Babson Celebrates National Poetry Month With Readings

WOOTEN AND MICHAEL J. CONLON AWARDS PRESENTED

JESSICA BURTT

To help celebrate National Poetry Month at Babson, the writing center sponsored a poetry reading and writing awards ceremony on Wednesday, April 29.

Mary Pinard, Director of the Writing Center and Professor of Business Communication, said "the idea is to be a part of the largest national celebration of poetry. She added, "My sense is that poetry at Babson is alive and coming out of the closet a little" as more and more students demonstrate an interest and participation. Pinard said she would like "to provide a venue" for more Babson poets to demonstrate their interest.

Before the readings, Professor Hildegard Hoeller presented this year's awards for the Wooten Prize for Excellence in Writing and Senior Erin Schaffter presented the Writing Center's award, the Michael J. Wooten Prize. Junior Lindsey Horner won first place in the Wooten Prize for her essay, "Marriage and Patriarchal Principles As Referenced Through Literature and Myth." Horner said, "I'm proud of my accomplishment."

Continuing the Tradition: Senior Week

JOSEPH A. SENOS, JR.

As the school year begins to wind down, the Babson careers of seniors are coming to an end. They have role-d and worked hard for four years at Babson. For them the time has come to move on, they are now ready to go and become successful in the real world. However, the seniors have one more tradition to commemorate, their senior week. For many seniors it is a time to relax and reflect on their time here at Babson.

Senior week will begin on Monday, May 11, after all the undergraduates have left campus. The atmosphere on campus is one of relaxation. Almost 90% of the seniors have completed their requirements for their majors and graduated. Only those seniors that are graduating in both May and September are invited to senior week. Everything for senior week is reserved strictly for seniors. Babson Public Safety keeps a strict watch over those students who are not seniors. Senior are issued special ID for senior week events.

The planning of senior week is a year-long process. Those involved in the planning of senior week, such as Joe Billante and Jennifer Dowell, have been planning their senior week for over a year. An important part of senior week is fundraising. The two high

With the year 2000 quickly approaching, and with it all the fundamental unknowns, Babson College has begun planning and implementing change. One current proposal is under serious consideration and scrutiny by the Information Technology Services Division (ITSD). The basis of this proposal is a new E-mail system which would replace the unpredictable and sometimes erratic servers the currently control campus-wide E-mail.

Currently, there is a team of approximately ten ITSD system engineers, outside consultants, and two students working tirelessly on making the so-called E-mail migration project a success. Under consideration is a communication plan, separate and distinct for Babson faculty, administrators, graduate students, and undergraduates as well

It was something that I really worked hard at and got some recognition for that work enhances the fulfillment.”

Freshman Christine Pitre won first place in the Michael J. Cordon Contest for her true short story, “November Rain.” “It was a real personal piece, and it meant a lot to me when it won.”

She added that the large number of students and faculty attending “shocked me...I go on the site [the poetry underground website] and was surprised by the number of people on campus who write, especially since the writing on campus is so limited.”

An on-campus poet, who also read yesterday said, “I was thrilled by the attendance and especially by the number of faculty and administrators that were present. I realized that the one thing that could possibly bring Babson together as a true community was poetry.”

Sylvia Limn, a first time reader said, “I was surprised at the turnout and at the number of people. She continued, “it was such a casual atmosphere, which gives new poets the courage to read.”

Sophomore Joseph Senos, read two poems entitled “Sailor at Bay” and “46 Minutes From The City.” “I believe that poetry readings on campus offer a new avenue for students to express themselves.” He added, “The time has come for students to explore new avenues besides the classes that we attend.”

In addition to the presentations during the ceremony, there was a video of the American Poetry at the White House event on April 23 with such poets as Robert Hass, Rita Dove, and Post Laurette Robert Pinsky.

Give to the Babson College/Pine Street Inn clothing drive — it’s easier than packing!

Students can bring any clothes, shoes, winter coats, etc. to the donation truck that will be in the Rankin South parking lot on Saturday, May 2nd. These donations will benefit the Babson College/Pine Street Inn (BA/PSI) program. Please bring as many items that you can, every little bit helps.

“Swan Lake” and You

Babson’s night at the Boston Ballet took place on Saturday, May 2nd at the Wang Center. Tickets can be obtained for $5 at Reynolds 211 (one per student) and students must present their One Card. There is limited availability for this event and tickets will be given out on a first-come, first-served basis. Transportation will also be provided. Questions? Call the Office of Campus Life.

Wooten Winners

The Wooten Prize Committee recently announced the winners of this year’s writing contest. They are (first through third prize): Lindsay Horner for “Ma-trialism and Patriarchal Can- ciples as Referenced Through Literature and My Life,” O’Halloran for “Carry a Back-pack,” and Christophe Rougeron for “Philosophical Debate on Algeria’s Civil War.” The prizes were awarded on the poetry reading on Wednesday.

Come See the Honors Grad.

Babson will graduate 19 students with honors this year. These students have spent two semesters working on independent thesis projects, and will present the projects on Thursday, April 30th between 3:30 and 5:30 P.M. in Trim. The presentations will run simultaneously; accordingly, attendees can simply drop by anytime between 3:30 and 5:30 P.M.

Learn Investments from Merrill Lynch

On Thursday and Friday morning at 7:30 A.M. 15 students can listen to a conference call of Merrill Lynch analysts as they discuss their stocks picks for the day. Interested students should call 781-961-5935, and the day they would like to participate to Paul Gordon. This opportunity is for any student interested in investments including those who are beginners, intermediate, or advanced in their knowledge.

Joseph Ford Resigns June 30

way.” Adam Berger, founder of Babson College Radio said that Ford is, “a man who looks after the interests of students, keeping his eyes on the stars and his feet on the ground. He never refused to talk about a proposal, an indication of where his priorities lay.”

His hardest moment of the his ten years came when the college began its re-engineering. “I was really torn,” said Ford. “You can’t easily package the learning process in business package.” He added that he is proud of the work of the team that created the program, but that it took him a while to come to terms with the new ideas of the program.

As for the future, Ford said “I really don’t know... I have no job yet; I’ve been here for ten years and I am at a point in my life where I need to do a lot of soul searching for the next 15 years of my working life.”

“You just gotta’ take a risk sometimes,” he explained. Ford also believes that “you have to bring closure to begin,” which is part of the reason he has no long-term plans at the moment.

After taking the summer off to “de-compress” and travel throughout the United States and Europe, Ford plans on “re-focusing” by reevaluating his skill set, interest, passion, and value system to determine his next career. As for his replacement, Ford is not sure if that person will be found through an internal promotion, an outside source, or whether the position will remain of the Dean of Student Affairs.

Ford did feel that the Dean of Student Affairs position was an “integral part” and “extremely important to the student’s learning and overall educational experience.” He also suggested that the next person should “provide a vision for this program... and should be a senior level position reporting to the President as possible.”

For the rest of his time at Babson, Ford hopes to bring closure to current program and external research, and to “say goodbye to people.”

ITSD Evaluating Strategies To Change E-mail System

provide no loss of data. Under the direction of Rick Mickool, Chief Information Officer and Kathy McCombie of ITSD, the project is making much progress in planning, financing, communications, and training. The problems that ITSD forsees are in the area surrounding the fact that 7,500 users need to be switched to the new E-mail system before the old system can be shut down.

Mickool stated, “Babson’s demand for variety in electronic communications is increasing rapidly. By migrating to an Internet-standards based E-mail system, we will build the foundation to support new forms of communication and collaboration into the future.”

Most groups will be migrated to a new E-mail system this summer, but the plans are flexible to accommodate the unique scheduling requirements of specific groups within the community, including new and returning students with personal computers. The mail migration plan expects to have 100% of all mail migrated, no mail loss, a flexible migration schedule, no disruption to users’ ability to communicate campus-wide during and after migration, dedicated migration support services, and widely available opportunities for training.

Ongoing communications and feedback from the community are expected as the various functional groups test the system, first to a pilot test early this summer through the planned conversions, and concluding with surveys throughout the months succeeding the end of the actual migration.

ITSD boasts that there is an endless list of benefits from the new system. However, the most important is the solution of the year 2000 crisis for Babson College as far as E-mail is concerned. Among the other benefits are a move away from proprietary platforms of the current system, and new enhanced capabilities over the current Beyondmail client software. Users will no longer be locked into using Outlook Express; any Internet product, such as Netscape Communicator or Eudora, could also be used.

Users will be able to access their E-mail client and access e-mail both on-campus and off-campus. Rather than accessing your E-mail through GlobalNet On-line, you will be able to use Outlook Express. One amazing new benefit is the access to receiving HTML mail, a full web page E-mailed to you. In addition, users will be able to send E-mail directly from their office PCs. Users will be able to launch attachments with one-click.

Kathy McCombie, the E-mail migration project manager of ITSD, said, “Implementing a new electronic mail system is a challenging and complex task. We want to make sure that we accommodate the unique needs of students, faculty and staff both in terms of the year 2000 new E-mail system provides, and how we prop up the system.”

Under the proposed migration plan, there will be no more 200 or 400 message limits. Instead, each user will be limited to a certain amount of disk space. Additional space will be available to users who are able to integrate their E-mail into scheduling programs such as Microsoft Outlook and personal digital assistants.

Overall capacity of the migrated system will be at least double the E-mail servers in the computer center.

Wendy Coburn, “The faculty need an E-mail system that works the way they do, whether on campus, at home or traveling. ITSD’s goal is to provide this capability.” On a similar note, students, administrators and staff wish to access E-mail from home in the same familiar format they use day after day. The new system addresses this concern.

At this point, the core team of E-mail migration leaders is just days away from making a go/no go decision based on timing, finances, and such. All arrows point toward a go barring any unexpected hurdles. twelve years ago when he first came to Babson. “It’s been a dream of mine,” said Professor Bygrave.

Bygrave reminisced about the thirteen years he has been here at Babson and how every Founder’s Day he has witnessed some of the most amazing entrepreneurs inducted into the Academy of Distinguished Entrepreneurs, yet there has never been a showcase for these unbelievable individuals until now.

This new Blank Center floor will include exhibits of these famous entrepreneurs.

“Building this will be a tremendous addition to the campus and help to further Babson’s focus on entrepreneurship,” said Bygrave.

The Blank Center will house all of the entrepreneurship faculty as well as those on campus who are involved in manage entrepreneurship.

The Arthur M. Blank Center is a tremendous addition to the Babson campus. It will be our showcase for entrepreneurship, which is what Babson is known around the world for. The center is slated to be completed in the fall.

courses available to him. He acknowledged this problem, and tried to aid in the expansion of multimedia during his entire time at Babson. It was important to him that students learn technology skills that they could use in the future. By doing so they would add to their academic and practical abilities.

As a result of the dedication that Mr. Wilson and others have shown, we now have a more interactive and technically oriented curriculum. Submitting homework on E-Campus, and on-line portfolios are just examples of the roles that multimedia plays everyday in our classrooms.

In addition, almost all in-class presentations utilize either videos or computers in some way. This fact was clearly visible this week as FME businesses reformatted their PowerPoint presentations, and edited their videos. Multimedia became a key part of each of the businesses’ final reports to the community.

Mr. Wilson’s family started the award after he passed away. By creating the award they hope to continue Richard’s vision of increased quality and accessibility of multimedia in the classroom.

Over 40 well qualified applicants submitted their work in hopes of winning the Richard Wilson Award. The fierce competition can be attributed not only the honor of winning the award, but also to the $1,000 cash award for first prize. Three teams tied for first place this year.

One winner, Tom Bourdon said, “It was a real honor to be chosen for this award.”

Susan Lefland and her partner Heather Milano also tied for first with their comprehensive effort.

By creating the award they hope to continue Richard’s vision of increased quality and accessibility of multimedia in the classroom.

third place honors. The Free Press’ own Shiv Singh won honorable mention in last Friday’s awards ceremony. Singh won for his association with both the Poetry Unit and the “Freepress” on-line efforts. He said, “I was excited to be recognized for work that’s been done on the web front and look forward to the time when there will be a separate award or category for new media initiatives.”

This year’s winners join past recipients such as Ted Bearer and Gardner Boulmay. The Richard Wilson Multimedia Award will continue to acknowledge the efforts of the students who make use of expanding technology in classes everyday.

I received a student appreciation card with a $10 gift certificate and I didn't deserve it. Then I noticed that the card said 'thank you' one too and I wondered why we were receiving them. I couldn't find a satisfaction guarantee on the card and didn't quite know who to ask, so I began to think about it. I was really starting to realize how much I really deserve recognition. Here are three groups on campus that I feel we should have gotten more appreciation for.

First, as a personal assistant, I admit, it is difficult to give something for nothing. I am not aware of what I am doing at all. I just talk about what I call the 'Babson Librarian, Arts Phenomena.' That being said that many students are simply too busy to be set free when it comes to the libraries. Every day these professionals are challenged to not only energize the students about their course work, but to inspire them and the justification of it. It is easy to be absorbed by this mass confusion and feel trai-ted with students who consider the work to be a waste of time. These professionals have many challenges and an exey to fight to instill stronger academic environments in which they believe that should be the case. Behind the scenes there are so many students who would be a just trade school. We are fortunate to have them around. And, honestly, I think that recognition is the Office of International Affairs. Above all, I believe that the most important issue at the heart of the University is the common good. I have heard it said that the University is the last great divide between the Americans and the International Students, the "E pluribus unum." The "Babson of the East Meets West Cultural Evening and the Festival of the World have gone a long way to bury that vestige. We've made a difference and we've headed in the right direction thanks to the Office of International Programs and the students that work with them.

Third on the list is the Judicial Board. They're the ones that will never get the recognition they deserve. Yes, there have been some controversial decisions handed down by them in the past and it is easy to see why they might not always be seen fair. But they try to improve things and I think they are ha

The Board is for the students to have a voice and a chance to be heard and make meaningful. Through my personal experience (it was quick and it was in my face) I think we have reason to be proud of them. I think that they try to protect the community and not individuals.

Many people are concerned, and many will always be recognized. These three groups represent what I conside among the most important aspects of the busiies outside the business cloud. There are many others, groups like GIVE, the Dance Ensemble and the Office of Class Deans could be in the same category but they do get reognized. This time my chocolates are of appreciation are for the Liberal Arts Faculty, the Office of Innernational Programs and the Judical Board.

Let The Letter To The Editor

JOSEPH A. SENOS, JR.

This week I wanted to address something that will impact everyone that reads our newspaper. The Babson Free Press has a popular columnist that regularly cuts his article and on fort he would like to put into his witty and humorous articles will be in our minds and in our hearts. The columnment is not only a colleague but also a student and mentor. On behalf of the entire Babson Free Press, I extend our thanks and pride for the work that Skip Connolly has done for the Babson Free Press.

Skip has been writing his article for the Babson Free Press for the past five years. In that time he has written well over a hundred articles for us. We are proud of his humor and outlandish ar-articles. He is also proud of the most read articles we ever write. But he is a very unique person to every-

Who Needs Appreciation?

JOSPEH C. CONSLIVIO III

This evening something amazing occurred. What normally would have been a scheduled meeting of the Student Government was actually an appreciation dinner for the House of Representatives. Why was appreciation necessary?

Past the semester, The Babson College Scrubs’ house, was in a bit of an attendance at SGA meetings at their own house. In addition, last se-ment we reported a story about the Student Government purchasing alco-bol from the store here at The College.

When students were present to discuss funding, SGA decided to have the spring appreciation dinner on the update of the Fund and the event was catered by Market, in order to cut costs. This was a very effective way to save student fee money, but it was why it was even necessary.

I have spoken to many representatives this semester that have stated they will not be running for a House seat next semester, because of the lack of lack within the Student Government. In addition, many have complained that the body is powerless and has lacked any on the body issues. If all of these things are true, then who is the appreciation dinner for? Is it for the new Executive Board? Is it for the Representatives that have failed to do their jobs all sem-mer? Students want to learn about the real world and how businesses function every day. In order to do that, students and people learn about the benefits of learning on incentives. So why does the Student Government desire an appreciation dinner for their student representatives?

As a student I feel that the students are the ones who are responsible for the decision. Based upon their level of performance, I would have voted the dinner in favor of the student representatives.

I understand that some Representatives may have worked hard on specific projects, but as an elected body, you have failed to take action on these concerns. Many students have complained that the current President and Vice President have not benefitted from participation in the Student Government, whether their goal is a seat in the Business Industry or just a working opportunity and a chance to work on real revolution cars. Additionally, it is important to point out that the opportunities we provide to our students are not limited to students with in-

When Are You Truly Happy?

KRISH SAILAM

What truly makes you happy at BA? Some things are just unreasonable to expect, others are perfectly smile. More or less BAson have established a lifestyle that is true happiness. What makes us happy at BA is a very personal thing, but it is likely too simplistic. Few of us ever go back to our rooms at night or even to our dorms to just assume that we will be swayed tomorrow and that we will have the chance to be happy.

Weekly Stock Market Update
FRANK MCGEE

Could this really be déjà vu, or is this simply the behavior of the mar- kets which the new paradigm squash-es? When companies like KeyTron, Market Guide, and Seventh Level can instantly triple their market value, is it clear that the markets rationality has become infected with a severe bout of frothiness. Even the most value-entrenched money managers could accept, albeit with a good sense of skepticism, the Internet blue-chips soaring (including Yahoo!, AOL, and Lycos), all of which gained between 300%-1000% in the last twelve months. But when three so-called Internet-related stocks, like KETL, MARG, and SEVL, move more than triple over-night, the market begins to remind many of the late 1980’s. Thankfully, many of these companies, with little or no projected EPS in the near future, came tumbling back to reality towards the end of the week with shares of Trac Data Corp. closing 29%, while shares of KETL closed down 26% on Friday. The continuation of the ridiculous ramp-ups in questionable companies, record levels of junk bond issuance, record levels of market participation, soaring real-estate prices, and the re-appearance of hostile takeovers, leads many cynics to question whether we are witnessing an 1980’s like run-up again. On Monday, technology stocks headed in a variety of ways, with the tech-heavy NASDAQ climbing 1.1%, while the Dow Jones工业 Average around all day long, ending the session down 37 points. NASDAQ internals were extremely healthy with nearly 1.67 million shares traded, gaining gainers of 2365-2072, and new highs leading new lows around 3.5 to 1. Volume on all of the major indices was strong with nearly 160 million shares on the floor, for on-line traders, as Charles Schwab, the largest discount broker, did not execute any trade beyond more than four hours. Though company officials said that the floor was solved by 11 A.M., no trades could be successfully executed until after 2 P.M., frustrating investors and traders relying on the web.

The tech sector led the market once again on Tuesday as shares bell-weather tech issue IBM advanced 6.1%. Strength in Big Blue helped fuel huge gains in the NASDAQ, which, despite tech rally sent the index soaring into record territory, on volume of more than 1.5 billion shares. The rally, once again, weakness in the broader markets, Bank of New York offered Mellon shareholders more than $38 billion, but Mellon management quickly sought an injunction to block the hostile takeover. Profit fillingailed the air as all of the markets took a well-deserved beating after the recent run-up. On Thursday traders felt the NASDAQ tumbling nearly 2%, while the S & P fell more than 1%, while Dow closed up less than 1/2%. Weakness in the bond-market, where the 30-year bond crept back over 6% hurt the equity markets as well. Pfizer continued to soar on Friday as word of the strength of its anti-impotence pill was the fastest selling drug in history, with $200 million in sales in its first two weeks hit the street. Pfizer is now the largest pharmaceutical company in the world, with a market cap of more than $160 billion. However, warnings of technical, financial, and consumer nondurables pushed all of the major indices southward. The Dow, NASDAQ, and S & P all ended Friday’s session in the red. So, where does the market go from here? Beyond the ridiculous valuations given to some of the Internet companies, the market internals are poorer than they have been in a long time, thereby suggesting that the market is still a long way from bottom. Technology stocks should remain up, as the Hamburg and Quast Technology Conference, from April 27th to May 5th is traditionally one of the special events for tech investors and analysts.

The tech stocks should also strengthen as we head towards June 25th release of Windows 98. Though critics are already questioning the tech-long term advantages of Windows 98, traders really don’t care if Windows 98 is a quality product or not, as long as King Bill and his marketing chronicles trick us all into purchasing it. If history is any guide, Windows 98 will be the next “killer app” which drives the tech sector and the second-half of 1998.

From time to time my beloved colleagues at the Babson Free Press have accused me of being the “technology illiterate editor.” Luckily, I have a thick skin and rather than responding to this defamation of my character orally, I decide to write my last article for the year on issues near and dear to my heart: technology and alcohol.

While these two might seem to be somewhat unrelated, except perhaps on a Friday night at Babson, the issue of minors buying alcohol on-line is quickly becoming a hotbed for discussion. I was first alerted to the issue last year when I viewed a new report attempting to crack down on this issue. Indeed, several companies, including many wineries, are now selling their products over the Internet. Beer, wine, and even hard alcohol can now be purchased with just a click of a button. A Godsend you say? Perhaps, but this is causing quite a controversy in cyberspace.

Balancing the rights of companies to do business over the Internet with protecting our children is of great concern to many people, and several activist groups have formed in response to this growing problem. While these groups do not so muchcontest the right to sell alcohol over the net, the manner in which it is so freely distributed to children is a problem. Nefar in one sting opera-

The companies selling alcohol online have posted disclaimers on their web sites, stating that the consumer must be at least 21 years old to buy their products, but require no further types of identification.

Mr. Calhoun raises quite an interesting point here. Of the companies selling alcohol on-line may have posted disclaimers on their web sites, stating that the consumer must be at least 2 years old to buy their products, but require no further types of identification. With so many minors having access to credit cards, the problem significant potential for expanding.

It is my duty as one who consumes alcohol and a devoted technology editor to visit some of the sites selling alcohol. I found a wide variety of alcohol, particularly wine, readily available for sale. I also noted that only about half of the sites were there warning labels about the sale to minors. While free sales of alcohol to mi-

New Mustang Is Built For The Power-Hungry
NICK PIERCE
When one goes to purchase a car, with a price in the neighborhood of $39,000, there is only a handful of vehicles to choose from. For those few that are interested in driving, there is the obvious choice of a BMW, Mercedes, or Lexus. For the ego-riding, bad-boy type, there is no better choice than the Ford Mustang. This monster is the best choice of a vehicle, for the reason that it is a good, fun, and entertaining vehicle for people to drive, and is a good choice for a used car in the $8,000 range, but you will need a license to drive.

At the heart of this Sallen is a supercharged 5.8 liter V8 with horsepower and torque figures of 455 and 440, respectively. Not Ford, but Saleen. This monster is produced under the ownership of Don Marsh, a visionary, risk-taker, and enthusiastic Steve Saleen. Other cars need not wait because when this Mustang screams, it truly does scream. Discount stores are common in the United States, and most people don't like to spend money. This is the car for you, and the reason is its horsepower. With the engine revving, you will hear its exhaust. When you are at the stop light, you will be thinking, "Why didn't I buy a Mustang?"

Where do you turn when you don't want a boring Mercedes, or when you have enough money to buy something better than a run of the mill Corvette?

Babson Women Are Not Prepared for the Real World
PETZ 31 SUITE AUTHORS
Have you ever noticed how people behave on campus? Besides the necessity to imbibe alcoholic beverages to have fun, another idiosyncrasy of the students at Babson, particularly women. The habit we speak of is what we have dubbed "card dropping." This is a very common problem on any day in Trim you can see this compulsive phenomenon in full effect. Card dropping is a tech nique used by the women to replace the lack of self-control that is common in the real world. Did you ever notice how many females at Babson place their ID card on a table in Trim before getting their food? place their ID card on a table in Trim. They are surprisinglycott. "This table, mine, no one dare with!" The reason is simple. Could you possibly imagine a bab sion woman running through Trim without a designated seating area? Absolutely, not. They are afraid that someone will sit there. This is due to the led floor, but the women who do not want to be caught without guidance and direction, will Babson female will immediately declare an exact seat for themselves. I say "most" for a reason.

A recent study by Pietz 31, over a 3-day period, includes data which concludes that out of 192 female Trim visitors, 185 are card droppers. That is whopping 96%. The other 4% are deemed to be of another persuasion, which will be explained in our next issue. Our study has been going on for some time, and so far, we can't find a pattern.

The first step, the women will walk down the stairs while scanning the Trim dining area. They are scanning with only one purpose; to identify a safe haven, a meeting ground if you will. They are searching for another pack member. Once they have found each other, they will get their food and meet at the safe-haven, but as a group. As there is no way a female will allow another member of her pack to be seen by herself. They will delay, or speed up, the food gathering process in order to entice the others. Hence, 31 has even identified several well-defined defensive tactics for women who happen to find themselves alone for some ungodly reason.

Should all of these tactical fails, a woman may feel safe, and continue her journey alone. Even though this will not happen without a fight, we have witnessed a 24-minute delay and even a total abandonment altogether, it sometimes does occur. This ultimately results in the quickest meal possible. The female will absorb her food with speed and vigor to end the miserable tossing about. Women would rather risk death from choking than be seen alone for an extended period of time in Trim.

Our conclusion is that Babson women are not prepared for the real world. Why can't they wander aimlessly, engaging in a social conversation, to find their own. Why can't they sit by themselves without concern of who will see them? Why can't Babson women sit on their own, and feel safe, and alone occasionally is not the end of the world? Please women, for the sake of our degree, grow up.

There comes a time every year when we are forced to remember that we are not college students anymore. Leaving the friendly confines of Babson, we are forced to leave behind friends who are college students. The awesome part was the year after. Last year I was on the court when several seniors played their last home game. I think the privilege of being on stage was something that will last me into next weekend. This is the final event of the year.

I find myself searching for the words to describe the emptiness I'm feeling. I'm just a little remembers the first article that I wrote for the Babson Free Press. I was so young and naive, and I was filled with a certain energy and excitement that I've lost. I wish I could return to those days when everything seemed so incredibly magi.

Now, I know some of you are saying, "But Adam, you only started writing three weeks ago!" This is true, but it is not the time that maters, this year marks the year that will last me into next weekend. This is the year that will last me into the rest of my life.

As usual, I have no actual "point" I'm trying to make, I do have however, one little thing that you should address of those who you speak with, I think. I have not yet mentioned the Love of God...Why don't you pronounce your "Faith" any more, I'm obviously kidding by making such a broad generalization. There are a lot of people out there and the number of people who care about specific beliefs is very small. I think the important thing is to have something to believe in. If you do, then you have the point. There is an "in" between marginize or butter on a particular day. The reason that the car has become popular is because of high traffic and the ease of finding temporary "buddies." This tactic also incorporates a constant search for a fellow pack member.

This tactic involves the pack member frantically visiting every station while searching for an outfit. Have you ever noticed how many different outfits we tend to go with, almost an addiction to taking their call? Why can't we sit by themselves without concern of who will see them? Why can't Babson women sit on their own, and feel safe, and alone occasionally is not the end of the world? Please women, for the sake of our degree, grow up.

The menu at the new Babson restaurant, Healthy Food for a Busy World, is served in Second Street, across from the Babson Mountain Creamery.

C-A-R, there is an "i" in F-A-R-T-H-RING, not an "A". How would you like it if I never pronounced my "N?" Now if we could all just work to be able to pronounce words clearly, I think this would be a happier place.

In Ohio if a town is pronounced "Wooster," and there actually is a town called Wooster in Ohio, you'd guess how it is spelled. It's N-O-W-O-O-T-E-R. What a novel concept in New England, in order to pronounce something "Wooster," you need to add 14 letters and 4 syllables. For instance, the town of Westminster, which is pronounced "Wooster." Another town I am often ridiculed for misspelling is Peabody. As any self respecting Massachusetts resident knows, Peabody is pronounced "Fee-Roo." I once tried to say it phonetically and a Massachusetts local demanded my immediate return to Texas.

To someone from the Eastern states, there is absolutely no difference between Ohio and Iowas, or Wisconsin, or any of the thirty states in between here and California. Unfortunately, they are right, there is no difference. I am obviously kidding by making such a broad generalization. There is a lot of people out there and the number of people who care about specific beliefs is very small. I think the important thing is to have something to believe in. If you do, then you have the point. There is an "in" between marginize or butter on a particular day. The reason that the car has become popular is because of high traffic and the ease of finding temporary "buddies." This tactic also incorporates a constant search for a fellow pack member. The pack member frantically visiting every station while searching for an outfit. Have you ever noticed how many different outfits we tend to go with, almost an addiction to his time. I'm going to say, "J" and instead of coloring something, "oh." Of course the problem in English is there are only three letters and you get the point. There is an "in" between marginize or butter on a particular day. The reason that the car has become popular is because of high traffic and the ease of finding temporary "buddies." WeCare... Farewell Until Fall

DR. BRUCE TOFIAS

It is a little hard to believe that the academic year is coming to a close. This column has given me the opportunity to review specific health issues as straightforward as sore throats, meningitis and/or skin abscesses, as well as far safer and healthier issues as family dynamics and vacation visitations. While learning how to care for yourself, and understanding how and when to seek professional help is a key element to a healthy life, it is not the only element.

The higher plane comes with entering the realm where you see that your environment can influence the long and short term well-being of one self and those who are around you. Understanding how one's own psyche and some interplay, can allow you to guide and direct your own well being. I am convinced that most of us are born healthy, and as we trudge through life we find ways to suppress this wellness. With appropriate insights we all can make more conscious, and hopefully better, decisions about our wellness.

Wellness encompasses more than not being sick. It is a stance and positive attitude that caring for oneself is a moral, emotional, mental and physical being. I do not wish to get too heavy and spiritual that readers will see this as a religious health experience. What I do wish is that through our patient population and severely ill, you see that patients who are spiritually connected, are better connected and feel better with their health outcomes than those who lack the spiritual connection.

The summer is a wonderful time to explore many aspects of yourself, to evolve into your own person. Consider all the experiments for those of you interested in making sure that you have bought your pants or that you have brought your friends, or simply have your pants on.

The Show

Monday's show "Dumpe for Another Woman" featured several interesting guests. Sheila and Brian were together for three weeks but only believed that they were in love.

Springer Review: "I Am Pregnant By My Brother"

JORDAN LEVI

Back by popular demand! Yes, that's right. I've decided to bring to my fellow readers one last Jerry update.

Is Jerry the most popular American icon on TV these days? Dateline: 2020, A&E, FOX News Chicago; they all can't get enough of our man Jerry.

Before I get to the nitty gritty of Jerry, I must share some interesting news. Many of you know that I hail from the same fine city as the Jerry Springer show, like me. Yes, the "Windy-city," the city of broad shoulders, the home of the Bears, the home of the Bulls, the home of the Hawks, the home of the Cubs, the home of the Cardinals, and the home of the "real" Sox. Never-the-less, in addition to his daily show, Jerry would like to present News Chicago viewers with his insights once a week on the NBC local news. Surprisingly, earlier this week NBC announced that Jerry would no longer contribute a weekly editorial.

However, FOX News Chicago saw potential, ratings, and intelligence in our hero. They decided not only to hire Jerry once a week, but to have him do daily editorials on their acclaimed news program. Gosh, isn't Jerry just a perfect fit for the NBC brand. Enough of the valuable lessons we could learn from this wise man. If at first you do not succeed, try, try again. It's a big sea, go fish elsewhere. These sayings don't even take into account the valuable lessons displayed on his daily program. How ever can we repay this media master? On a lighter note, here is last week's Jerry recap. This week Jerry really out did himself. Monday's show "Dumpe for Another Woman" featured several interesting guests. Sheila and Brian were together for three weeks but truly believed that they were in love. Brian has agreed to pursue a relationship with his best friend, Amy. Both Sheila and Brian are almost normal to fall in love with another woman in three weeks while you are agreeing, staying, and going back to your wife. The kicker to all of this is Sheila is mad. What could Sheila be mad about? She is trying to steal Alan and I have plans for Sheila. She could work the trucks at local truck stop. After we were involved with Sheila and Brian, Amber, her best friend and his ex girlfriend, contacted us. You see, Amber wanted her boyfriend out of the picture so they could go on being a happy couple. As you can imagine, things didn't turn out quite so well. A cocktail of verbal dihersis, blood, sweat, and tears was mixed making it another quality Jerry program. It was a win between two lovers. As you can imagine it got ugly. Men with women, women with women. It was a good program. It provided viewing pleasure for the entire family.

Wednesday, Jerry really pulled out the trump card. "My Daugh- ter was kidnaped," was the title of the show. Sounds like we have a case of poor parenting. I have never seen a 19-year-old working the streets. If you know where I could find a 19-year-old to interview purposes only, please contact the Free Press ASAP!

David, is an individual who commands a lot of self-respect has been a guest for several years. Her influential Uncle, Stewab, Looser, and Friend, encouraged Jane to follow him down this illogical path to fortune and fame. Jane is now in the mode of choosing of her "career" and Chris, her entire family. This is quite our conventional emotional, mothers, fathers, and sisters, and is one we can imagine provided for some quality laughs.

"I'm Pregnant By My Brother," was featured Thursday. Who ever thought that Angelina Jolie has the nerve to get her pregnant? If you are going to do the honey- panley, the buffalo dance, walk on the wild side, at least don't provide any clues or evidence. Can you imagine, "Hello this is my sister," my name is Angelina Jolie." Here's the story. Heather recently learned that she has some half- sisters. She moved in with her father, where her newly found brothers reside. It didn't take long for her to start having a secret affair with her brother, David. I say Ooh-Eh, Bon Voyage, Hasta La Vista, Adios, Sonoya, and Good-Bye. This will be the last Jerry article by me, for I am going to a better place—The real world.

Summer Job

Scheduling Coordinator

Senior staff position at Maine lakeside summer camp of 800+ children. Work August 12th to August 17th. Department head, unit leaders to schedule 75 daily classes in the studio and performing arts, land and water sports, horseback riding. We'll teach you how, but will then rely on your self-motivation to get the job done always several days in advance. Suitable candidates: campers who love people in particular. A hard-working, responsible, logical mind will be a plus. Monday, June 15 — Thursday, August 27. Non-smokers only. Some preference to candidates who would like to live in a coed cabin with a dozen girls ages 7 - 16 as one of two care givers. Kippewa For Girls, Box 340, Westwood, Massachusetts 02090-0340; kippewa@iac.com; (781) 762-829; (800) 547-7392.
The release of Dave Matthews Band's newest album, "Before These Crowded Streets," was marked for Tuesday, April 28th, unless you were tuned into Bob Zalossi's "Before These Crowded Streets" on Saturday at 6:00 PM, where he and several others will be the first to hear the album. The first song to hit the radio was "Don't Drink the Water," which originates from an older tune that, in the band's opinion, should have been left alone. It's unfortunate that this was the first release, as it does not refeect the mood and creativity of the rest of the album. "Hallowed," was also revamped from the earlier "Recently" album, but lacks the intensity and amazing drum solo by Dave, which made this previous version so memorable.

Guitarist Stefan Lessard shines more than ever on this release, along with saxophonist LeRoy Moore.

Sports Briefs

Meulendynk Named All-Conference: Captain Kristin Meulendynk '98 was named a New 8 All-Conference selection for her stellar play on the softball field this season. She led the Women's Softball team to a school record 16 victories this season. Meulendynk, an outfielder from Farmingdale, Maine, hit an impressive .407 from the plate with 11 runs batted in, two triples, and six doubles.

Three Baseball Players Honored: Jonathan Cignetti '98, Peter DiDomenico '98, and Steve McMann '99 were all named First Team CAC All-Stars for their play on the Men's Baseball team this season. Cignetti, an outfielder, batted .367 with three home runs and 36 runs batted in. As the team's designated hitter, DiDomenico hit .359 from the plate with seven homers and 37 runs batted in. McMann, Babson's catcher, hit a whopping .362 with three home runs and 21 runs batted in.

Men's Baseball Falls Twice: Eric Previte '90 hit a grand slam home run, but it wasn't enough as Babson lost for the second game in a row. Eric Aisen '01 suffered his first loss of the year last Friday as top-ranked Babson was upset by fourth-ranked Clark 5-4 at Babson in the quarterfinals of the CAC tournament. In two previous games this season, the Men's Baseball team has been dealt a combined score of 27-11. However, Aisen couldn't win the battle of the pitchers as Previte nailed the only multiple-basehit of the game for Babson.

Last Monday, the Men's Baseball team hosted Framingham State. Babson got off to a 5-3 lead after Previte hit his grand slam in the bottom of the fifth inning, Steve McCabe '01 earned the loss in the ten inning thriller. The Beavers finish their season with a road game today and tomorrow at UMass-Dartmouth and Bentley, respectively. Both games begin at 3:30 PM.

Weisman Leads Tennis Team
To New England Championship

MICHAEL JACOBS

David Weisman '98 led the Men's Tennis team to another successful week. Weisman won all three singles matches he played in and won two out of three doubles matches, as Babson went 2-1 over the week to improve to 9-6 over all.

Babson faced Clark on April 21 and won, in impressive fashion, 6-1. Weisman lost his first set of the year in singles play, but rebounded to win 6-4, 6-1, 3-1, before the match was retired. Jason Smith '01 won 6-1, 6-1, and teammate Steve Larkin '98 was also victorious with a 6-2, 6-1 win over his opponent. In addition, Taylor Strauss '91 and Prem Athial '90 both won in straight sets on the singles side. Weisman teamed up with Brett Parrham '99 to win 8-2 in doubles play and Larkin and Athial teamed up to win 8-0 for Babson.

The momentum from the win against Clark didn't carry over as the Men's Tennis team lost to Bentley 5-2 the next day. Weisman won 6-4, 6-2, and Parrham won 6-1, 6-0, to give Babson their only victories on the singles side.

The team turned things around as they routed Coast Guard two days later, 6-1. Weisman won 6-4, 6-3, and Christian Pagapanticholas '98 beat his opponent 7-5, 6-2, to pace Babson to victory. Larkin, Athial, and Peter Marmer '01 all won on the singles side. In doubles play, Weisman and Parrham won 8-3, Smith and Marmer won 8-7, and Larkin and Athial won 8-0.

The team has won eight of their last 11 matches after starting the season 1-3. Weisman has paced the team all year by going 11-0 in singles play and 5-0 in doubles action. Athial is second on the team in win percentage in singles matches and he has seen increased playing time as the season has worn on. At 4-1 in singles play, Athial has just lost two sets in singles play. Additionally, he has gone 6-3 on the doubles side. Leading the doubles side is Parrham. At 11-2 in doubles play, Parrham has also gone an impressive 6-4 in singles play.

Babson finishes their season this weekend as they travel to the University of Connecticut to compete in the New England Championships. The two-day event begins on Saturday.

SGA/CAB & Student Media Battle On The Field

MICHAEL JACOBS

Joe Senos went 3-0 for three with two home runs and a single, but that wasn't enough as Student Media fell to Babson. Student Government 21-8 last Friday on the Upper Field.

Student Media consisted of members from the Babson Free Press, as well as Babson College Radio. They were captained by Joe Cusnich, and Joe Senos acted as honorary captain. Student Government consisted of members from SGA/CAB.

Besides Senos, Student Media got a barrage of offensive help from veterans Shiv Singh, Lara Maish, and Gardner Boulay when he wasn't snapping pictures of the game.

Women's Lacrosse Falls To Wellesley In Semi Final Match

MICHAEL JACOBS

Laura Hayes '01 scored twice, but it wasn't enough as the Women's Lacrosse team fell 11-7 to Wellesley College 98 last Saturday in a New 8 Tournament semifinal game. Babson had a busy week in which they went 1-3.

The Women's Lacrosse team started the week off with a tough 17-7 loss to Bowdoin, but the team bounced back with an 11-8 thumping of MIT on Thursday. The win in the New 8 quarterfinals over MIT at home ended Babson's four game losing streak. Tanya Josie '99 made 19 saves in the net for Babson, while Katie Matthews '98 had a personal season-high seven goals. Hayes added a pair of goals in the victory as did Erin Kleiber '99, Lauren Spoors '98 and Lacey Clarke '99 also tallied for Babson.

The win over MIT set up a date with Wellesley last Saturday.

Hayes scored twice for Babson in the 11-7 loss to Wellesley and five other players scored one goal apiece for the team. Clarke, Cloverly Whitley '99, Molly Callahan '99, and Carlie Justuson '99 each scored a goal for Babson in the losing effort. Josie made 15 saves as Babson could not get past a 4-1 half time lead.

Clarke scored a season-high six goals against Connecticut College on Tuesday, but that wasn't enough as Babson lost 19-11.

Hayes and Kleiber added two goals apiece and Matthews scored the other goal. Josie stopped 11 shots in goal during the game.

Next up for Babson is a trip to Colby on Friday. The Women's Lacrosse team will finish out the season on Saturday when they travel to Bates for their final game of the season.

DOMINO'S PIZZA TRIVIA QUESTION

Name the only two goaltenders to play for the Men's Lacrosse team this season.

The first three e-mails with the correct answer wins a medium one-toping pizza and average compliments of Domino's Pizza, Wellesley, MA.

To win, e-mail freepress@babson.edu after 7:00 PM. Good Luck!
