President Sorensen welcomes students

Welcome to all Babson students, faculty, staff and guests! As both a postgraduate and full-time student, it is my pleasure to share the excitement of this new academic year with you. The College has grown significantly since my last year, and I am looking forward to working with all of you to make this year a success.

Babson's undergraduate program for many years has been granted accreditation by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business. As a result, the College can now offer a variety of programs and degrees, including a master's program in business administration. The significance of this achievement is that it represents the highest recognition of Babson's commitment to providing a quality education. Babson's faculty is dedicated to ensuring that our students receive the best possible education.

I would like to share with you some of the highlights of my experience as President of Babson College. We have continued to expand our facilities, which now include a new library, a state-of-the-art computer center, and a new athletic complex. These improvements have allowed us to attract more talented students and faculty to our campus.

I am proud of the accomplishments of Babson's students, who have achieved great things both inside and outside the classroom. Babson's graduates are respected for their professionalism and leadership skills, and they are sought after by employers around the world. I am confident that Babson's future will continue to be bright.

In closing, I would like to express my thanks and gratitude to all of you for your support and commitment to Babson College. Together, we can make a difference in the lives of our students and the world around us.

Sincerely,
Ralph Z. Sorensen
Melvin Copen named VP for Academic Affairs

President Sorenson has announced that Melvin R. Copen will be coming to Babson as Vice President for Academic Affairs and the Dean of the School of Management. Dr. Copen is currently Associate Dean of the College of Business Administration at Georgia State University, where he also serves as Dean of Graduate Studies. He is joining Babson as a result of a nationwide search by a joint committee of faculty, trustees, administration, and students.

Dr. Copen will be bringing with him a varied career background. After earning Bachelor of Science and Master of Science degrees at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in business and engineering disciplines, Dr. Copen joined the General Electric Company and was a member of the manufacturer's training and creative engineering programs and carried out assignments as production supervisor, manufacturing administrator, and manufacturing engineer.

Copen's continuing interest in education was reflected by his return to earn his doctorate at the Harvard Business School. While there, Dr. Copen served as a Research Fellow and was a member of the faculty. Subsequently, he accepted an appointment at the College of Business Administration of the University of Houston as a professor of production and logistics. He also served as Associate Dean of that College. During his tenure, among other achievements, he was responsible for the introduction of the doctoral program and established a program of study in International Business. In 1971, Dr. Copen entered on a three-year period of service with the U.S. Department of Agriculture; first as a White House Fellow working as Special Assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, then as principal management staff officer of the Department. These years of government service were followed by several years in the business world with Westinghouse Corporation and Gould, Inc. While with these companies, Dr. Copen was engaged at various times in designing long-range planning systems, in international business activities, and in multi-national management.

In 1977, Dr. Copen once again returned to education, joining the College of Business Administration of Georgia State University as Associate Dean of the College and Director of Graduate Studies. He received tenure as Professor of Management.

WELCOME

Informed that Babson had been accredited by unanimous vote of the member schools of the AACSB Council: "The rigorous standards employed (by the AACSB Accreditation Council) made attainment of formalized level accreditation an achievement for which the School of Management...may be appropriately proud." He went on to say: "This achievement also signifies the belief of the Accreditation Council that the School of Management can be reasonably expected to continue the fine progress which it has demonstrated to date."

The Accreditation Council, while favorably inclined to the needs of the Babson College, has deferred accreditation of that program for one year. This was done in order that the Accreditation Committee can assure itself of our ability to sustain full-time faculty course coverage and professional, scholarly development of the College. Babson participants demonstrated over this part of the academic year. I am confident that we will be able to provide the Committee with ample evidence of our ability to sustain our present and expand our record of academic and scholarly accomplishment during the remainder of the academic year. We will take pride and pleasure at this professional expression of confidence in the quality of Babson's educational degree programs.

More good news for both new and returning students is that the Horn Library has been completed and the new facility is operating at full tilt. Perhaps returning students will appreciate more than new students the significance of this addition to the campus.

Horn Library was designed with the specific needs of students of management in mind. It offers a circulation desk suited to these specific needs that is perhaps unrivaled by any library in the area. For example, not only a given item may be found more quickly, but we are also able to offer the catalog on each floor of the Library. Another example, we have information in depth of Babson's 12,000 corporations on microfiche as well as of, printed materials on several thousand corporations.

The Media Services Department of the Library has varied and sophisticated equipment which will enable the students to make classroom and simulated management presentations. In addition, Babson has a brochure including slides, tapes, video tapes, movies and overhead transparencies. Besides these mechanical aids, the new Library offers students and overnight reading, a public library, fourteen study rooms and two seminar rooms. Provision has been made for sixty-five computer terminals, and these will be available this fall for use by the faculty and Babson students. Several IBM Selectric typewriters in an area set aside for typing.

The new library is the culmination of Babson's educational center which consists of, besides Horn Library, Babson, Gerber, and Kriebel Halls devoted to classrooms and faculty offices.

Horn Library has been a long time in the making and it has completed a longer tour of several years of planning and construction. It is our belief that this investment will completely fill Babson's needs for many years to come. By way of example I plan to do everything we can to keep Horn Library looking its best and functioning up to its fullest potential. I am working on the cooperation of some other college people who are going to be living in the Babson community to help us do so.

Finally, I am very happy to be able to announce that as of January 1, 1981, Melvin Copen will assume the position of Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean of the School of Management.

Dr. Copen has had great breadth of experience as a manager in strategic planning in both business and education. Dr. Copen comes to Babson as the result of a nationwide search by a committee which included representation of faculty trustees, administration and students. I feel that we are extremely fortunate in being able to attract a person of Dr. Copen's caliber.

At this point I would like to say a brief word about his predecessor, Dr. Carpenter, who so ably filled this critical position for many years. Before he began work in January, Dr. Carpenter had resigned the position in order to resume teaching, but because of his illness, his return to teaching has been delayed. Babson College will always be indebted to Dr. Carpenter for much of the progress made at the College during his tenure. Most recently, Dr. Carpenter was the principal architect and developer of the accreditation process, having the principal responsibility for the state level survey and for the visit of the accrediting team. The College will always be grateful for his leadership and devotion to Babson.

While every academic year is a new venture—as one that I look forward to each year—there is something special about this one. With so many favorable developments going on to a flying start, there is good reason to believe that this year could be as rewarding to look back on as it has been exciting to look ahead to.

The “Babson Community”

It is an almost overused expression. It is seen, read, and countlessly mentioned in countless numbers of speeches, letters, articles and conversations. Yet the expression “Babson Community” is still a versatile and meaningful phrase for the students, faculty, administration and staff of Babson College.

For such a large group of people to join together and work together takes a lot of things. It takes pride, mutual interests, a common goal, and hard work. As we each look at Babson College in particular, we will note of some of the things that are both many undergraduates rarely, if ever, have any contact with Babson and students. At this college, we must be made to keep all factions of the community together.

The problem is that all the people that make up our community is a physical one - we are all here at the same place. The feeling of pride we seem to have socially and locally, and the achievements, can all be wrecked too easily. Long bouts with vandalism, litter, and false alarms, feel like small acts of war among us, but ties with the rest of the area are well.

While such things as pride and friendliness spans a long way toward keeping the “Babson Community” close, it is not something to be taken lightly. It takes effort to keep a group of people together, effort on the part of all.

Economic response

To the Editor:

The editorial in the last issue of the Free Press published during the Spring semester suggested that Babson may be oriented too much toward business and the development of professional skills. Evidence cited included the small number of Babson students who join the business community. The editorial writer asked, “When was the last time you heard of any class discussing Socialism, Communism or the current progress of work concerning the free enterprise system?”

For those familiar with Babson, this question is answerable. The answer to some current course would be an appropriate reply.

Our economic principles courses consider alternative forms of economic organization, although only the market system is analyzed in any great detail, and several of our upper level offerings, especially the international and the microeconomics course, examine the strengths and weaknesses of socialism, communism and the free enterprise system. I also think these issues arise in various government, history, sociology, society and technology, American studies and your electives in business courses.

Indeed, part of Babson’s general mission, as stated in the Master Plan, is “to help students develop a general understanding of the world’s principal economic and political systems and the principal agents which have characterized the growth and development of the United States.”

Regarding the allegedly narrow interests of Babson students, I would undertake to find out how the observation, that compared with students at a large state university, Babson students are on average more informed and concerned about these broader economic and political issues. (That, however, is not great compilation.)

Regarding the selection of commencement speakers, the writer’s choice of Donald Kendall, William Musgrave and Malcolm Forbes as examples does not well support the contention. Mr. Kendall has been quite active in fostering closer economic ties and mutual understanding with the Soviet Union; now Secretary of the Treasury and formerly head of the Federal Reserve. Mr. Miller is the only way to influence the performance of the American free enterprise system; Mr. Forbes’ exploits in business, and his magazine publishes not only business information, but also essays on the broader issues. The careers of these speakers argue eloquently in favor of diversification of interests.

The above remarks pertain to only part of the broader issue of “diversification of knowledge,” namely, those comments addressed in the editorial. I do think Babson offers more in this regard than most students realize.

Pooh’s Corner

Only you can prevent...

“School days, School days, Dear old golden rule days.” By now, the thought of coming back to school has probably become very mundane and rather unexciting. To those freshmen, the experience should provide some additional degree of excitement. I, too, had the same feeling that, well, it may be a new school year, but how totally realistic? I was thinking of the rules I was headed for “the same old grind” and that nothing really new was happening. I knew that I was not the only one with this same feeling, but I still didn’t seem to provoke the height of excitement that I thought it should.

As I arrived on campus, I suddenly was filled with a feeling of excitement and adventure, anticipating that there would be new courses to tackle, new experiences to be had and a new newspaper to publish. Then, I began to look around (the Babson campus, and I suddenly realized that nothing was different, that there was nothing I couldn’t explain, but that something changed the whole mood and character of the campus. Don’t get me wrong, it was not a negative feeling, but a positive one. I’m sure that some of it had to do with being back, starting again and all the usual feelings which come over someone returning-to-school. It seemed more than that, though but I just couldn’t define it.

As I went through the usual rituals of unpacking, checking the mailbox, saying hello to old friends, and basically re-establishing myself, it dawned on me like an atomic bomb that the campus seemed unusually clean, sparsely populated, and almost perfect in appearance. I decided to test this theory, and began walking around to look at the campus and the new condition it was in. First, I noticed all the new and old doors to the buildings were the obvious changes. The Horn Library, a most beautiful and impressive addition; the construction of certain rooms and doors; the benches and tubs on the Trim terrace; and the closing off of Babson Park Avenue. There would be many other small, less obvious changes such as the new parking signs across the street from the Hanger building. I found administration members on campus, and the new Babson Counseling Group. Although there were no cars on campus, it was not enough to satisfy the reasons for the feeling that the campus really was different. Scrutinizing the situation a bit more closely, I finally found the real reason for this new feeling that the campus was better in some way. It was the lack of dirt paths in the middle of grass, the lack of rubbish and other refuse detaching the campus paths, the lack of trash in both the hallways, and the lack of graffiti and posters and pamphlets covering the walls throughout the campus buildings. It was the clean wells, green, grassy lawns; empty trash barrels and shrubbery which seems to be living and thriving rather than stopped-on and dying. These few changes may not seem to be a big concern in our day-to-day activities, yet having them present made a big difference in the way I felt about Babson and a student.

I began to become a little depressed at the thought that this new beauty, this new cleanliness, was gone very long. I then stood still for a minute in a state of delusion, in a dream world, thinking that maybe, just maybe, the campus would remain this way during the school year. There is really no sensible reason why the campus shouldn’t remain this way, but I guess, from past experience, I was hoping against hope.

Often times, it seems that the students, when they are outside of school, praise the school with pride and admiration. Babson College will always remain an institution which can and should always be looked upon with pride. The fact still remains that when guests, friends and others see the campus and have a chance to become impressed with its many facilities, the impression instilled in their minds after visiting the campus will be that much more solid and sound if they could see the campus the way I have during the few days I have been here.

It is truly my hope, and I am sure the hope of all of us that I have found that this showcase appearance can be preserved throughout this coming year. How can this be accomplished? I don’t know just yet. After you read this newspaper, take a walk around the campus, enjoy the many beautiful things. I think this campus can has to find that once you see the campus at its best, you will have the same desire to preserve the grounds as they are. Maybe, if you’re lucky, you’ll be reading an opinion column next April praising the good job the student body has done in maintaining the A+ appearance that the campus has now.

Pooh’s Corner is written bi-weekly by David Sarbin, a former student, who serves as the Feature’s Editor for the Free Press. This column was his opinion column the last time he was in the paper. If you think you’ll find that once you see the campus at its best, you will have the same desire to preserve the grounds as they are. Maybe, if you’re lucky, you’ll be reading a column next April praising the good job the student body has done in maintaining the A+ appearance that the campus has now.

Contribution thanks

To the Editor:

I would like to publicly express my thanks and appreciation to Mr. Miller, the Class of 1977, and the 24 Class Agents of the Class of 1980.

Understanding leadership, 95% of the members of this year’s graduating class have already made a contribution to the Annual Fund. This is truly a phenomenal achievement and the entire class is to be congratulated.

Not only will this establish an important precedent for Babson’s future graduating classes, it will also go a long way to spark a sense of pride and enthusiasm among former Babson graduates and remind them of the quality education offered at Babson College and the positive attitudes of today’s graduates.

Craig Klocke, Alumni Chairman, Annual Fund.
Getting Involved at Babson: Campus

Student Government
The objective of Student Government is "to represent, promote, and further the interests of the student body."

Its officers are elected in the spring, and representatives in the fall. These individuals meet weekly on Tuesday evenings at 6:30 p.m. in the Fo’c’sle, Park Manor North. These meetings are open to all interested students.

The Government appoints student representatives to all college committees, including academic affairs, governance, student affairs, grading, food service, bookstore, faculty, and division meetings. In addition, Government maintains its own standing committees; among them social, vending machines, and security.

The responsibilities of Student Government are spelled out in the constitution and bylaws, which are available in the government offices in the basement of Park Manor Central.

Licensing Committee
The committee reviews and recommends acceptance or rejection of a business license to the Student Government. The body interprets and enforces the By-Laws of the Student Government concerning student businesses. The Vice-President of Student Government serves as Chairperson of the committee.

Student Judicial Court
The Student Judicial Court has jurisdiction over all undergraduate disciplinary matters. It is composed of five voting members, a non-voting chairperson, and two alternates, all of whom are undergraduates. The Dean of Students, advisor to the court, acts as a liaison for the administration, and may attend court matters, as a non-voting member.

Student Traffic Court
A six-member court presides over appeals concerning the operation and parking of all vehicles on the Babson campus. The court meets weekly in the Student Government offices, and all appeals must be made in person at these meetings. All appeals to the court must be brought up within three weeks of the said violation.

Babson Free Press
The Babson Free Press, a weekly newspaper published every Thursday, is the primary means of written communication among students. The Free Press office is located in the basement of Park Manor Central, below the mailroom. Everyone is invited to participate in the publication and composition of the paper. Working for the Free Press provides an opportunity for a student to become creatively involved in the life of the college and besides, you might even find out what happens on those late Wednesday nights.

Babsonian
The Babsonian, an annual publication, is designed, produced, and managed by under graduate students. It serves as a journalistic and historical publication, striving for professionalism in all areas of its work: photography, journalism, graphics, and internal management. The Babsonian invites the student with energy and dedication to join its staff. Its offices are located on the ground floor of Forest Hall.

Cardinal Key
Cardinal Key is a national honor society, designed to recognize high scholastic aptitude and demonstrate leadership potential. It is open to Babson students, both male and female, who have an average of 9.0 or better.

Blue Key
Blue Key is a national organization that recognizes students for excellence in leadership, college activities, and scholarship. Members must have a cumulative average of above 8.5, and have completed two years of college. Blue Key strives to stimulate intellectual achievement to promote the best interests of Babson, and to encourage service to others.

B.I.S.O.
The Babson International Student Organization helps incoming foreign students find their niche in the Babson community and serves as the link between the foreign student and the college. Every international student is automatically a member. Activities include International Day, off-campus excursions and a hosting service for incoming students from around the world.

Black Society
The Black Society’s primary objective is to pursue the Black’s cultural heritage and interests. All Babson students are eligible for membership, subject to the discretion of the organization. The Afro-American room located in the basement of Park Manor North, contains a library of books and periodicals covering Black literature, social conditions, and heritage.

Chamber of Commerce
The Chamber of Commerce is a group of campus student businesses which has formed a coalition in order to exchange ideas and promote the entrepreneurial spirit. They provide information and assistance for student businesses and sponsor the “Business of the Month” award.

Academy of Accountancy
The Academy offers undergraduate and graduate student a vehicle to honor outstanding accounting majors, and promote the profession as a career choice through enrichment programs. It also serves as a publication agency for research papers and projects.

All College Council
The All-College council provides members of the Babson community with equal representation on one committee. Its members are composed of undergraduate and graduate faculty, and administration representatives. Meetings are held monthly, and all members of the Babson community are invited to attend.

Sailing Club
Both a student activity and a varsity sport, the Sailing Club provides an opportunity for recreational sailing, as well as team regattas and competitions. The club keeps Tech dinghy boats moored at Lake Waban on the Wellesley College campus.

Football Preview

The greatest thing about summer is no school. The worst thing is no football. In Boston, this is doubly true this year since everyone gave up on the Sox in early April. The City is dying to see what the Pats will do. Now that the Pats spent a year out of the playoffs, the team is really starting to get hungry. Chuck Foreman may still have just enough fire left in him to spark New England. I'd like to see Grogan get a little more control, so he can lead the attack and not follow Craig Morton's lead. The AFC East is going to be an exciting and high scoring division. If the Patriots are going to hold Miami and Baltimore back, they'll have to perk up the offense.

The Central Division will match Pittsburgh and Houston. What else can you say? I think the Steelers will come out strong, but burn out in the playoffs.

The West is up for grabs. Denver has no offense to count on. Pastorini will probably get beat up in Oakland; Seattle drew the toughest schedule in the NFL, and San Diego has to develop a ground game. Too bad K.C. is so bad.

The National Conference is a bigger mess. Philadelphia finally broke their two year last year and are early favorites to go all the way. Danny White is trying to get comfortable in some very big shoes with Glen Carano pushing for a job, too. Fortunately Too Tall Jones is back with a mean right hook to meet the opposing quarterbacks.

The Central Division is a real sleeper, to the point of boredom. Even Detroit has a shot at the crown. Tampa Bay has to be too embarrassed to make a showing. Phils and Payton could run away with the scoring in Chicago.

My biggest personal desire will be to see New Orleans knock off LA. The Rams have owned that title without really earning it for too long. Nobody likes the Rams except for obnoxious Californians, anyhow.

Maybe we could have an all "New" Superbowl. New England and New Orleans that is. What a gas that would be.

Globe Trot III planned

Mark October 18th on your calendar. You won't want to miss the third annual running of the Babson Globe Trot, which, even in its infancy, is attracting fame and recognition as THE collegiate road race in Massachusetts. The last time around, Olympic and Boston Marathon great Johnny Kelley the Elder, fired the starting gun for more than 230 runners-including students, faculty, staff, and administration.

The Globe Trot covers 2.8 miles of roller-coaster Wellesley terrain, a negotiable distance and contour for just about anyone. There is virtually no excuse to be a spectator for the intramural event on campus. There will be prizes and a T-shirt for everyone who finishes the race, which starts promptly at 1 p.m. in front of the new Horn Library. No doubt, there'll be a round of applause for you; the finish line is on the soccer field, which hosts the Babson-Bowdoin varsity tilt at 2 p.m. It's Homecoming Weekend, remember, so run in the third annual Babson Globe Trot and be in the majority!

SOCCER

BABSON VS ALUMNI

Sunday, Sept. 7, 1:00 P.M. at the Beaver Bowl

Come and enjoy the game

This is the man to contact concerning Physical Education. Baseball and Hockey: Coach Steve Stirling.

RE: Defending a National Championship

Dear Sirs:

We, the Babson Community, have everlasting faith that you can once again meet and overcome all competition. We realize you have some new problems. For instance: 1) the loss of some outstanding players; 2) as most respected team in the league, everyone will be out to defeat you; and 3) over-confidence is hard to avoid. However, under the helm of Coach Rogers, who is averaging 50 percent on National Championships, we know you can do it. We feel that teams like W.P.I. will watch their 'step' with John Sisk back on the field. We can't imagine too many people scoring on another solid Babson defense. We are looking forward to seeing the scoring attack of Stentor, Silva, Fisher, Sexton, Bryant and Company.

While you guys have been out easing through double sessions and miles of running, we have been doing some serious resting. It's not easy thinking up all those rotten things to say to the opposing goalies. We have to stand there yelling all afternoon, while you run around kicking a silly little ball. If you think it's tough getting yelled at by the coach, just try serving a lousy Bloody Mary on the sidelines! Well, good luck anyway. We know you can do it.

Love and kisses,
The Babson Beaver

FOOTBALL PICKS

San Francisco 13...at New Orleans 20
Should be a great game. Campbell and Harris will put in good showings but Bradshaw will prove to be the difference.

Atlanta 20...at Minnesota 10
This could be New Orleans’ year. They've been in the re-building stage for a few years now, and should be ready with a healthy Archie Manning.

Houston 21...at Pittsburgh 29
Atlanta is working on a winning tradition while Minnesota has not been too productive re-building.

Chicago 28...at Green Bay 10
Phipps and Payton should have a good scoring afternoon.

Miami 24...at Buffalo 21
Buffalo may surprise alot of people this year but Miami still has Griese at the helm.

Tampa Bay 21...at Cincinnati 7
Buccaneers will pick up where they left off last year.

New York Giants 14...at St. Louis 17
Cardinals will win this one. Home field looks to be the deciding factor.

Cleveland 14...at New England 21
Pats should win if the defense holds strong. Cavanaugh will lead the club in the second half.

Baltimore 35...at New York Jets 42
A passing game. The team with the least mistakes winning.

San Diego 20...at Seattle 21
Could be the best game of the day. The Kingdom will help in this game.

Detroit 13...at Los Angeles 14
A rude awakening for the Rams. The Lions, with Sims, will make it a tough Sunday for the Rams defense.

Oakland 14...at Kansas City 17
A game plagued by mistakes. Your guess is as good as mine.

Denver 17...at Philadelphia 27
While Denver tries to find an offense, the Eagles play like a contender.

Monday Night

Dallas 21...at Washington 17
Washington is always tough before a sellout home crowd but Doomsday II should stop the Redskins attack.
