Trim & Exchange Face "Very Serious" Health Violation

By Kevin Black
News Editor

On August 22, Marriott was inspected by the Wellesley Board of Health. As a result, several critical violations were found.

The inspector of the 3 Babson College Dining Halls (Trim Hall, The Exchange Snack Bar, and The Graduate Dining Hall), Wellesley Board of Health Specialist Pamela Ross-Kung, found food-handling, ventilation, and cleaning violations on the day of inspection.

There were 25 violations in total. There were refrigeration problems which included the temperature being too high in the refrigerator in the Exchange. The temperature, which should have been below 40 degrees, was at 60 degrees when the inspector checked. The exchange Snack Bar also did not have the required 3 sinks for washing, rinsing and sanitizing. In addition, there was no towel dispenser at the hand washing sink, even though Marriott had a soap and sanitizing solution dispenser. Finally, the cutting board, which had been gouged, needed to be replaced.

Other violations were found in Trim Dining Hall. The ventilation system in Trim's dish room was not up to par. The paint on the ceiling and walls was peeling, and there was mildew build-up on the walls and in the dishwasher. Pipes were not properly covered and insulated. Some sections entering the kitchen. The tile walls were cracked, and spilled Pepsi syrup was on the soda room floor. In addition, the floor needed to be painted and reslated, and the border of the doors needed repair. Some of the wooden shelves also needed to be replaced.

The Graduate Dining Hall had a problem with one of their dish washing units. It was not up to the required 180 degrees, and the temperature of a "showcase cooler" was not down to 40 degrees.

Also, Ross-Kung was concerned about the certification status in August before the inspection, and the rest of them are enrolled in full-day classes that begin September 30, when their certification exams are due.

Since Ross-Kung is no longer employed with the Health Department for reasons that are unknown, Bill Murphy will take over the case. He reaffirmed that the Exchange and Trim Dining Halls have "very serious violations." He added that "failure to comply will lead to fines and ticketing."

Jay Rivera, President of the Class of 1999, reacted by saying "I am somewhat appalled."

The damage needs to be fixed before any health problems occur.

Both the Exchange Snack Bar and The Trim Dining Hall have been on an almost yearly inspection schedule. The last time each was inspected was in April 1995. Few violations were found at the Exchange during that inspection.

The critical violation found at Trim in 1995 involved sanitizing equipment and utensils. The four non-critical violations included the conditions of the walls and ceilings and poor lighting in the kitchen. Citron said "we have 2 inspections a year, and if there are any violations, we have them fixed very quickly.

Several students were surprised and shocked when they heard about these violations. Sophomore Mike Washington said, "it sounds like high school all over again." His roommate added, "the way the food was tasting, it's not surprising."

Concerned student Gino Katz said, "I always knew that there was something wrong with Trim food. Now I wonder if we can get our money back."

Although there were many violations at the 3 dining centers at Babson, Citron commented that many had been fixed or repaired. He said, "in Trim and on all the refrigerators, the temperatures are checked 4 times a day. In the kitchen it is sanitized. We have a log that will go back for years."

In addition, he said, "the pipes have been covered and insulated, the doors are being fixed, an 'air curtain' was ordered, and Physical Plant is waiting for a day when Trim is closed to paint and reseal the floors." Citron added that the "pipes have been cleaned up, the doors have been ressealed, and the door frames are in the process of being ressealed."

An exterminator comes in on a weekly basis to prevent roaches and insects, and Citron has asked that the exterminator begin to log the times when he comes in.

In addition, Citron explained that in the Exchange "the temperature in the refrigerator are checked twice a day. Also, we have employees who are going through the week in order to ensure all the employees know about food sanitation safety."

Citron also said that they added a towel dispenser and a sign to the outside of the store that read "for students to be afraid is a ridiculous thing... our standards surpass what is required by the local Health Department."

Babson Men's Soccer Team Loses Heartbreaker to Bowdoin

By Joe Senos
Contributing Writer

This past Saturday featured a soccer match between 2 undefeated teams. The Babson men's soccer team played a non-division game against Bowdoin on a cold and wet day. The weather seemed to reflect the way the Beavers played. Perhaps this was a factor in the team's rough start. Their attack was flustered and there was not much technique involved. The midfield was not doing its job of pushing the ball up the field for the first part of the half.

Babson's first real attack came from Dan Pucci at about the 25 minute mark. Then, Marcus Olofson received a beautiful pass as he was cutting into the center of the field and fired a nice shot on Tom Casarella, the Bowdoin goalkeeper. However, Casarella made a great save.

Babson goalkeeper Bill Lawler had a great first half. Lawler made a great save on a defensive mishap at 24:12. This save demonstrated his great poise and also displayed his leadership as the entire team began to rally around him. Also having an excellent half were fullback Matthew Goodwin and Patrick Goodwin, a Mkt player who made solid defense.

The second half started a lot better for the Beavers. They came out solid all around. Lawler made a nice save from the right side to start off the game. At the 43 minute mark, Dan Pucci broke in toward the goalkeeper, but again there was no one to help so he could not pass and had to force the shot.

The referee missed two big calls during the game. Jacques Guoip was stripped of the ball and tripped. While in the air he was checked and the referee displayed no card. The referee again missed a call when a Bowdoin player touched the ball with his hand while on the ground.

Three minutes later, Lawler made another tremendous save on a corner kick, and the defense was also continuing its solid play from the first half and staved off heavy pressure from Bowdoin. Bowdoin's score was a result of a defensive collapse and was not Lawler's fault. He was left deflectless vs. a 2 on 1 and he gave it his all but came up just short.

Two minutes later Babson had another scare as a Bowdoin player broke past the defense. Lawler was left vulnerable and the shot would have given Bowdoin another goal had it not been for Lawler over the net. Reuther was tripped in the penalty area and should have resulted in a penalty kick, but the referee made no call.

In the final 6 minutes, Babson had a few great chances to tie the game. On one such attempt, the Bowdoin goalkeeper lost his composure but regained in time to make a good save. The game ended and the sun came out. Babson played well but came up short in the end.
The "Rape Path," As It's Been Called

By Leticia Stallworth
Staff Writer

The temporary path behind the library has come to be commonly known as the "Rape path." No actual rape has taken place there, but, according to one concerned student, "the path is so dark at night that the female constituents of this campus see the need to be concerned."

The path was built by an outside contractor hired through the construction company that is building the new Campus Center Quadrangle. It was put there to make the Hill residences accessible from the library and vice-versa. Due to the construction of the new building, the old path are inaccessible. The temporary path was put there to inconvenience the students as little as possible.

However, Patrick O'Day of the Office of Student Life informed The Free Press that he and Dean of Students Joe Ford had heard of the nickname and felt concerned. After taking the time to walk the path at night, they saw a need to be worried about the lighting and safety of the path.

Dean Ford reportedly wrote a memo with some safety recommendations. Recommendations included: installing additional lighting along the path, installing fencing on both sides, increasing the asphalt, so that it goes all the way up to the fence. Both sides, installing an emergency phone at both entrances to the path, installing wheelchair accessible route at the end of the path and publicize the escort service by Public Safety.

O'Day commented that they don't want them to clear out all the trees, or make the path super quality, because it's only temporary. However, there has to be some inconvenience to build the building.

"...Dean of Students Joe Ford had heard of the nickname and felt concerned."--

In addition he said that, "nothing has been inspected for safety yet, and I'm sure that once they can move more into the construction site, they will."

Director of Buildings and Grounds Dave Peduto said in a prepared statement, "the temporary path around the construction site was designed and installed by the construction company to give shorter access to the academic area from the Hill. When the path was installed, lighting was an issue and the contractor installed more lighting. The lights were vandalized so they would not work. The contractor was notified and the electricians came in and repaired them as soon as possible. Safety is of the greatest concern to all of us at Babson and we will address all issues to ensure that."

Sophomore Jannell Grayson said that "the only change that I have seen is with the addition of the lights. I still prefer to walk around."

plained that things were washed in the dishwasher in the Pub at 180 degrees, which is plenty of heat to sanitize items.

Murphy commented on students' fear of eating at Trim on the Exchange by stating that "individuals can only make that decision for themselves.'"

Circo commented that for students to be afraid is "a ridiculous... '-... the way the food was tasting, it's not surprising.'" lossy thing. Places [that are] not aware of this are the places to be concerned about. Our standards surpass what is required by the local Health Department."

In addition, Murphy said that Marriott is "adequately handling the problems." He confirmed that Babson has "hired a pest control company and they have been very cooperative with the Department. They have been keeping us up to date."

Freshman Mandatory Experience

Leticia Stallworth
Staff Writer

The Freshman Management Experience (FME) has been a part of the Babson curriculum since 1993. When it was first proposed by Professor John Newman, it started with a pilot of forty students. As the program developed each year, the course was offered to more first-year students. Today, FME is mandatory for all entering freshmen.

With the new curriculum, and having to take five classes instead of four, it is interesting to see how the freshmen were handling it.

Simi Misrachi is enrolled in FME with Professors Sengeregis and Bageley. So far, she is excited about the course, though some students are skeptical about some of its aspects. "It's okay so far, but I've never done any accounting. It might be a bit difficult, but I think it's challenging."

Sylvia Limon, another FME student, is worried about the workload. She said, "I don't know if I am going to be able to deal with this course. It's like, harder than the rest of them. We don't have time now, we have so much work!"

Limon is not alone in her misgivings about handling FME with the rest of her workload. There seems to be a consensus among most of the first-year students. Professor Newman is also worried about whether or not the freshmen will be able to handle it. Newman said "this is only the beginning of the first semester. The real challenge comes during the second. I'm concerned about the course load of five classes. FME is a lot of work."

Newman added that "it still counts as four credits while the others count as three. I know it might be a little difficult for them to adjust, but we have designed a lot of support systems to assist them with the challenges that lie ahead."

There are some helpful resources every FME student must know about. There is now an FME Resource Center, located in Babson Hall next to C203. There are 3 mentors assigned to each section, for a total of 18 mentors for the 6 sections. Each will operate as a floater across all 6 sections.

GOOD WEEKLY INCOME
An Ethical Dilemma Or Just Politics?

Recently, local health inspectors cited Marriott Food Services at Babson for major health violations. Many of you may ask, as a customer of Marriott, why was I not informed about such violations? Last April the student body elected Kevin Nolan to be the Student Government President. As president, Nolan has an obligation to represent the student body to the administration and act as a liaison between the college and the students. As the supreme student body representative, one would think that Nolan would put his presidency at the top of his responsibilities list. That is, his job as the SGA President should take precedence over any other campus employment or organizational involvement he may have. It was my understanding that Nolan took an oath to represent the student body.

In any case, it has been brought to my attention that Nolan was present during the health inspection of Marriott Food Services. So why, may I ask, were we all not informed of the situation? It is quite apparent that our beloved president did not act adequately as a liaison between the college and the students. So why the lack of responsibility? Why have we, members of the student body, been betrayed?

There could be a number of answers. However, I find it very interesting, and somewhat disturbing, that Nolan happens to be a Marriott employee. Where does one draw the line between loyalty and ethics? Ethically, Nolan should have informed the student body of any issues that may concern them. But, Nolan also works for Marriott and would not want to bite the hand that feeds him. Nolan has obviously been put into a very difficult situation. One which he deals with poorly.

Yesterday Babson held its first forum on socially responsible business. During the forum, all the speakers, including the CEO and Founder of Stonyfield Yogurt, Gary Hirshberg, stated that social responsibility and ethics need to be among the key aspects in today's business world. Among the many campus organizations that sponsored the forum was Student Government.

This, I am sure, is not Nolan's first ethical dilemma, nor will it be his last. As a student, I am obviously concerned. What can I expect from my elected representatives? Will Kevin Nolan, the SGA President, stand up for students' rights? Or will his political relationship with other campus organizations and employers get in the way of his presidential responsibilities?

College-Bound Keep An Eye On Your G.P.A. And Your Personal Possessions

NEW YORK - Registering for classes, buying books and moving away from home are typical worries the college-bound face each year. Today, students must also add theft to their list of worries. Theft is the number one crime on college campuses. A 1994 survey by the Chronicle of Higher Education reported 19,172 acts of burglary at 851 colleges and universities with students of 5000 or more.

If you fall victims to burglary, having adequate insurance can lessen the blow. For those who live in dorms, their personal possessions are insured under their parents homeowners policy. New canoes should consult their parent's insurance agent to guarantee that expensive computers, televisions and stereos are fully covered.

Upperclassmen who move off campus are no longer covered by their parents homeowners insurance. These students need to purchase a renters insurance policy to cover their belongings. The I.I.I. also offers the following advice to guard against theft on college campuses:

1. Always lock your doors. If you are going down the hall to the bathroom or to chat with friends, lock your door and keep your keys with you at all times.
2. Leave expensive jewelry at home. Do not risk losing fine jewelry or other sentimental items to a thief.
3. Engrave electronic items. Computers, televisions and stereos should be engraved with your driver's license number and the state in which you live. This will help police track stolen articles.
4. Don't leave belongings unattended on campus. A book bag left unguarded in the library is a quick, easy target for thieves.

Remember, students who take precautions won't go through "the school of hard knocks." By being safety conscious and getting the proper insurance, you'll be strolling down the halls of learning with confidence. The Insurance Information Institute is an educational, fact-finding and communications organization committed to disseminating information about property/casualty insurance.

Weekly World News: Man Eats 6 Mail-Order Brides

By Skip Connolly
Dean of Detergents

You know something, I think I heard. I know I'm underpaid as a writer because you can't get any more underpaid than that. Oh, there was a time when, back in the 20th century, some man way here at the Press. That is until old Brent caught wind of some thing or another. Brent died on the job, scotched my final three checks of last year, and I haven't seen a red cent since. Hey, any edge for the family business, I guess. I realize there's some pretty stiff competition out there, and I've got to get my head out of the sand and have a little chat with "Sir Lawrence."

Regardless, it was more the janitorial side of things that I was referring to. I mean, dig these terms, "Staphylococcus, Perfringens, Clostridium, and Trichophyton Interdigitale," Some pretty heady stuff! Well there's no way you can copyright (that's redundant) critters doing the backstroke in your toilet bowl, all while you, the unsuspecting customer, hover innocently above. My point being is that it is I, and the likes of I, called upon to tend to these tiny tank terrors armed only with rubber gloves, a Johnny mop, and a can of bowl cleaner. Although these stupid first cousins of the amoeba (if they had any brains they would be living in your toilet bowl?) may not be visible, they do possess a major threat and should be dealt with only by a pro such as yours truly.

Now I'm sure you're saying, "OK, Dean, you deserve a raise but where in the hell did you learn about these scourges of syllabication." Simple, health. According to Guna, a sea cow will only nurse those of her own brood, so trying to find another sea cow would be a useless endeavor. The only logical alternative; a human donor because of the similarity in breast milk.

But therein lies the problem. Guna has flooded the airwaves, put ads in the local newspapers, and has even offered a $100 per day bounty. Thus far (excuse the pun) he has received no bines. He now has extended his crusade worldwide in hopes of finding a donor, but warns that if none are found soon, Tiny (the sea cow) will die. He's already losing weight, spitting up what little he has in his stomach and has become noticeably less active," said a dejected Guna. My thoughts on the matter: Well seeing that this guy wants to give just $10 per day to breed feed one of these whiskered pigs of the sea, and the fact that you might get thrown up on in the process, I think it is safe to assume that we're going to be dealing with one very dead sea cow fairly soon.

Forget about that investigator with the severed head because the damn thing didn't say nuthin. Dr. Truman Doughtrrie cut his wife's head off because she was about to kick the bucket. He then stuck it in a fancy bottle with a whole bunch of scientific gimmicks attached to it, and Susan (the head) has been cooking away inside the thing ever since, according to Doughtrrie, she was shy when she was a whole body and she's even more so now that she's just a head. Well that's great! It does me a whole lot of good. My final WVN scoop brings new meaning to the title of one of my favorite Irish Folk Ballads. "Come all ye fair and tender ladies." It involves one very hungry cantaloupe chief and his six barbecued mail order brides.

Daki Haimbe, of Kepi New Guinea, is currently being pursued by local authorities after being charged with six counts of murder for human consumption. Police inspector Eric Bobe claims this horrific ordeal had its beginnings when a team of anthropologists trudged their way through Dak's village. Thinking that Daki was just a lonely middle aged man in need of a good woman, they presented him with a mail order bride catalog. Well, of course to the fierce flesh eater it served solely as a massive mess and it didn't take him long before he put his "Home Dinner Deli-very" service to the test. Soon his casserole curties were being canned in from such far away places as Japan and Australia. He ate high off the hog for years. Whenever his freecer ran low, he simply ordered another and cooked her up.

Well thankfully, some caught wind of Daki's little game or who knows how far he would of gotten. The inspector said, "For awhile, this guy was calling for bries the way most of us call for pizza delivery." OK, my tip of the week, if you're vomiting and something keeps flutting away from you whenever you try to suck it up—forget about it. It's probably a moth. It happened to me last week and God did I ever feel silly after wasting a good 5 minutes chasing the damn thing around.

Auto Column: The Mercury Mountaineer

By Ted Beason
Staff Writer

Are you ready for another troubleshooting New England winter? Have you got your 4x4 Pickup or All-Wheel Drive SUV? A Porsche Carrera or Mitsubishi 1000 gt just won't cut it with a few feet of that white stuff. This week’s vehicle is a 1997 Mercury Mountaineer, supplied by Regan & Stapleton Lincoln & Mercury located in Wellesley on Route 9. After speaking with Jack Stapleton at this specific dealership, I quickly learned that this dealership has a history.

The Mountaineer is actually a trimmed up sister to the Ford Explorer. However, this side of the family boasts a standard 5-liter v-8 sporting 210 horses @ 4600 rpm, with optional all-wheel-drive. Other standard equipment includes dual airbags, power assisted anti-lock brakes, and power locks & windows, as well as a 100 watt stereo.

It was established in 1963 and has sold vehicles to famous people such as Howard Hughes and Edsel Ford, a Babson graduate. Chrome accents on the alloy rims as well as the rear window reflect an image with its interior. The front seats are active but classy. It throws a few more drivers in the back seat. The seats are comfortable, the door pintails, and the car has a very spacious interior.

Babson African Cultural Society

By Leicia Stallworth
Staff Writer

The Babson African Cultural Society seems to be getting off to a good start. The new E Board is looking at the year optimistically as a year of change. They are heavily geared towards making sure their voices will be heard in the Babson community. Babson is known for being a school that is very culturally diverse, with an international student population at approximately twenty-three percent. Yet, the E Board of BacS feels that the African culture is underrepresented in the Babson community. Vice President Executive Jeff Meade expressed some concerns. "Every other culture is represented in some form on this campus. We feel that the best way to breathe our culture into this campus is through the curriculum. We have been moving to get a black professor to teach African-American history. We have it in writing that we will have one by spring."

In keeping with the decidedly under-represented African-American population of this campus, BacS is planning to examine the way Admissions selects students. This is to see if they can get more representation, in numbers, on campus. They are also planning to review the way other schools get high-quality black students, because they want to recruit more black Presidential Scholars.

While trying to ensure that BacS has members for the future, the E Board has not lost its focus on the members that are already here. The new E Board has made plans that will hopefully counteract divisiveness and promote unity. Jeff Meade noted, "Once you get a group of students out of the confines of this campus, they tend to get a little closer because they see more similarities between them."

Their plans include an activity night, so members of BacS can get away together and just hang out. There will also be a study night, tentatively once a week. It will serve as an academic support system.

BacS has seemingly become more future-oriented. Meade notes that, "In the past, BacS has been a lackadaisical organization. For us to move forward, we have to change that."

To make the group more efficient, some of the positions within the group have been revamped and combined, while others have been created. The position of Vice President-Social is being combined with Vice President-Communications. There will be a new Advocate position, which will entail communicating with department heads and other schools about how to solve problems.

The Babson African Cultural Society definitely seems to be getting down to business. The meetings will be held Monday nights at eight o'clock. T-shirts will be distributed at the first meeting, to promote unity. They all have the symbol of life on the back. Maybe this new E Board will breathe new life into the organization.

We Care - A Health Column

By Wegue Health Services

"Achew, Achew - pass the tissue." Yes, you guessed it. The fall allergy season is here in full swing. If you live in New England then you may be familiar with the symptoms. If you do not, and have just moved here, this whole experience may be new to you.

Seasonal allergies are caused by foreign proteins that are usually airborne, entering your body through your nose or lungs, and most often giving symptoms to those organs. Many people sneeze, enjoy the pleasure of a drippy nose on your homework, cough, or are irritated by itchy eyes. Others get itchy skin, headaches, or feel fatigued. These symptoms may all appear, or any grouping of them, and may differ from season to season in the same person. The most common seasonal allergies are early spring trees and flowers, late spring and early summer grasses, and late summer and fall ragweed. Seasons and people differ from year to year, and the allergic symptom may also - being without symptoms at times and incapacitating at others.

The good news is that there are lots of possible treatments available to treat allergic rhinitis (runny nose), sinusitis, or asthma (allergic lung reaction). At the Health Center we can help you assess the cause of your symptoms, review previous treatments and/or initiate new ones. Whether with environmental controls, pills, inhalers, or referrals to more specialized care, most allergy symptoms can be improved. Come visit.
What Does the EVP Do, Anyway?

Dear fellow classmates and friends,

School has started, and the Student Government Association has a lot planned for you, the student body. I personally have many plans for the students this year and feel that it would be nice if you would be able to share them with you. As Executive Vice President, my responsibilities are to oversee the Vice Presidents of the SGA, serve as the President of the Senate, serve as the chief moderator for the Traffic/Parking Review Board, head the Public Safety Advisory Board, and be the liaison to Public Safety. Didn’t know that the EVP did all that, right? You’ll get the chance to understand and be aware of what each member of the executive board is responsible for, as well as SGA, by reading this section of the Free Press on a weekly basis.

As mentioned before, one of my responsibilities is to preside and run the Senate. The Senate you ask? What is it? Unfortunately in the past, the Senate has not been as active as the House of Representatives. Plan on this to change. Because I feel that the Senate is less known than the other boards, I will briefly discuss it. The Senate was established to support clubs and organizations financially, and for clubs and organizations to discuss issues concerning the spirit and support of the student body. With the support of our beloved clubs and organizations, the Senate will be up and running after our first meeting with the House of Representatives on 9/17. Some of you know by reading last week’s edition of the Free Press that we just had elections for the House of Representatives. In order to get into the Senate, it’s a little different.

The Senate consists of the Presidents and prominent leaders of Babson’s student organizations. This however, is not exclusive for just these individuals. Anyone who wants to promote school spirit, as well as support our organizations, is welcome. I plan on the Senate to meet bimonthly and to be more involved in SGA than in the past.

The Public Safety Advisory Board will meet on a regular basis and will discuss the safety issues affecting Babson students. The Traffic/Parking Review Board is self-explanatory and will meet bimonthly, as well for all traffic and parking appeals. If you are interested or would like more information, please feel free to contact me either at the SGA office @ ext. 4190 or my room @ ext. 4796. It would also help to read the SGA minutes of our House of Representatives meetings that take place every Tuesday in Trim 207 @ 6:30 P.M.

Thank You, and I hope your semester is a great one.

CAB Friday Night Movie: 12 Monkeys

This Friday night, CAB presents 12 Monkeys at Roger’s Pub at 8:00 p.m. This film was nominated for two Academy Awards, including Best Supporting Actor (Brad Pitt) and Best Costume Design. Bruce Willis stars as a 21st Century convict who can obtain a pardon by taking an experimental trip back to the year 1996 to unravel the clues that will help destroy a deadly virus capable of wiping out the human race. Co-scripted by the writers of Blade Runner and directed by Terry Gilliam (Brazil), 12 Monkeys also stars campus favorites Brad Pitt and Madeleine Stowe (Shade) in a terrifying story, with plenty of exciting twists and turns for you.

"...A time travel past to fantasyland. Willis and Pitt do some of the best work of their careers. Story is wonderful." --Jack Mathews, Newsday Come down to Roger’s Pub Friday and win free movie tickets: one for you, one for a friend!!!

Next Week: CAB presents The Birdcage, see you Friday.

The Politics of the Stock Market

By Paul Staley

Would you believe that politics plays a major role in the prices of stocks? On Wall Street, investors face more than the prospect of speculating stock prices from financial statements; political ideas have great impact on the trend of the Stock market. All an investor has to do is look at the effects of the tobacco stock prices to see that political agenda plays an important role in the stock market.

With the large government increasing its role in the United States economy each year, political agenda affects the direction of our nation's economy. The government's command on our economy forces Wall Street and its stock to flounder along an uneasy path set down by politicians.

In the United States, the government has numerous tools which allow it to directly affect economic trends.

---"...most investors view low liquidity as a sign of instability and want very little to do with businesses like that."--- prices of stocks in a good economic situation are determined by speculative ventures. With an unforeseen future, less positive transactions will take place. As the general trend of less purchasing hits the economy and companies' sales and profits contract, stock prices invariably decrease. In extreme cases, a business which normally pays a dividend might reduce or cut out all dividends for that period. Generally, as businesses receive negative sales projections, they curtail expansionary ideas.

Government can also cool down the market via the federal banking system which regulates the supply of money. This control of interest rates has a dramatic effect on Wall Street stocks. Business expansion feeds directly into one thing: how much can you borrow and at what cost? If there are high rates of interest, then no business will borrow, which means there is less cash available. Also, most investors view low liquidity as a sign of instability and want very little to do with businesses like that. The only way in which a stock raises in price is if the stock is in demand.

It can be seen that government control of the interest rates and federal income taxes dramatically affects the price index of most stocks on Wall Street. Liquidity is one of the keys to a successful stock pick. Since policies regulate the liquidity, it can thus be said that it regulates stock prices.

The Ethics Police Are On Your Tail

By Mike Tinkham

Staff Writer

How do today's corporations keep themselves honest these days? How in the world can a company stay as large as $100 billion and avoid such potential liabilities? Similarities to executive in-discrimination, accounting fraud, --"No thank you to more lawyers' fees." The answer is Larry Ponemon and his ethics police, KPMG, business ethics division.

Such companies as Astra USA, Mitsubishi Manufacturing, and Marlitt Inc. are facing sexual harassment charges. Ponemon and his group enter a company and focus on communication, training, and awareness in such areas as sexual harassment and workplace diversity. The goal of their audit is to increase awareness to the company employees on how to act in a diversified environment. They also rate the company's control systems as either weak or strong.

Those companies who fail the test sit down with Ponemon as he and his group formulate a strategy to correct the lax control systems.

The trend in today's industry corruption? The trend is toward tightly controlled ethics management. The reason for this movement is as simple as the fact that ethical lawsuits are media grabbers and real court pleasers. No thank you to more lawyers' fees. So the next time you think about giving a friendly smack on the butts, side of your attractive co-workers, who may or may not be of the opposite sex, think twice the ethics police may be hot on your tail.

Music For Your Trunk by OutKast

By Kevin Black
News Editor

It's that Southernplayalisticadillacmuzik music for your trunk. That's right, the infamous southern players, OutKast, are back with their second album, ATLiens.

OutKast, who released their first album two years ago, have come out with a second LP that has hit all trunks from the east to the west coast. Their heavy bass style combined with their steady lyrical flow have made them a unique group on the rap scene.

On their first album, they represented the players across the United States with songs such as “Player's Ball” and platinum selling single “Southernplayalisticadillacmuzik” which stayed true to their Southern roots and experiences. Supported and produced by both Organize Noise Productions and LaFace Records, OutKast is one of the few groups which is very humble and symbolic in their lyrics along with their foot-moving beats.

—"...OutKast is one of the few groups which is very humble and symbolic in their lyrics..."—

The first release off of their second album, “Elevators,” reached number one on Rap City and MTV’s Countdowns. “Elevators” has a heavy, infectious bass beat with lyrics that explain their rise and treatment in the music industry as of today. On the album, there is an original and remix of this single, both of which have alluring beats.

The rest of their album is like a church sermon to America. They teach their listeners about what they see in the inner cities and suburbs, what they believe is going on in their town as well as other towns, and how they see their lives in the United States. They still represent on the southern tip with their player styles, but they added a little didactic flavor.

Songs to peep on this album are “ATLiens,” “Jazzy Belle,” “Wailin’,” “Millennium,” and “Elevators (ONP 86 Re-

The Lost and Found: A Modern Fable

By Leticia Stallworth
Staff Writer

After having lost everything she had – her home, her family, her man, and her identity - Joy was lost. She no longer knew where she belonged, or which matter, whom she was. She wandered around aimlessly, looking for clues. Sure, she had her friends, but none was a great help in her struggles. Some knew her better than others did, but no one knew her as well as she had once known herself. In an instant, it seemed all was lost. A few bad days of summer seemed to turn her life upside-down.

Being a self-motivated person, and not one to lose hope so easily, Joy slowly began to reign control. She surrounded herself with positive people and positive thoughts. She moved in with some friends. She found herself a job. Joy went on at this slow and steady pace, trying to do it all without having to do anything.

Since she didn’t have to pay rent, she could party till her heart was content, after her falls were paid, of course. Strangely enough, between working and partying, she was able to find herself again. She was able to rediscover who she was and, without realizing it, she had allowed herself to become a better, stronger, better person.

She used to party hard and goof off at work. Now she worked hard and goofed off at parties. She had found a way to balance them. She could now be at peace with herself, because she knew who she was, knew where she was at, and most importantly, she knew where she was going. The change may not have occurred overnight, but it was definitely there. Other people may not have taken notice, but at least the person who needed to, did.

Moral: It's okay to lose yourself every once in a while, as long as you make sure you can find yourself again.

Mercyful Fate Releases New Album, Into the Unknown

By Jeff Keene
Contributing Writer

The great King Diamond has done it again. His band, Mercyful Fate, has just released their sixth album, and his other band, simply called King Diamond, is slated to release another album at the beginning of October. Two years ago, King Diamond gave us a superb one-two punch with "Time from Mercyful Fate" and "The Spider's Lullabye."

This time around, "Into the Unknown" leads the way and will be tough to beat. This is what Heavy Metal is all about! King Diamond's vocals are as ear-piercing as ever, and the rest of the band is in true form. As we have come to expect, there is a change in the lineup from the last Mercyful album. Gone is the beloved Snowy Shoe, and we are introduced to Bjorne T. Holm. Why can't the King seem to hold on to the same band for more than a few albums? He's just too good.

Consistency is one of Mercyful Fate's strong suits, and "Into the Unknown" does not disappoint. All of the tracks are well-executed, and none falls short of being spectacular. Some of the tracks may sound a bit silly by name, but the music is anything but. Fifteen Men (and a Bottle of Rum) is a well-written story of a ship lost at sea, and it has an oh-so-catchy chorus. The title track is exceptionally done, with perfect solos from Sherman and tempo changes throughout.

The second part of "The Mad Arab" is a great conclusion to this album. We were told it was coming, and "Kittulu (The Mad Arab Part Two)" does not fail to satisfy. King Diamond makes good use of his unbelievable range and gives us the highest lows, as well as the lowest lows.

"Into the Unknown" is a must-have for any Metal fan. It outdoes its predecessor in total musical and lyrical content and gives an altogether better listening experience. Is that possible? Let us all hope that King Diamond's next album will surpass "The Spider's Lullabye." We will just have to wait and see.

The Souls of Black Folk by W. E. B. DuBois: A Book Review

By Leticia Stallworth
Staff Writer

The Souls of Black Folk by W. E. B. DuBois attempts to do something. He explains the philosophies of some of the greatest Negro Rights leaders of his time. He tries to help a lost people find their way. He attempts to give the nation an outlet to empathize, and more importantly to make the country realize that its problem was that of the Color Line.

The book addresses a time when African-Americans had lost their place in society. President Lincoln had emancipated them from slavery, and although they were grateful, they did not know what to do following the emancipation. The people as a whole had no skills and no education. They had to house and feed themselves. What little money they were paid for their labor, they squandered because they were not used to having any. The problems of the Negro seemed to be ever increasing, which led to many scholars appearing to offer solutions.

DuBois goes on to tell of some of the many scholars, including himself, and their theories. He spent the most time, however, on Booker T. Washington. DuBois pinpoints the highlights of Washington's career, as well as stating the downsides of methods and philosophies. The main argument was that a people cannot wholly survive and exist without the rights of suffrage.

DuBois made prevalent the confusion and the lack of discipline felt by the Negro people. He made it easy to see how they lost in the shuffle between politicians and government policies. He successfully illustrated the pain of a people who could never seem to find their way along a path that was more often than not filled with obstacles.

DuBois was one of the greatest leaders of this time, as well as our own time. The book, first written in 1903, shows the intricate path of his thought process; in it, he was not a statistician. Though some parts of the book may be hard to absorb, and others difficult to understand, it should be read by anyone interested in American History.

The book is a good example of an overused riff being milked for all it is worth. Certain songs do have that ethereal quality, like "Shine" and "Zoon," parts 1-4. After releasing so many albums of splendor, grace, and pure Gothic genius, Carl McCoy is sure to create something imperfect once in a while. "Zoon" is by no means a generic album, but it is not as profoundly moving as it could have been. Carl McCoy relied too heavily on being musically heavy, rather than emotionally or lyrically heavy. He made it easy to see how they lost in the shuffle between politicians and government policies.

Paul Flaherty ’97
Lisa Gant ’97
"We’re going to have to take out another loan just to pay our parking tickets...Not that we ever break the law!"

Jonathan Cignetti ’97
"Don’t we pay enough $$$ already?"

Michael Kingsley ’97
Kevin Kowalski ’98
James Gaul ’98
"It’s a double standard! They park in the same places where we get ticketed!"

Athlete of the Week: Tracie Sorrentini Women's Tennis

By David Onorato
Sports Editor

This week we go to the hard courts for the Athlete of the Week Honoree, Tracie Sorrentini, a member of the women's tennis team was unanimously selected by the Babson Free Press Athlete of the Week Committee. Sorrentini is a first year student who comes to Babson from Florida where she played high school tennis at Bradenton Academy. Tracie originally hails from Sayreville, New Jersey.

Sorrentini gave an impressive start to her rookie year by winning her first 2 collegiate single and doubles matches. She is playing #1 singles and #1 doubles at the same time and, amazingly, she has yet to lose a set in singles action! Needless to say, Tracie has been a catalyst behind the team's 2-0 record.

The women's tennis team was rained out of their third match of the year against Gorton College. They have a 3 game road trip ahead of them in which they travel to Simmons, Smith, and Colby-Sawyer. There were some game in September 24th versus cross-town rival Wellesley College. If Tracie can continue her impressive start, the Babson women's tennis team will certainly be a force to be reckoned with.

Current Records

| Men's Soccer | 1-1-2 |
| Women's Soccer | 0-0-1 |
| Field Hockey | 0-2-0 |
| Volleyball | 2-2-0 |
| Women's Tennis | 2-0-0 |
| Cross Country | 10-8-0 |
| Golf | Finished 9th in first tournament |

Onorato on Deck- Going On Line With the Red Sox

By David Onorato
Sports Editor

Oh, how times have changed. When I was younger, The Sporting News was the cutting edge of sports information. ESPIN was not on at 11:00 PM, and there were not any web pages to give up-to-the-minute scores on every sporting event in the world. I was limited to a minute sports segment at 6:30 P.M. and a glimpse over the shoulder of my older brother who would spend the whole night reading The Sporting News. However, today's children have a plethora of sports info-mation available at their fingertips. Perhaps, too much. No, too much sports information! Kids can watch SportsCenter or peruse a variety of web pages that are as broad as ESPINet or as narrow as The University of Kentucky Basketball

Page. This past weekend, I decided to tap into the web page of the Bos-

After spending a few minutes to enter www.redsox.com, a diamond appears on the screen

"...you will be zapped to a land of statistics and player profiles - a baseball lover's dream..."- with a gleaming white baseball in the middle. Click on the ball and brace yourself for an incredible ride. www.redsox.com takes you inside the organization and lets you view virtually everything as-associated with the famed franchise. The front page of www.redsox.com is a stunning masterpiece of graphics. The top of the large page offers a classic photo of an old Red Sox squad holding small gloves while smiling at the camera in their wool uniforms. I believe that the Boston Red Sox player in the last row on the right is Babe Ruth but I might be mis-

member him). Click on Red Sox Records and you can improve your Red Sox knowledge in seconds. Did you know that Joe Wood had 34 wins and 219 k's in 1912? Did you know that Ellis Kinder is third in the all-time Red Sox save list with 91 or that Harry Hooper is the all-time career scoreless-base leader (for the Sox) with 300? Needless to say, I absolutely loved this part of the web page.

You can hear what Kevin Kennedy has to say about his team, what Joe Vaughn has to say about the Yankees, or what Reggie Jefferson has to say about his incredible year. You can see how many times John Valentin has hit 2 home runs in a game, or what Greg Harris is currently doing in retirement.(if you really want to). Don't forget to send your friend a post-card of Fenway Park via e-mail! Unbelievable.

The Red Sox have clearly hit a home-run with this phenomenal web page. It is easy to use and remarkably informative. I have only been born 10 years later, life would be perfect. The only problem is that I would have to read The Sporting News over my brother's shoulder every night! I would be tapping into www.redsox.com oh, how times have changed.

Bowdoin Spoils Home Opener For Women's Soccer

By Chris Keenan
A SoP Sports Editor

The women's soccer team has had a rough start to this young season. On September 9th, the Beavers traveled to Smithfield, Rhode Island to face

Fayette College. Although

Bryant had a rough year last year, 1996 looks like a promising year for the brown and yellow. According to a member of the Beavers, the team played well but was unable to emerge victorious in this contest. Babson failed to take advantage of scoring opportunities that could have led to a reversal of fortune. Stephanie Bala-urski had a solid performance in front of the net, turning away 12 of Bryant's best attacks. Morgan Wegrian and Christina Bosie both scored unassisted goals for Babson. The game ended in a 1-1 stalemate.
