tickets for Saturday's event will be available at the Reynolds Information desk at a price of $10 for students, $25 for all others.

Lauren Mably, organizer of homecoming weekend from the of-ice of special events offers, "This homecoming is distinctly unique from those of past years because we are welcoming a Babson alumnus as our new President. It speaks volumes to the tight knit community we have here, knowing that our President Barefoot is also a Babson graduate."

Forget free thought and speech. College would be nothing without free checking.

Fleet Student Banking Package

Everything you need in a checking account.

- Balance your semester budget with Fleet HomeLink Online Banking
- Automatically add to your summer savings with Autosave
- No annual fee for Student Credit Card
- Checks and branches located near campus and throughout the northeast

Visit a branch near you. Go to fleet.com/students. Or call 1-800-CALL-FLEET.

Fleet Student Banking Package offers end October 15, 2002. All Fleet accounts subject to approval. Open a Fleet Checking for $5.00. The Direct Payment Agreement is a separate contract. The interest rate you receive will vary depending on your creditworthiness, the amount of your Direct Payment and the amount of your Checking Account balance. For rates, call 1-800-624-4080 or your nearest Fleet office. Offer not available on liquid assets, Savings or Money Market Accounts. One account per student. Transfer of funds to or from another bank may be subject to a transfer fee. Other branches near campus and throughout the northeast. Account features subject to change. NMLS 98600.

Back to top
Wednesday
September 25, 2002
3-6 p.m.
PepsiCo Pavilion
The Webster Center
Babson College

FIND YOUR FIT

CAREER EXPO 2002
CAMPUS

Thursday, September 18, 2003

Grous Recruiting Students for 2004 Olympics

DAVE SANTINO
Staff Writer

Most of us probably haven’t started thinking about the Athens 2004 Olympic Games. After all, it was just a few months ago that we completed the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, and the Athens Games won’t take place for another 23 months, August of 2004. But to Izakia Grous, Athens 2004 is right around the corner. Grous, a Babsan sophomore and Athens native, is trying to get qualified Babson students to volunteer their time at the Athens Games. The volunteers will help in areas such as information technology, public relations, hospitality, medical services transportation, and energy management. Grous will volunteer his time in international relations and protocol.

“Everyone is welcome,” he said. “The Athens 2004 Organizing Committee will find living space for the selected volunteers, and also have relatives they can stay with. There is an application process, which includes a teleconference interview. Volunteers will be trained by using e-learning and the internet.”

Grous has already started helping the Athens 2004 Organizing Committee. This summer, he was an intern in the marketing department, and worked in ticketing, which includes the printing, marketing, selling, and distribution of the tickets.

Grous, and practically the entire nation of Greece, is passionate about the Olympics, undoubtedly because the Games originated in Athens. The 2004 Games will mark the first time the Olympics have been held in Athens since the modern games started in 1896. The Greeks have been part of Greek tradition ever since the ancient Olympic Games started in 776 B.C. (in Olympia, Greece) and continued on as the “Olympics”.

“During the Games all wars would stop (known as an Olympic Truce) and all city-states would send their best champions to compete against each other,” said Grous. “The ones that won first place in an Olympic event were considered heroes in their hometowns and were awarded lifetime salaries/property. It is often said that there was a tradition in some cities to tear down the city walls when the champions returned from the Games in order to honor them and because with champions like these, the city does not need walls.” Many Olympic champions went on to become statesmen and generals. Interestingly, there were no medals then, but crowns made out of wild olive branches were awarded to the winners.

Grous said the modern Olympics are rivaled by no other sporting event. “When I look at the Olympics, I think that it feels like you are part of something very big and very wonderful. It’s the only regularly sched- uled event in our times that draws so many people together.”

He is especially looking forward to the Athens Olympics, but Grous also plans to help in future Games. “I am going to Turin in 2006 for the Winter Olympic Games and Beijing in 2008. If New York City is successful in its bid to host the Games in 2012, I am going there as well.”

Grous somehow manages to balance his Olympic work with several other activities, including managing his own travel business, Grous Traveling, which allows him to capitalize on the upward trend in alternative forms of tourism and offer an opportunity to people looking for a taste of nature, a touch of culture and a trip full of adventure in the beautiful outdoors of Greece.”

Grous said Sirius Trekking will create a special Olympics package, which will allow people to get to know the rest of Greece before or after the Games. In addition to managing Sirius Trekking, he is also a member of the Student Government Association, Babson Marketing Association, and Babson Players.

Grous said that the Athens 2004 volunteer program is an excellent opportunity for Babson students, and he hopes they take advantage of it. “For some people, this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. It is good resume material for Babson students, as well as an excellent networking opportunity.” Any Babson student interested in volunteering at the Athens 2004 Olympic Games should contact Grous at igroz@babson.edu for more information.

New Club to Foster Interest in Mass Media

DAVE SANTINO
Staff Writer

In an age where Babson is a leading institution for entre- preneurship education, one might think there is no room here for a business major also interested in mass media. But this is not the case at the Babson Communications Club is working to help change that perception. Now in its inaugural year, the organization will provide students who are interested in media-related areas (print journalism, radio/television journalism, public relations, media literacy, marketing, etc.) with the opportunity to associate with other students who have similar interests.

The inaugural meeting will be held Wednesday, October 2 in McEndoo 241, at 6 p.m. with time and location subject to change. All are welcome to attend.

This club is great for students who want to major in business, but also enjoy mass media-related topics.

The club’s advisor is Renee Holfeltz, an Associate Professor of Communications at Babson, who has extensive knowledge of mass media issues and industries and specializes in media literacy. Her wide range of contacts in both higher education and the professional fields of journalism, new media and cable television, will provide opportunities for guest speakers, seminars and special events for Club members.

The communications club wants to foster Babson stu- dents’ appreciation for mass media and aid students in pur- suing a career in a media-related field upon graduation. A club can be a resource for students who want to secure internships in a media-related field. Because of the skills of the club members, the group intends on using its PR skills in promoting campus events through various local, regional, and national media.

The group will plan for guest speakers from all areas of the media. The club is also in the process of forming a monthly forum to discuss issues, including the media’s coverage of current events, media literacy and changes in the fields of journalism, advertising, public relations, broadcasting, publishing and new media.

Members will create a Blackboard space, which will include links to useful media and writing-related websites, the opportunity to be part of an e-mail list to receive updates of events in the journalism field and trips to various media outlets such as the WGBH, the Boston Globe and New England Cable News.

According to Holfeltz, a number of Babson students have strong talents and interests in the intersection of mass media and business. A number of students have had success in both the creative and managerial sides of media industries. “Babson graduates have become music video producers, internet executives, newspaper columnists, theatrical producers, promoters and directors. They have also had success at cable networks like ESPN,” she said.

This club is great for students who want to major in business, but also enjoy mass media-related topics.

The Bacson College Department of Public Safety recognizes the need to have the Babson community’s assistance if we are going to effectively perform our duties. In an effort to encourage calls from those members of the Babson community who are not normally contact Public Safety whenever they have complaints, concerns or information, we have installed a confidential caller line.

Although we prefer to converse with individuals, we acknowledge the fact that some people wish to leave information anonymously. To protect the identity of callers, all calls will be directed to an answering machine that does not have caller ID.

The number is 781-237-8164.

If you need information or have immediate concerns, please call extension 5555 from a campus telephone.

Andrew Haynes for The Babson Free Press

Seth Ginsberg '03 and Jeff Greenberg '03, host of The Babson Free Press radio show, take time out to pose for a picture.
IMC Classes Have Many Positive Rewards

MARIE PROKOPENTS
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Although IMC I and II may often seem unrelated to business, the IMC program teaches skills that are vital to a student's success. IMC not only teaches students how to work well in groups, but also how to sit through long lectures, and most importantly how to view business problems from a number of different perspectives.

Teamwork is an essential skill that every business student must exemplify. I agree with some students that writing a 50 page paper with a group may feel like a daunting task. But, when you go out into the real world, regardless of your profession, you are going to have to work in a team at some point. How well you are able to function and lead that team may be the reason you are promoted, or even fired.

The group work is difficult, but there are groups that are stuck with slackers. That's life, and you have to learn how to deal with it. The skills you are learning now are going to help you succeed in life. So instead of abhorring the group work, think about how much it will do for you someday.

I also agree that sitting through an entire IMC II class can be torture someday, especially if it begins at 8 A.M. And sometimes you would just rather sleep when the lights go off and the overhead projector goes on. But, long classes are great practice for your future meetings with your bosses and fellow employees. You just have to learn how to sit through a long lecture without falling asleep, and IMC is the perfect way to do that.

The constant cold calling also makes sure that you learn not only how not to sleep, but also how to pay attention. Most importantly, IMC not only gives you a business foundation, but also teaches you how to attack a problem from different angles. Sure, you've heard this a thousand times from your professors, but someday you will be faced with a situation where you will realize the good IMC did for you.

For me, this happened at a job interview last year, when I was suddenly asked a question in the interview about every single aspect of business. I could sit ex- actly four years and four months ago, but had used the seven days in between and, of course, the interview, to think about every aspect of business, or at least every important aspect. So I tried to answer the question. I can't say I did a great job, but I did try to answer the question. And, I got the job.

So next time you are in your IMC II class, remember that someday, you will be able to talk to other people about business as if you were an expert, and then you will realize that you really are an expert.

School Should Better Support for Finance

ANDREW BOYSEN
MANAGING EDITOR

The opinion that I've recently come up with is not one that you will frequently hear a finance major say, let alone believe. In my opinion, our school does not spend enough money on finance education. Finance is one of the most important things in our economy, and there is plenty of investment in finance. Babson College to divert research funding to entrepreneurship.

The Center for Career Development compiles statistics about what fields Babson graduates go into. The latest numbers are for the class of 2001 (class of 2003 data is not yet available). In job functions, there are several finance categories. They are corporate finance, financial analysis, investments and market research. Thirty-four percent of those hired from the class of 2001 went into these job functions. If you add accounting, which is considered to be related to finance, that number goes to 62 percent.

Entrepreneurship may be an important part of our undergraduate curriculum, but it is not an important part of our graduate curriculum. That is the opinion of the school's management faculty.

Some would argue that we should keep spending a disproportional amount on entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the sub-titles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Some would argue that we should keep spending a disproportional amount on entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Some would argue that we should keep spending a disproportional amount on entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Some would argue that we should keep spending a disproportional amount on entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.

Two major arguments that can be made in favor of the current finances are: lack of investment in entrepreneurship and business. The foundation that this college was built on. Even in looking at the subtitles on the Babson website, there doesn't seem to be any significant investment in entrepreneurship, and 13 times the resources, if finance and accounting are considered together, as some of their resources could be pooled.
Some Classes Lack Relevance to Students
Babson Classes Should Contain More Relevance to Business Education

RYAN BRENNAN
Contributing Writer

After watching a beautiful weekend pass by through my green windowills, I began to wonder about the relevance of some of the classes that we have to take. I came to the conclusion that one entrepreneurial schol in the country, with the interest of studying business, not analyzing the deeper themes of 'The Hobbit,' or 'Jews Without Money.'

However, here I am enrolled in two classes that seem pointless to me, stuck with a roommate that I see all the time, and cannot get anywhere because of the lack of transportation. I am going to Babson College to learn how to excel in the business world, not how to analyze the sexual orientation of Watson.

I noticed that he has the same professor for both his rhetoric B and A.H. classes. In these two classes, similar points are made and the same type of work is assigned. Even books with the same subliminal message is read. It's a waste of time, and I cannot get anywhere because of the lack of transportation. I am at Babson College to learn how to excel in the business world, not how to analyze the sexual orientation of Watson.

Is it fair that I had to sit in my dorm room and listen to a beautiful Saturday weather drift by because had 150 pages to read for a class that goes hand in hand with another class that I had 100 pages to read on top of my business homework? I have no idea what reading out of class has to do with my own business, but I find myself asking people confusing questions. Why does Baggins have his financial information in his accountant's office? Does Holmes ever answer his questions?

O Time Spent Eating at Trim is Always a Bad Time

GABRIEL SCHAFFZIN
Contributing Writer

Normally, I don't like to write articles about issues on campus. After all, most students related op-eds end up being the writing complaining about the food. We really know how to fix and don't really pose any specific solutions for fixing this issue. However, I think it's about time something made a comment on the food at Trim.

And by "made a comment," I mean, 'complained.' Who decided that we couldn't make our own sandwiches any more? Who thought it would be easier if the pasta line was the same as the burrito line? And who refuses to just put a chick patty on that bun instead of getting forced into the pre-made baskets?

Don't get me wrong. I still love Trim, but the constant flow of chaotic pit- mies makes me oh-so happy. And when you have a salad with raw food don't make me nauseous, they are helpful in helping me decide whether to Trim it up or head over to Reynolds. But frankly, I am sick of turkey dinners. And when the next turkey dinner rolls around (most likely in the next three days), all I want is to make my own sandwich with my own pre-made baskets. I want to stand in a twenty-minute line anymore. I did it last year, and need I say more?

On my way out of Trim once I noticed a note on the comment board that read: "Open this year to something cynical, yet con- structive, to the Trim staff." How much more do you want to have the sandwich line or the way the new salad bar was set up, and instead of responding in an equally constructive man- ner, the manager (I believe his name is Mark) responded with, "gild you like the sandwich line, enjoy your salad." Come on now - Mark could have thrown a reasonable response here. He didn't feel the student was appropriate. But to respond in the way I have described which he did, I feel, was wrong.

In summary I would just like to say that Trim is not the best. Old Mr. Trim is turning in his grave, this year's Trim is not quite what he imagined it to be. I am friendly. I call on SGA, the administration, and the students pressure. I want to make the place better, and I call on Sodexo managers to respond appropriately.
Oil Company's Statements are Full of Gas

RYAN BRENNAN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

In a year where the American public has seen scandal after scandal on Wall Street, another company has been invited to join the party. ChevronTexaco, it has been said, evaded $3.25 billion in taxes, on the federal and state levels, from 1970 to 2000. The way that they "pulled the wool over their eyes" by buying oil from Caltex, a venture in which Chevron and Texaco both owned 50% before their merging in 2001, at inflated prices.

The jaw-dropping barrel of oil at an average of $4.55 higher than the market price, Chevron overstated deductions for its costs on its income in the US. This, however, generated a much greater income for Caltex, which is located in Indonesia.

The Indonesian government charges a 5% income tax, which is higher than the corporate income tax in the US. The amount that remained was never taxed in the US, but the company back in the US would get the money that was taken in Indonesian taxes.

All of this was published recently in research paper by accounting professors. However, it seems like they are beating a horse that has been dead for fifteen years. Because it was all previously settled with the IRS.

In the 90's, Chevron paid $675 million to settle a dispute with the San Francisco based IRS in a case it lost. The case covered the time period from 1979 to 1987. For this reason, the San Francisco office continued to investigate the situation. Through this second investigation, hundreds of documents containing information about the oil deal with Caltex entered the public record, even though the company refused to provide them.

This second case was closed after the officials at the IRS headquarters in Washington overruled the San Francisco office. Nothing ever occurred with this second case because the overriding happened so close to the discovery of the documents. However, the documents were still out in the public and something was inevitably going to happen with them.

Now, almost a decade later, Jeffrey Gramlich and James Wheeler have tracked down the dead, and seem to be directing to stir up a hornet's nest. Spokesmen for ChevronTexaco are arguing that the case has already been settled with the IRS and there is no going back. However, the state is worth $4.55 million dollars and is hardly enough for the $3.25 billion "stolen" from the US government.

Babson Junior Designs Instant Messenger Program

ADAM KORNGOLD
BUSINESS AND TECHNOLOGY EDITOR

Babson student Matthew DiDomino '04 has recently started his own web business that has quickly expanded to become one of the largest instant messenger conversation programs. BuddyProfile.com, which was founded by DiDomino last January from his Babson dorm room in Park Manor South, has taken off among students.

"I want to start an additional service to enhance profiles," says DiDomino. At the time, information about instant messenger profile services took DiDomino four hours a day of programming time for almost an entire semester. Currently, Matt has to constantly update the website to fix bugs in order to improve the service.

So far, over 430,000 instant messenger users have signed up for BuddyProfile.com, and each day an additional 1500 register.

So far, over 430,000 instant messenger users have signed up for BuddyProfile.com, and each day an additional 1500 register.

The website provides a service for setting up a miniature webpage that is located in the buddy information window on AOL's instant messenger program. The user can highly customize their profile using this service.

Babson Junior Designs Instant Messenger Program

ADAM KORNGOLD
BUSINESS AND TECHNOLOGY EDITOR

Babson student Matthew DiDomino '04 has recently started his own web business that has quickly expanded to become one of the largest instant messenger conversation programs. BuddyProfile.com, which was founded by DiDomino last January from his Babson dorm room in Park Manor South, has taken off among students.

"I want to start an additional service to enhance profiles," says DiDomino. At the time, information about instant messenger profile services took DiDomino four hours a day of programming time for almost an entire semester. Currently, Matt has to constantly update the website to fix bugs in order to improve the service.

So far, over 430,000 instant messenger users have signed up for BuddyProfile.com, and each day an additional 1500 register.

So far, over 430,000 instant messenger users have signed up for BuddyProfile.com, and each day an additional 1500 register.

The website provides a service for setting up a miniature webpage that is located in the buddy information window on AOL's instant messenger program. The user can highly customize their profile using this service.

Cafe Nila Delivers Right to Your Door

JONATHAN LEE
STAFF WRITER

The typical Babson college student has had his fair share of late night Chinese food frequently taking out or receiving the回忆, "The Weck, and College Square Pizza. Starting this semester, students who love Chinese and pizzas have the opportunity to substitute cafeteria dining with fine Indian cuisine provided by Cafe Nila, an Indian food delivery service.

"We all know that the only options for late night delivery are dominos and chinese food. People express the need to want a different type of cuisine for late night snacks. Tasteful Indian food is now available as an alternative choice," says Raj. A certain Nila mission is "To deliver the highest quality, authentic Indian Food to those who can truly appreciate its taste, aroma, and experience."

"I have not used it yet, but I am excited that we are able to order Indian food online and receive it in my dorm room," says Anuradha Kajaria '04.

In order to provide a solution to the typical "I'm too hungry" headache, a new Indian food delivery service was founded by Raj. "Cafe Nila was started so that people could have the option of ordering Indian food from a reliable, established restaurant that is not associated with an Indian food delivery service. Cafe Nila is now available in the area to receive orders by calling 787-3953.

Orders can be placed online on Raj's website throughout the day and will be delivered by 10:30.

Cafe Nila is made up of a network of professional caterers and delivery personnel, and hence is able to deliver high quality food to provide a pleasant experience to the customers. The user-friendly design of its website provides abundant information of its appetizers, entrees, rice, desserts, and beverages. It caters to its customers by allowing orders from the website 40 items. It also allows someone who has never tried Indian food to order music, movies, and even Indian food. Cafe Nila is working heavily to promote its business, and it is possible to be unfamiliar to insac food. In fact, 96% of all orders have been placed by Americans.

Cafe Nila, which opened in the middle of the semester, has been increasing its marketing efforts here on Babson's campus. One can learn more about the business itself as well as the foods that they offer. www.cafenila.com.
More Corruption Discovered at Tyco

CORNELIUS TANASE
STAFF WRITER

Early this week, more information concerning the illegal financial actions of former Tyco CEO Dennis Kozlowski was exposed to the public.

The company is filing a lawsuit against its former CEO citing that he exploited the company for funds and took actions to conceal the remaining paperwork.

One example of how Mr. Kozlowski abused his privileges of CEO was in the funding his wife’s 40th birthday. The party began four days prior when one hundred invitees were flown to the Italian island of Sardinia and placed at the Hotel Cala dei Volpe Resort.

On the final night of the event, a large fountain was created, and thousands in cash were unveiled in crystal glasses to be consumed by dancing to an elegant band beside the pool area. Following this, guests were served dinner with wine on tables with incredible linens and extravagant decoration. Next, guests would drink Stoli vodka that poured from the gargoyles of a large ice sculpture.

New CFO of Tyco Brings About Change

PATRICK REARDON
STAFF WRITER

On Wednesday, amidst the silence of investors, David Fitzpatrick was named the new finance chief of Tyco International, a diversified manufacturing and service company. Meanwhile, on the very next day, Dennis Kozlowski, the former CEO of Tyco, was accused of stealing more than $178 million from the company and obtaining more than $490 million through fraudulent stock sales.

Fitzpatrick now faces the onerous task of unearthing the tangled financial mess that was left by former CEO Dennis Kozlowski and his chief financial officer, Mark Swartz. Speaking of Dennis Kozlowski, his reputation sank precipitously once again when he was accused of stealing more than $170 million from the company and obtaining more than $490 million through fraudulent stock sales along with Mark Swartz, former Tyco chief financial officer. Indeed, an allegation of enterprise corruption by Robert Morgenstern, the Manhattan district attorney, both men were led into court on Thursday, where they pled not guilty.

Facing up to 30 years in jail if they are found guilty, Kozlowski and Swartz were released on bail set at $100 million. For Kozlowski, these new charges follow his earlier indictment for evading personal sales tax on art purchases. This earlier indictment in May led to Kozlowski’s resignation from Tyco as well as a financial fusillade.

In addition to the charges launched against Kozlowski by the Manhattan district attorney, the Securities and Exchange Commission filed civil charges that could prevent him from holding corporate office. The cover of a prominent, aggressive, and respected executive is now showing the vitriol of a willed power.

As an excellent David Fitzpatrick moves into his plush new office to start what figures to be a promising and productive career at Tyco, a downtrodden Dennis Kozlowski trudges dependently to a courtroom to defend himself against some serious allegations. Ironically, Fitzpatrick will be working to remove the shadow of scandal that was created under the guiding hand of Kozlowski.
Russia Attempting to Work Out Problems

LIZA KVINT
Staff Writer

Two weeks ago, a prominent Russian businessman and Dumah, a Russian Parliament member, was brutally gunned down as he was making his way home from dinner with some friends. As many other Russian business leaders and politicians, prior to his death, this man was implicated in several large financial and criminal scandals. Also, like many other Russian business leaders, he never even had a chance at due process. Vigilante justice against the rich and powerful usually takes the day here.

However, the rest of the civilized world needs to look at this in perspective. After all, as the popular saying here in the former evil empire goes: one can’t expect Russia to do in a few years what America did in 200. The Russians are still figuring things out. And, all around are obvious signs that they are getting some things quite right.

Last week, I came back from Gilenglend, a Russian resort town on the Black Sea, which was host to the Russian Annual National Film and Arts Festival. That little town is a bright star of development.

In the past three or four years, it has managed to transform itself from a crumbling land full of poverty to a flourishing spot for middle class Russians to come and relax. Yes, by the way, there is now such a thing as a middle class Russian, another good development.

The town’s Mayor and very active Vice-Mayor have managed to build up over 30 kilometers of coastline out of the 100 the town possesses. They have built smooth new highways, which make Boston traffic seem even worse, if that’s possible, beautiful observation and swimming areas around many of the natural waterfalls found in the area, and they have managed to raise the price of land to nearly double its going rate just two years ago.

Also, with the help of marketing specialists, they have determined the price ranges on all items necessary for a proper vacation from hotel room fees to ice cream cones, which middle-class Russians can afford. By keeping the prices within those ranges, Gilenglend is able to avoid getting too expensive for its biggest customer segment.

The result of all the above mentioned efforts is a wonderful town full of bars, restaurants, night-clubs, seashore clubbing and all other amenities necessary for a great time by the sea. However, wonderful as this all may be, we’re still talking about Russia. And Russia still has quite a way to go in order to catch up with the US. So, that one forget where he is and mistakenly assume he is in Miami instead of Gilenglend, there are several friendly reminders. One must always bring his own net to the ping-pong tables.

Remember to check the water schedules, which are very specific as to during which hours there is cold water, during which there is hot, during which there is both hot and cold water and which hours give one no water at all—all these being the most frequent. And finally, if there are still doubts, just look outside the window. There stands a big white marble statue of Lenin, still presiding over all activities with a majestic sweep of the arm.

Inside the Kremlin can be found many marble treasures, along with the government of the nation of Russia.

Attack on Iraq Being Discussed as Imminent

VIRAL KAPADIA
Staff Writer

A very sensitive question confronting both the United States and the world is will the US attack Iraq? The question has created tensions for many world leaders and their countries.

Many nations in the world are also not yet sure if attacking Iraq is the step that should be taken. Countries are divided on the issue of whether or not an attack on Iraq is the right action to take.

Most Middle Eastern countries are against the attack and feel that it should definitely be averted. The only two Middle Eastern nations who have not fully opposed a war are Jordan and Egypt, but they both have signed an accord with Israel. Egypt feels that Iraq should allow UN inspectors back into the country and avert a war, but says that if the UN approves of the war, Egypt will support it.

Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi also feels that all efforts should be made for Iraq to comply with the UN inspectors before initiating an attack. The prime minister also stated that all actions taken should be done through the UN. As of now, the prime minister did not state whether Japan would support an attack or not.

Pakistan’s Prime Minister, Pervez Musharraf, stated that he was in support of an attack on Iraq only if it is approved by the UN. The reference that has been made from the comments made by the President during his speech in New York is that Pakistan might not support action against Iraq.

The president also raised a few other issues during his speech, and said that a potential war on Iraq should not lead the US to change its continuing focus against the search of al-Qaeda terrorists in the Afghanistan region. He also stated that the attack might bring about a change and tensions in South Asia.

This past weekend, Saudi Arabia’s foreign minister stated the country’s position on the war on Iraq. Saudi Arabia, just like many of the other nations, has said that it will support action against Iraq only if it is approved by the UN. He also stated that if the UN approves an attack on Iraq then Saudi Arabia will permit the United States to use their bases if necessary.

Israel is in support of the US, and is also expecting an attack from Iraq. During the Gulf War Iraq had launched 29 scud missiles into Israel, and they might do it again. This time Israel is well prepared and is more confident about successful precautions of such missiles. Israel is also internally preparing its citizens and emergency rescue stations of Lenin, still presiding over all activities with a majestic sweep of the arm.

Israel is preparing itself defensively, as well as defensively. Israel is unsure if it will or will not remain as quiet as it did during the Gulf War, due to an American request to prevent unrest in the Arab world.

Afghanistan’s President Hamid Karzai stated that he would like to see the people of Iraq have a peaceful life. He also stated why he is in support of action against Iraq. He did not state if Afghanistan would necessarily support military action.

The international community is divided, and it is relying on the UN as of now.

The issue of Iraq is a very sensitive for the entire world as it is something that every one wants to think about very carefully because making a decision. Many nations have brought up the issue that if the US attacks Iraq on the basis that it is a threat to the nation, then other nations will start attacking those who pose a threat to them. This may create a circular effect in the world and lead to chaos.

It is very important that the US and the UN work together, and that there is strong international coalition if these is an attack.
The Arts

Blues Festival Provides Off-Campus Excitement

LINDSEY ALIX

STAFF WRITER

Want to get off-campus next weekend? Well, the Boston Blues Festival is the place to go. Every year Boston celebrates Boston Blues Week, which takes place on the last weekend of September and is New England's only free, two-day blues festival. It all started in 1966, when local bluesmen Jocelyn Grey Sarni put together the first festival. Since then it has been sponsored by the Boston Blues Button. The festival offers performances with the help of the Metropolitan District Commission and the Hatch Memorial Band Shell on Boston's Charles River Esplanade.

This year the festival starts off on Wednesday, September 25, with a Boston Blues party at the Cutty's Irish Pub restaurant. Kick off the festival by celebrating with Tim Gearan and a Boston Blues webcast. On Thursday, the party is at 10 p.m., and features the Cutty's Irish Pub Blues Button. The button can also be purchased at the Blues Festival in Sorel.

Showing the button at various local businesses during Blues Week, from 25th to October 2nd, will allow you to enjoy savings and benefit the Blues Festival. For example, shows at Redbones and Bluebones BBQ in Somerville will get you a $5 off coupon, or a staff member with the purchase of an entrée. At the Times Irish Pub, button holders will receive a free cup of award winning chowder with the purchase of an entry. A complete listing of the participating venues can be found online at the Boston Blues Week site, www.bostonbluesweek.com.

The music for the Blues Weeks begins on Friday night with The Cutty's Irish Pub. A performance by Big Jay McNeely and his band is also performed at the Hatch Memorial Band Shell on Saturday night.

One Hour Photo Good, But No Masterpiece

JULIAN SIMCOCK

STAFF WRITER

"When we look through our photo albums, we're seeing a record of only the happy moments in our lives...no one ever takes a photograph of something they want to forget," by Parsley.

This quote from Robin Williams' character early on in the movie "One Hour Photo" is precisely what you wouldn't want to take a snap shot of this movie. Mark is a dedicated and his work director of "One Hour Photo", intends for the movie to be an intense, demoralizing, and paranoia thriller, with Robin Williams playing an eerie photo developer named By Parsley. By Parsley is a bored and lonely man with no family and no friends, so he begins to live vicariously through the pictures he develops - especially those of a local family whose pictures he has been developing for years. As you can imagine, one thing leads to another, and soon By gets a little carried away with his need to take part in the local family's affairs.

Although the movie strives for a psychological horror story line, for reasons one or another, it never feels very close to horror. It even makes the movie leave you much more disturbed than frightened. Having said all these things and preaching mostly about the failures of the movie, I will say that the movie was very well made, and has some fantastic dispersions of cinematic creativity; namely, the cinematography. They did a wonderful job of having Robin Williams' character blend into a bleak person, both emotionally and aesthetically. He is always dressed in stale white or gray. His hair, face, and clothing all seem to have the same bland color. He fades into the interior of his gray apartment, and even his car is an off-white color to suit the rest of his uniform and uneventful life.

The lives of the others within the movie, however, are filled with color, and the photos that Robin Williams develops are always filled with the vibrant colors one would expect to see in a commercial for Kodak.

Comrie Nielsen (Lautz) (as 'Gladie') delivers a mediocre performance but remains in the background when compared to the complete transformation of Robin Williams, who has departed from his usual quirky, friendly role in "Patch Adams" and "Good Will Hunting," into a demented, obsessive psycho.

See the movie if you're a movie buff and enjoy well crafted movies regardless of their tone or content. If you're really interested in seeing the extreme transformation of Robin Williams from "friend to foe" then you'll find it interesting. For everyone else there is a new one to see on a Saturday afternoon - look elsewhere.

Movie Listings for Framingham 16

Friday and Saturday September 20-21

Austin Powers, PG-13

4:30, 7:15, 9:20

Ballistic: Ecks Vs. Sever, R

1:00, 3:15, 5:30, 7:45, 10:00

The Banger Sisters, R

1:00, 2:00, 4:00, 5:00, 7:00, 8:00, 9:30

City By the Sea, R

1:10, 4:10, 7:10, 9:45

The Four Feathers, PG-13

1:00, 4:00, 7:00, 9:55

The Good Girl, R

2:20, 4:50, 7:20, 9:50

Men With Brooms, No Rating

2:30, 5:00, 7:00, 10:00

One Hour Photo, R

1:30, 2:30, 4:15, 5:15, 7:40, 8:00, 9:30

Possession, PG-13

7:10, 9:40

Serving Sara, PG-13

1:46

Signs, PG-13

2:00, 4:45, 7:15, 9:45

Trapped, R

2:15, 4:45, 7:15, 9:40

XXX, PG-13

1:10, 4:10, 7:10, 9:50

Sunday - Thursday September 22-26

Austin Powers, PG-11

4:30, 7:15, 9:20

Ballistic: Ecks Vs. Sever, R

1:00, 3:15, 5:30, 7:45, 10:00

The Banger Sisters, R

1:00, 2:00, 4:00, 5:00, 7:00, 8:00, 9:30

City By the Sea, R

1:10, 4:10, 7:10, 9:45

The Four Feathers, PG-13

1:00, 4:00, 7:00, 9:55

The Good Girl, R

2:20, 4:50, 7:20, 9:50

Igby Goes Down, R

2:20, 4:50, 7:20, 9:50

One Hour Photo, R

1:30, 2:30, 4:15, 5:15, 7:40, 8:00, 9:30

Possession, PG-13

7:10, 9:40

Serving Sara, PG-13

1:46

Signs, PG-13

2:00, 4:45, 7:15, 9:45

Trapped, R

2:15, 4:45, 7:15, 9:40

XXX, PG-13

1:10, 4:10, 7:10, 9:50

Photo Courtesy of the Boston Museum of Natural History
A Senior's Guide To Sanity Over Four Years at Babson

JAMES SAUNDERS
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

It has just been about two weeks into school, and I am already almost sick of it. Granted, Babo has been cool, my classes are easy, and my life is what it could be. I could take a night off, but my responsibilities, as a senior border on none. Sure, I am looking for a job, and that process is about as much fun as a lobotomy with a razor blade. I don't have anything from that I have nothing to do with.

With that being said I have a few things to write about. First, new freshmen, transfers, and random degenerates who would like to succeed at Babson. Please pay attention because I'm going to provide you with the keys to make your college at least four years of hell—the Babson.

1.) The beginning is much harder than it looks. You can never imagine.

I helped freshmen move in this year, and while I walked into Forest and saw the sign that read "Welcome class of 2002," I was also beginning to realize that this race was coming to an end.

While they were settling in, they were settling down, with their roommates and making friends, I stood there thinking that they have no idea what's to come or what's ahead of them.

They'll love Babo, hate Babo, and love it all again before they leave these walls—manicured lawns. Their job is to make sure they enjoy the ride and realize that Babo is a lot of fun.

2.) The three wise men are all knowing.

Now a lot of people think I'm going to mention Jack, John, and Jim, but instead I would like to mention Woody, Officer Turner, and John (the bartender, not the bourgeoise).

I met Woody, the bartender, a little bit later and provided you with your shot of caffeine before FME, IMC, or any other class.

He knows everything that is going on in this campus and he is in the heart of the Babson universe. If you know Woody, you have the key to survival in your back pocket.

Officer Turner is the coolest and most down to earth Babo students could ask for. He is not afraid to get away with murder, but he understands what being in college is all about. He has the best interests of the students at hand, and always greets you with a smile and a handshake. To call him solid would be an understatement. Having him and his colleagues around campus makes the student body better.

John is new to the Pub, but he is in the future. I like to call the gatekeeper for everyone over 21. Get on his good side, and the job here is done. Everything is thrown in a few glasses of Sam's without the annoyingly long line. He knows the barkeep's mantra, he keeps the customers happy and the alcohol flowing, but realize that sometimes having an ear to listen is more important than a glass that needs to be filled. Stop by on a Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, and you have the bar to yourself with a good guy who gets paid to do this.

Oh and Jack, John, and Jim get my entire ball through freshmen year and PMD.

3.) Find your place and your group of friends.

I knew early on that I wanted to be a SigEp. Rushing was the best decision I made and the best decision any brother, my best friends and confidantes. Greek life may not be for you but fraternities and sororities are for some, so give them a shot if they are willing to fulfill the same requirements from you.

If they aren't your cup of tea then there are a ton of organizations on and off campus where you can find your place.

Hell, I even know a group of people who do not care really a part of any one organization but have been chilling together for days on end. Be yourself, and the friends and will come. It's when you try to be someone you are not that you run into problems.

We're on the verge of a new era here at Babson College. Within the last year or so President Brian Barefoot, the staff, and faculty have socially changed this campus. Spring weekend last year was amazing, and homecoming this weekend is going to be insane. I'm just annoyed that all of these things happened three years ago. Freemen and transfers, we welcome you into our dynastic family. Where do you want to go? We hope you enjoy your stay.

With that being said here is to a great, albeit short, year.

Be safe. Study hard, and play even harder—Rack 'em.

LIFESTYLES
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 2002

A Survial Guide to Relationship Breakups

MARK WAITING
LIFESTYLES EDITOR

There are libraries of books devoted to the subject of dating, yet many still are clueless when it comes to deciding how to call it quits in a relationship. Those who have had to endure a breakup after a long relationship know how difficult it can be to tell your significant other that your flame has gone out. Knowing when to break it off and how to do it can revive your confidence and renew your soul.

Before making the decision to break it off, evaluate where you stand. Is the relationship gone on so long that there is no more chemistry? Is the relationship no longer flowing from your partner? Have arguments become so commonplace that you don't even care when they arise? If you answered yes to one or more of these questions, then you may want to consider pulling the curtains.

Often, the first concern that comes to mind when making the final decision to break up is how you will fare in the aftermath. You know that you need to stay busy with friends and work to keep your mind off of it and you are afraid that you won't be able to stick to it. He is your Achilles heel. You may have tried to walk away once before, but was not strong enough. What do you do?

To strengthen your resolve and to do what ultimately makes you happy, think about the future. Not one month, but five years from now. Where do you see yourself? It's the year 2007 and you are still sober. Your partner is still drugging you down and you still think that he is the best you can do. Is this a scary thought or what?

Take action before inaction takes you. Every time you feel tempted to fall back into the bed, repeat these words to yourself. "2007, 2007, no way!" Think about marriage, having children, and living with this person for the rest of your life. Will you be happy when you are thirty and married or will you always regret the time you turned down that date that you secretly wanted but never had the guts to ask? Not being honest or clear is hurtful to the other person. Leading them on with mixed messages is cruel, especially if you allow them to interpret the confusion as hope. This only leads to further pain when they realize it is over.

If you can stop the cycle early, you are doing both of yourselves a favor. Unless you stick to stay together forever, put your foot down and end it quickly and directly.

Tying yourself to a train wreck relationship is something that most everyone is bound to do at one point or another. Recognizing and addressing signs of discontent as they occur can prevent the train from barreling of the tracks and hurting other people. Hit the brakes and it seems that your locomotive is headed nowhere. You just may end up stopping in sewer lane.

Bad Decisions: A Sober Vision of a Knight

MATT ROWELL
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Oh Willy! Due to sporting events over the last few days, Babson teams remained sober for the first Knight party of the year. Unfortunately, many of our players were left unequipped, with girls eagle eye going sober, but what my eyes witnessed made the night very dull and entertaining.

Anytime you have girls kissing, you know you are going to have a hoot worthy evening. You girls know who you are and are probably thinking to yourself, "bad decisions."

The glow sticks really added flavor to the night, kudos to Celeb and the rest of the preparation team. However, watching a guy give an intoxicated freshman a gameplay of life who probably just finished her second can of the beast the good old stomach punch because she just swallowed her great glow stick was not too kosher.

Then came the rush for the pizza. I have never seen more disgusting in my life than the mad dash which reigned as the pizza being thrown on the dance floor and at many individuals. People will eat anything. They are so hungry that they just put out some protein or bananas to balance off all the unhealthy fluids that go down the throats of students that night.

The hooking up speaks for itself, especially if you have sucked down the long island ice teas and are listening to the beats of Dirty Vegas. The aroma of alcohol makes all questions true, they truly want, whether it is getting the liquid courage to kiss that person you have always wanted to or simply to be a girl to dump your boyfriend because you are one hundred times better than he is.

The bathroom is always a good excursion at the Knight parties. Bathroom lines are mainly due to the vomiting caused by both alcohol and the consumption of too much Dominoes pizza. On the positive note, it is always excellent to hear girls say, "I am going to hook up tonight!" after wipping the chewed up pepperoni off their face. Cool.

Under no circumstances am I saying these things happen all the time, but rather that Knight parties tend to bring out the bad decisions in all of us. So before the next Knight party, if you drink so much that you can't see, and thoughts of gumbo are going through your mind, just write "bad decisions" in your IM away message box and hit the road so that nature can take its course.
BANANAS Can Provide Plenty of Fun Uses

Andrew Boysen, Managing Editor

Bananans are vital to the success and survival of students on the Babson College campus. SodARho is generous enough to the student population to keep an ample supply of bananas on the salad bar side of the gourmet food island which holds salad, miscellanea weird foods, peanut butter, and eggs.

Before I go on about the usefulness and importance of bananas on campus, I want to be sure you know what a banana is. I used Dictionary.com to be sure to explain what a banana is in a way that everyone can understand.

I also enjoy drawing on bananas during class. With just a pen and a banana you can create a friend to talk to for the entire 95 minutes of class. Though I've never tried it, I can imagine you could use color markers on your banana for even more fun in class.

A banana is a noun. It can be "any of several treelike Asian herbs of the genus Musa, especially Musa acuminata, having a terminal crown of large, entire leaves and a hanging cluster of fruits." More specifically in this article, I'm referring to "the elongated, edible fruit of these plants, having a thick yellowish to reddish skin and white, aromatic, seedless pulp." Thank you, Dictionary.com, for once again helping me when I was unsure of a noun.

You will begin to understand why bananas are important on campus. Like the other fruits of Trum Dining Hall, you may eat this fruit in the cafeteria, or take it with you. Either way, it's a healthy snack.

I've been told that the potassium in bananas can help you not have muscle spasms (thank you Tiffany Wu from Regis for that fact), and that the potassium makes you happy. I know that bananas make me happy, and I trust Tiffany, so I have an intuition of choosing those facts in the encyclopedia.

Bananas are great in Trum, but they are even more useful when you take them out into the world. This is why I always have a smile on my face when I walk out of Trum with a banana in my pocket.

Bananas are one of the foods that are easy to bring to class without causing a mess, making noise when you open the "packaging," or making you fat. As a classic bifurcation, consider if you would rather bring a banana to class, or a bright yellow box of Lushcables that are often very high in fat, sugar and preservatives.

I also enjoy drawing on bananas during class. With just a pen and a banana you can create a friend to talk to for the entire 95 minutes of class. Though I've never tried it, I can imagine you could use color markers on your banana for even more fun in class.

Bananas are always great in the dorm room too. It is a food that you can store for a day or two without a refrigerator. With the limited hours available in the dining hall, having food in your dorm is essential to late night homework energy.

Bananas have historically been a tool of revenge as well. We've all seen action movies where the antagonist injures the protagonist by putting a banana in his path. You too can use this method of revenge. Somebody owes you a lot of money, writes an irritable andsarcastic note about you, or your department, or cuts in front of you at Trum, I encourage you to put a banana peel in their path.

I'm sure you all know of the hundreds of thousands of life-saving bananas, so I will not waste your time with those. I will use them to show you something next time you see Peg, Grace, or one of the other card-scanning people at Trum, thank them for making bananas possible.

Ways to Tell She Resists Your Charm

MARIE PROKOPEN
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Have you ever been faced with a situation where you were unsure if someone liked you or not? Often, on a date, there are a few telltale signs that a girl doesn't want to have anything to do with you. Obviously, if you are faced with unwarranted phone calls, being slurred at when you speak, or if you see her out drinking with friends, then you know she doesn't like you. If this is the case, then you have no chances whatsoever.

First off, don't forget that girls are conniving. We don't like to tell guys when we don't like them, and many of us string men along both accidentally and intentionally...so be careful, and read on.

If you are told by a girl that she can't date you because she's already taken, then you see her making out with someone else, obviously she does. This is the most common excuse given by girls, so be wary!

In order to get back at this girl, simply tell everyone about the guy you saw her with. Then when she asks you about the rumor, tell her that you thought it was her boyfriend. And ask her where she was telling people a secret.

Sometimes girls will go even go as far as to give you the wrong phone number in order to avoid you. If this happens, just ask for a number, make sure that the girl actually gives you seven digits, otherwise you have no chance.

If an attractive girl suddenly starts being crazy to saying that she's a lesbian and grabbing her best friends in public, then something is wrong. Girls may resort to this when they are really desperate to get you off their back.

The obvious thing to do is tell everyone you are doing, but an even better way to get her back would be to take pictures of her doing it, and publish them in the free press.

When you start talking to a girl about going out, and she immediately mentions other guys, do not react ex-tremely, she obviously doesn't like you. Don't forget, though, to make sure you tell all of the guys she mentions that she is a bad person and that they should stay away from her.

Another time for you to call it quite is when you are in a class where the teacher starts at her desk with disgust or calls you a creeper. Also, if you cannot stop a crush repeatedly and hearing no response, you can probably stop any crushes by ignoring you on purpose.

Remember, don't try anything that you have never done before. Also, feel free to come by the free press and ask our knowledgeable staff for some dating advice. Most of us are veterans in the art of attracting people, so ask away.
It’s Playoffs or Bust For The Fall Rugby Season

DAN KOPSCO
Sports Writer

The Babson Rugby Club, unde- feated in 2002, is returning 14 of their 15 spring starters, including leading point scorer and Captain Tobias "Toby" Donath ’04. His backline lost only one starter: former captain Dan McElaney. Returning for the Beavers are speedster Carl Beckman, Tex Fuller, and Woe Danokho. "needs year The latter’s move to fullback in the spring turned this traditionally defensive position into an attacking one.

Also returning is Thumper Ben "B.L." Lembser "needs year who smashed opposition all spring long at inside center. Just outside of him, fresh from a year away from Babson, will be former rockie of the year and leading point scorer in league play 2001, Sean Nicholas Verrette. "needs year At scrumhalf, junior Jon "High School All-American" Trespenier will keep the ball moving smoothly between the backs and the for- ward pack.

The forward pack from the spring is returning under captain Doug Kopcsko ’03 as a complete unit. Led by a front row with 12 years of experience playing rugby, and featuring the always mobile and dangerous "Big Mike" Giga "needs year Giga ’03 and red shirt senior Dan Kopcsko ’03 the Babson scrum will be tough to beat. Backed with the addition of seniors Brian "forwards can score" Yehudah.

Brian "never missed a tackle" Manning, and juniors Eli Loper, Peter "Tank" Carrier and Jared Kohlberger, Babson’s goal is to go undefeated in league play and qualify for a post season birth. Not to be outdone last spring, the Killer B’s also went unde- feated and featured many up and coming athletes as well as some great veterans. The forwards Pascal Geneau, James "Sextant" Tribble, Luis "Rico" Vallejo, Duncan "Ill play for any team" McIstyre, and Alexander "Monaco" Hagerty "needs year all performed well. James "Tackle Kid" Andrews, away this semester, hopes to sharpen his skills before returning next spring.

The B’s backline is also extremely deep, featuring veterans Dave "Weirdo" Willey, Greg "Nip" Craven and Andy Brewer "needs year. Some emerging talent among the backs are junior Mike Savoy, Mike Finch, and fiery scrumhalf/bucker Ian "Yanne Bells" Root "needs year. If you would like to join the club, email mgraham@babson.edu, or just step by the lower fields on Tues- day, Thursday, or Friday between 4:00 and 6:00. Everyone who practices plays, and even if you have a class conflict on one or more days you can still be a part of the team. This is going to be an exciting year for the Babson Rugby Club, so don’t miss out.

The men’s rugby team fights for a loose ball in a recent match. The team hopes to make it back to the playoffs and hopefully win the crown that is has sought after.

Men’s Soccer Too Much For Salve Regina

Unlike their last game, the Babson College Men’s Soccer Team needed no second half spark to get another win. This past Sunday down in Newport, R.I., the Beavers played almost a perfect game to notch a victory against non-conference oppo- nent, Salve Regina University. The win marks the Beavers sec- ond in as many games.

The stalwart defense came up strong again as they helped goalie Tom Malloy ’04 port a shutout. Of the eighteen shots taken by Salve Regina, none found the back of the net. Also, only five of the shots were on target. This is a statistic that should not be overlooked because it demonstrates the aggressive- ness of the Beaver defense.

On the other side of the field, Babson managed a mere fifteen shots against the two Salve Regina goalies, but connected on four of them. The Beavers scored two goals in each half, with each pair against a different goalie.

The win improved Babson’s record to 4-2-1. It appears that the urgency and desire to win is back fueling the Beaver’s collec- tive engine. It is obvious that Coach Jon Andrews has gotten his team back to their winning ways after the embarrassing 2-7 loss against Williams.

Given the true gut test of the season early on the leaders of the team responded to the words of Anderson and seniors such as Frisch and Marsh. Also devaluing压力 as a major threat on the offensive end is second-year midfielder Pagnotta. Pagnotta’s seven points thus far are only two shy of Frisch’s team leading nine.

The defense has lived up to the billing by allowing only eleven goals in their first seven games, good for a 1.92 goals against average. Much of the credit is given to goalie Malloy. He has proven to be quite the stonewall, stopping 75 percent of the shots that are on net. Also he has racked up four shutouts on the year. However, it should not be overlooked that the team defense has kept the team in position of challenges against Malloy down. The Beavers have remained the aggressor in a majority of these games. This is evident within their lead of 128 goals to 125, as well as, 49 corner kicks to 56 for their opponents.

The formula for success is ob- viously a combination of aggressive play and continued dominance on the defense end of the field. As long as these two criteria are met, the Beavers seem a lock for the NCAA tournament.

Golf Team Starts Season Off Strong at Middlebury Meet

MINN BUI
Sports Editor

The Babson College Golf team started off their 2002- 2003 season on a positive note with a ninth place finish at the renowned Duke Nelson Invita- tional at Middlebury College. The two-day tournament ended this past weekend with Babson scoring a 630, which was good enough for a three-way tie for 9th place with Southern New Hampshire and Vermont. In the end Babson was 28 points shy of the mark that 1st place Williams put up.

From an individual stand- point, Babson placed none of its members in the top ten. How- ever, five were able to crack the top seventy-five. Captain Steve Eklund ’03 tied for 12th place and was followed by the pair of youngsters Ethan Roberts ’06, who tied for 44th place, and Dave Dave ’05, who tied for 48th place. Rounding out the top five finishers for Babson were Brian Valardo ’05, tied for 59th place, and Andy Dratch ’03, tied for 73rd place.

Captain Eklund said, we played ok for the first tournament of the year but if we want to go back to the NCAA’s for a fourth straight year, we are going to need to step it up in upcoming tournaments. This performance demon- strated the potential of this year’s Babson squad. In what could not be considered their best performances, Babson was still able to crack the top ten in this very tough tournament. This team returns all its members from a year ago when they won the NEWMAC league and had the rookie player and player of the year of the NEWMAC con- ference in Dave. Named for the captain for the second straight year, Eklund should provide some consistency to compliment the young and talented Davee.

Coach Mike Vassalotti should be confident with the entire squad returning and a talented group of first-year added to the mix, his team should be topping the league again when the dust settles.

However, the ultimate test for this team, as it is for any golfer, is to maintain consistency. If Eklund continues to produce at a high level and Davee returns to his form of last year, there is no reason that Babson College Golf can’t be anywhere but first place in the NEWMAC con- ference at the end of the sea- son.

In the past eight years of NEWMAC competition Babson has come out in first place for seven years. This team has qui- etly been one of the most domi- nant sports Babson has to of- fer. Leading the team, coach Vassalotti has started his 23th campaign as Babson’s men’s golf coach.

The local kid who grew up in neighboring Newton, MA is look- ing for his 4th straight NEWMAC Coach of the Year award. What is very rarely spo- ken of is how Vassalotti got his start at Babson. He was origi- nally the equipment manager and squash coach. But, once he began his tenure as golf coach, he became the staple of Babson excellence in men’s golf.

Truly, with a leader like Vassalotti, and a talented team, Babson has to be considered the juggernaut and favorite to win the NEWMAC league. In a nut- shell, everyone should not ex-pect results like the one at the Duke Nelson Invitational.

MINN BUI
Sports Editor

The Babson College Men’s Soccer Team needed no second half spark to get another win. This past Sunday down in Newport, R.I., the Beavers played almost a perfect game to notch a victory against non-conference oppo- nent, Salve Regina University. The win marks the Beavers sec- ond in as many games.

The stalwart defense came up strong again as they helped goalie Tom Malloy ’04 port a shutout. Of the eighteen shots taken by Salve Regina, none found the back of the net. Also, only five of the shots were on target. This is a statistic that should not be overlooked because it demonstrates the aggressive- ness of the Beaver defense.

On the other side of the field, Babson managed a mere fifteen shots against the two Salve Regina goalies, but connected on four of them. The Beavers scored two goals in each half, with each pair against a different goalie.

The win improved Babson’s record to 4-2-1. It appears that the urgency and desire to win is back fueling the Beaver’s collec- tive engine. It is obvious that Coach Jon Andrews has gotten his team back to their winning ways after the embarrassing 2-7 loss against Williams.

Given the true gut test of the season early on the leaders of the team responded to the words of Anderson and seniors such as Frisch and Marsh. Also devaluing pressure as a major threat on the offensive end is second-year midfielder Pagnotta. Pagnotta’s seven points thus far are only two shy of Frisch’s team leading nine.

The defense has lived up to the billing by allowing only eleven goals in their first seven games, good for a 1.92 goals against average. Much of the credit is given to goalie Malloy. He has proven to be quite the stonewall, stopping 75 percent of the shots that are on net. Also he has racked up four shutouts on the year. However, it should not be overlooked that the team defense has kept the team in position of challenges against Malloy down. The Beavers have remained the aggressor in a majority of these games. This is evident within their lead of 128 goals to 125, as well as, 49 corner kicks to 56 for their opponents.

The formula for success is ob- viously a combination of aggressive play and continued dominance on the defense end of the field. As long as these two criteria are met, the Beavers seem a lock for the NCAA tournament.