Gov't Grants Three Licenses

The granting of licenses to three students businesses was the main point at the Student Government meeting last Tuesday.

In his presentation to Gov't license committee chairman, Grant Kehoe recommended that Gov't approve the granting of licenses to three businesses; Paul Amenta to operate a travel agency, Thomas Roach to sell Sunday newspapers at brunch, and Mike Highland to run a li- quor delivery service for students.

In regard to the travel business, Kehoe said that the committee was in error and that the business had been sold to Paul Amenta by Jack Cotton through correct constitutional procedures. Amenta would represent his father's business located in Far Rockaway, N.Y.

The Sunday newspaper business would be conducted in Trim Dining Hall during brunch. Available for sale will be the Boston Globe, the Sunday Herald Advertiser, and the New York Times. All papers will be sold at newsstand prices.

The liquor delivery service will make two trips a day to Kelly's liquor. This will be a strictly order business and will have no inventory. The owner will receive a commission from the liquor store. Questions were raised concerning Amenta's business was in conflict with the Pub and who is responsible if liquor is sold to a minor. Roach remarked that this business was delivering alcoholic beverages, not selling them, so it wasn't in conflict with the Pub. Also, since the owner received a commission from the store, they accept responsibility.

Kehoe also mentioned the complaint forms regarding licensed businesses appearing in the Student Affairs office. Complaints will only be considered when they are written up on the form.

A presentation was made by the Poster Committee Chairman Linda Lach concerning regulations regarding student posters. The rules state that posters can't be over posters and advertisements hang up on bulletin boards. The regulations limit posters to 11 by 17" and state they must be signed by the sponsoring organization. Lach also stated that there was a need for more bulletin boards.

Babson Edges Hartford, 2-1

Babson scores winning goal in sudden death, (see story page 7)

Yesterday, the Babson Beaver Soccer Team defeated the University of Hartford 2-1 in overtime. Brown early scored the winning goal after one minute had passed in the "sudden death" period.

The largest and most enthusiastic crowd of the year witnessed an extremely well-played and hard fought game. Both teams were aggressive and went all out to win the contest. The Beavers knew, as did the Hawks, that a loss would eliminate them from the tournament. This was the first NCAA Tournament for the Beavers, and they played as if it was their life. The Hawks will now play the winner of the Springfield College and Westfield State game.

Student/ Admin.
Housing Committee Formed

A new student/administrative housing committee was established this week by Babson College, the result of a proposal made by Dean Debra M. Amidon.

Dean Amidon said the committee would be a means of increasing communication among all interested parties participating in the community concerns of all housing issues.

Its formal functions, Dean Amidon said, will be to serve as liaisons with the offices and residential segments of the campus to which each member represents to facilitate communication; to consider, review and make recommendations concerning housing policies to be followed by appropriate personnel; to recommend changes and improvements in the residence halls; and to solve problems.

The committee will be comprised of Dean Amidon, as Assistant Dean for Residential Life, and a representative from each of the residence halls.

Putney Comments: Construction Update

The business office announced today an update on campus construction plans. Jesse M. Putney, Vice President in charge of Financial Affairs, commented on the status of the many steps that are being taken to convert the Babson campus into a walking campus.

He also commented on possible ramifications of the fuel oil shortage in the New England area to Babson.

A statement was also issued justifying the monopoly power of the committee would be "a mechanism for increasing communication among all interested parties participating in the community concerns of all housing issues."

"If seems that this contract has been nothing but a string of broken promises. It has been a most unfortunate contract for both parties."

Continued Putney, "The security reception center is being built by a separate contractor and shouldn't be too much longer."

"The center in being constructed at a cost of some $4,000 and includes plumbing and electrical equipment."

From the tournament. This was the first NCAA Tournament for the Beavers, and they played as if it was their life. The Hawks will now play the winner of the Springfield College and Westfield State game.

The Col de Sac, in front of Park Manor," Putney added, "should not take too long to complete once it is started, either."

When asked to comment upon the new completion date for the proposed dormitory construction, he said, "We must have it completed by next fall or there will be no need for it at all. It looks as though there will be an all-out effort in the spring, more definite plans will be forthcoming."

He then interjected, "It is apparent that there is no new space in the dormitory section, due to the current shortage and the de-creased enrollment, it will be necessary to build a new dormitory section, the new dormitory section will be ready for occupancy by the spring of 1975."

In other space, "The new dormitory section will be ready for occupancy by the spring of 1975."

"The new dormitory section will be ready for occupancy by the spring of 1975."

Taking Aim: Plagiarism: A Serious Crime

By Harvey Fireman

Plagiarism is defined in the Student Handbook as "the submission by a student of the work of another as if it were his/her own." This is a very serious crime on the Babson campus.

Plagiarism can be described as lies and deceit. Both legal and moral arguments can be used to substantiate plagiarism's rating as serious. Whichever argument is set forth, it is still wrong. And on the Babson campus, plagiarism can result in expulsion.

Plagiarism can take two forms. First, if the paper was either partially or wholly written by another person. Second, if the paper has been copied either wholly or in part from a published or unpublished source, and then submitted as the student's own work.

The handbook lists three general areas of plagiarism which student should be aware of.

1. First, direct quotations. The handbook reads, "a direct quotation must always be placed within quotation marks and the source noted, either in the body of the paper, in a footnote, or in both."

2. The second area of trouble that a student should have knowledge of is paraphrasing. A warning in the handbook states, "merely changing the wording of a passage while keeping the original ideas and organizations does not give the student the right to claim original authorship for the paraphrase."

3. The third area is ideas. If the student wishes to borrow ideas from an author without quoting him, then the student must "attribute the source of the idea at the point in his/her paper where it is discussed."

If a professor feels that he has found a case of plagiarism, procedure calls for him to present his case to the Dean of Student, Paul Baun, Judicial Court's adviser. (Judicial Court is composed of seven students and is responsible for all disciplinary actions of students.) If the Dean determines that the case is found, then he calls for the Chairman of the court. If the Chairman agrees that the evidence is strong, then he informs the student in question of the charges and the court's procedures. At least 48 hours must be given to the student to form a defense.

Judicial court will then hear the case, and they will decide the student's guilt or innocence. If the student is found guilty, punishment can range from a slap on the wrist to expulsion.

These proceedings should not be taken lightly. The charge of plagiarism against a student is very serious, as are the court's actions. Again, quoting the handbook, plagiarism is one of the most serious of academic crimes. It can result in the suspension of the convicted student from Babson College.

Editor's Wastebasket: Retraction;

Conflicts rose last week when two items appeared in the FREE PRESS regarding the Tishbi-Weiss saga. Football game: On, a column by Diane Caggiano editorializing on the unseemly physicality of the game; and the other an item in the Editor's Wastebasket implying that the Delta Sigma players demonstrated poor sportsmanship during the game.

In our considered opinion, Ms. Caggiano's article is beyond reproach. It was not a news story and therefore she was under no obligation to refrain from expressing her opinion. It is argued that the article was slanted against Delta Sig; perhaps it was, but Ms. Caggiano is within her rights to print her opinion. And perhaps her point of view regarding the physicality of the game should be given due consideration, for we feel that twelve injuries, some of them serious, incurred during a "friendly" game of flag football is twelve injuries too many.

The second issue at hand here is the item printed in the Editor's Wastebasket. Again, this is not a news column and therefore we need not refrain from editorializing when we feel it is deserved. In fact, it is this very casual editorializing which makes the Wastebasket the most widely read column: in the paper, for it is in the Wastebasket that we can figuratively take a shot at someone and tell him/her/they we feel that something is wrong (without the comments on the new road, the activities of some professors, and so forth ad infinitum). However, we do not wish to make the Wastebasket a forum for debate between factions, and we would not be serving the best interests of the FREE PRESS or the student body if we were to allow it to become so. It is for this reason that we retract the statement in the Editor's Wastebasket regarding Delta Sigma Pi.

Ida: Bason's newest co-ed

By John Kelley

Ida arrived at Bason two weeks ago, and everyone who has come to see her. Ida is really BIDA -- an acronym for Interactive Data Analysis -- a new statistical program for statistical computation. It is one of two newly available programming packages now available at the computer center.

Developed by University of Chicago's Graduate School of Business, IDA is easy to learn. To use and provides general capabilities for statistical analysis. Previously, if one wanted to analyze a set of data, one had to choose each of several programs to be sure of the form in which data had to be entered. The user had to enter the data again and again in various formats for each program. With IDA, a copy of the data is used, and then the user chooses the formats he wants for the output. The process is easier, and the user can choose the format he wants for the output.

I'm sure that a student of computer science or mathematics would find IDA very useful.

Next week, let's look at the software and the hardware that make up the computer systems on campus.

PETE KARON: PASTRIES AS GOOD AS MOM'S

by David Marcus

Pete Karon, Fajga Foods' baker at Babson, turns out pastries which some students say taste like their mothers made, but any similarity ends there.

For one thing, Karon uses about half a ton of raw materials every week, about 600 lbs. of flour, 300 lbs. of sugar, and 150 lbs. of shortening, oils and butter.

He uses an 80 quart mixing machine to mix dough, and a seven shelf rotating oven, to make the most of his limited oven space. Karon bakes 65-70 dozen rolls a day, as well as all the cakes, pies and puddings offered at the dining hall.

"Everything is baked here," Karon says. "And the ingredients are always the best I can get, I can order anything I want, and we never cut corners trying to make a profit."

Karon's schedule is a busy one. In the mornings, Pete makes all the cookies, pudding and brownies for the lunch desserts and mixes up the dough for rolls, which has to sit for two hours, and finally makes the cakes and pies in the forenoon for dinner.

He usually finishes the day at 3 P.M., after the pies are out of the oven. On Thursdays and Fridays, though, Karon works overtime preparing all the rolls and pastries for the weekend.

The extra time he spends in the bake shop isn't Karon's only problem. "We're doing twice as much business today as we did six years ago, when I started here, and now the quarters are kind of tight. We can't get any more equipment, and we can't get ahead of production. It wasn't bad for a one man shop in the beginning, but now the situation is getting beyond a one-man shop.

DICK METZGER, Babson's boss and food service manager at Babson, confirmed that there is a definite lack of space in the kitchen. "We're exploring the possibility of relocating the bake shop in a more room," Metzger says. "With 75 more people here next year, the situation will be even worse. And when there are five more dorms, as the Master Plan calls for, the school will have to build a new dining room sometime in the future.

However, Karon says, "All in all, it's an enjoyable job. The students are good, and we've always had a good relationship with them. And the work is challenging and interesting. We even use some chemistry here. For instance, you can't use baking powder with molasses as a leavening agent, because of the reaction you'll get, you're got to use baking soda."

Karon is also more specialized and more exacting than the average housewife. Instead of adding a handful of this and a pinch of that, Karon says, "everything is weighed. There are three separate bins for the three kinds of flour we use - bread, cake and pastry. We don't use all-purpose flour, like housewives do, and so a good baker can produce a better product than a housewife, because he's got the better tools to work with.

"We found one thing over the years. The big movers are chocolate cake, brownies, and apple and blueberry pies. Even so, we try to throw something different at the students every so often."

"We like to give the kids an interesting choice. But we try to put out what the kids want the most. I run this outfit like my own retail outfit."

Pete Karon, who has been a baker for 30 years, used to have his own bakery. In fact, he says, he had two of them, one in Cambridge, and later, one on the Cape, both the victim of the politician's sword. "Both bakeries were torn down for redevelopment, and I decided I wasn't going to give them a third chance," he's pretty, pretty safe now - at least, until redevelopment comes to Wellesley.

One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest

by Ray Houston and Fred Reynolds

"C'mon Ray, I get tired of writing these rave reviews. You run out of superlatives after a while."

"I know Fred, I've already used all the adjectives in my thesaurus. But it's going to be hard to say something derogatory about ONE FLEW OVER THE CUCKOO'S NEST."

"And, of course, we can't. 'Cuckoo's Nest' has run at the Charles Playhouse for a full year, making it the longest-running production currently onstage in Boston. For a drama to survive this long, we were told, is unheard of. The play, adapted by Ken Wasserman (who wrote MAN OF LA MANCHA from Ken Kesey's fabulous novel), deserves the glowing ovations it receives after the curtain falls.

Someone once remarked that he didn't see how any story could do more that wring your heart while enlightening how it works. The problem, he noted, was that so few stories do, 'Cuckoo's Nest' does both. One man, Randy McMurphy, apparently forfeits mental illness in orde to have the rest of his prison sentence committed to the "easy" life of the asylum. McMurphy is a reckless, free-wheeling, gambling, one-mo— obviously a sane, rational person. When he arrives at the mental institution, he finds that things are not so easy. The hospital is run by Nurse Ratched (called "Big Nurse" by the patients). Big Nure tells the hospital by tyrannizing her patients, who have long ago given up the struggle to assert themselves.

From the outset McMurphy challenges her authoritarianism. At first, he considers it a "game" and, accordingly, bets on the outcome. But with time, his one-man struggle becomes a life-and-death conflict. In the process, he becomes a hero to the other patients. For the first time in years, they realize their own strengths, their own sanity, and their own freedom.

The play contains both humor and intense drama, professionally portrayed by the actors. Big Nurse is portrayed by Josephine Lane, and Michael Cavanaugh stars as McMurphy. Others in the play are Randy Hunter, Danny Hild, Roger Bankhurst, Kathie Colewite, and Jon Terry.

It was amazing to see the actors become so involved in the feelings, the motivations, and the expressions and gestures of the characters. Just as amazing was the work done by director Lee Daniels, Scudder and Gardner Scudder and Rudi Golin, in Association with William Craver. They transformed Kesey's novel via Wasserman's adaptation, into a quality production without losing the accuracy necessary to the story.

In short, the play was excellent, the acting superb and the wine at the cast party afterwards was pretty good too. It is Boston, be sure to see it.

Performances are scheduled Tuesdays through Sundays at 7:30 p.m., with matinees on Wednesdays and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Ticket prices range from $4.50 to $6.50. Spending the day and time of performance, with student discounts and student rush tickets available with L.D. I.

Soccer Team Downs Hartford; 2-1 Win In Overtime
Puts Team In Finals Of NCAA Tournament

by David Roberts, Rich Stillman, Michael Viveiros

Yesterday's game was the best of the year played at Babson. Both teams appeared nervous at the start of play, but they settled down after a few minutes. Hartford moved to the ball well, and it was apparent from the start that they were a highly disciplined team. Babson countered with excellent passing, and set up good offensive plays.

At 22 minutes into the game, after two unsuccessful corner kicks, Bobby Hirtle kicked a low line drive on the third consecutive attempt, as it came across the middle of the goal mouth. Aram Hanian made it in for the first Babson goal. Hartley got the assist.

Babson continued to keep play in Hartford's zone applying good pressure on both the Hawk's defense and their goalie, Mike Hackett.

The second half began with both teams coming out fighting. Three skirmishes occurred during this period, in which two players were ejected from the game for fair rough play. Both benches and several players were given warnings for their conduct during the game.

The Beavers had several chances to score, but were unable to capitalize. Mark Barry almost scored for Babson as he had a breakaway for the Beavers. He came toward the Hartford penalty zone, and was tripped by a Hartford player. Dale Hollingsworth took the penalty kick, but it was blocked by Mike Hackett, the Hawk's goalie.

With less than seven minutes to play, Babson suffered a defensive breakdown. Hartford forward Harry Karmilman raced past several Beaver defenders, and was unstopable as he took a good shot on Donohoe. Donohoe was unable to block the shot, and Hartford tied the game 1-1.

The rest of the game was a series of scoring tries, with Babson having the best chances. Regulation time ended with the game tied and the crowd screaming.

After one minute had passed in the overtime, Hartford was called for a handball. Dale Hollingsworth took the ensuing direct kick. Alex Weiss headed the ball to Bruce Brown, who put it in the net to give the Beavers the win.

Coach Hartwell commented that Willy Tabsh has "played the best game of his career, with outstanding help from McGuire, and Powers."

Hartwell also said that the team successfully thwarted Hartford's top scorer, Al Nunez. The Hawks dropped back effectively, and cut off the passing lane between Karmilman and Nunez.

Babson will now play on Sunday against either Springfield College or Westfield State. The opponent will be the winner of the game between these two teams.

CONSIDER BOOKS

There are advantages, especially for gifts that have to be mailed.

BOOKS don't break. If properly packed they don't even bend.

They arrive gift wrap intact.

BOOKS cost less to mail, approximately 1/5th the cost of mailing non-book merchandise.

Most important, whether to be sent or simply given,

The Grid Guesser
by Bob Cat

It is now the tenth week of the 1973 NFL season, and there are only three teams in the AFC should mathematically qualify for the playoffs. The pre-season favorites, Miami Dolphins, Pittsburgh Steelers and the Minnesota Vikings have substantial lead in their divisions.

Vikings 20  Falcons 17

This week's big game will be Monday night against the Minnesota Vikings who are led by Fran Tarkenton (possible MVP, NFC 1973), exciting rookie Chuck Foreman, and the purple defense that seems to always outscore Atlanta Falcons. The Falcons have been playing great ball after Bob Lee was made first-string at quarterback, and the deciding factor in this game. Fran Tarkenton returns to his hometown Atlanta to go against his former college, the center, Mort Murn Brockfield (ha, ha) and this rivalry should add more spice into an already exciting game.

Steelers 26  Broncos 17

In Pittsburgh, the Steelers defense should contain Floyd Little and Charley Johnson as witnessed last week in Oakland. Even though the Broncos outplayed the Steelers statistically, 365 yards to 200 yards) it was the big defensive plays that made it an unenjoyable afternoon for Darryl Lamonica.

Redskins 40  Colts 10

In Washington, the Redskins fans should enjoy seeing their team, running back Curley Culp. Everyone in the NFL knows that Joe Thomas, the Colts General Manager, has traded away and destroyed a once-respectable team in football.

Chiefs 31  Oilers 17

The Chiefs are well on their way to 19 more points this week when they defeat the Houston Oilers.

Dolphins 24  Bills 20

The Dolphins and Bills will fight it out until the final quarter, and the experience and poise of the Dolphins defense should make the difference. This is the final game of the season.

Giants 30  Cardinals 27

My fellow New Yorkers: what happened to those Super Bowl Bound! New York Giants? This weeks game between the Cardinal's defense can be considered a team-up. Both teams are hurting defensively and because the Giants have only one victory and they are playing in New Haven, I'll pick the Giants.

Rams 28  S.F. 49's 17

The Rams will make the San Francisco 49ers wish that it was only an exhibition game. There's a lot of pressure on the Rams to win consistently because the Falcons seem to have put it together.

Cowboys 30  Eagles 20

The Cowboys should average that earlier postponing last to the Eagles in Philadelphia.

Raiders 27  Browns 17

The Raiders and Browns are fighting to get into the playoffs and the Raiders are involved in a three-way day race in their division. The "duck house team" in the NFL this season has made things more strait for the Raiders and Chiefs.

Lions 27  Bears 24

Detroit has a good chance of being upset by the Chicago Bears. The Lions have a very potential high-scoring offense and with Bob Boone running the option play and Gary Huff, the Bears talented back-up quarterback, witting ingeniously on the bench to play. These factors should make this a wild game.

Saints 17  Chargers 16

There might be a tie in the Charger-Saints game. The defense of the Saints has made a reputation for itself this year and even though the Chargers have a disappointing record, they usually give their opponents a fight to the final gun.

Packers 28  Patriots 13

If the Packers control the Packard's running attack, this game's outcome could be closer if Jeff W. McN can kick the ball effectively.

Bengals 24  Jets 12

The Cincinnati Bengals will run the New York Jets right out of Riverfront Stadium. The return of Joe Namath should make the game more exciting even if the Bengals are hungry in making it to the playoffs.

Olsen Named Pres.
Coaches Assoc.

E. William Olson, athletic director and varsity basketball coach at Duke College, was named to a one-year term as president of the New England Basketball Coaches Association (NEBCHA) at the organization's annual meeting to be held Nov. 11 at Boston University. Olson previously served as a vice president of the NEBCHA.

A graduate of Boston University, where he played both football and basketball, Olson also holds a B.S. degree from the University of Wisconsin. Before coming to Boston, he was head athletic director and coach professor of physical education at the University of New Hampshire. Olson has also served as a selected coach and instructor in physical education at Ripe College, and for eight years coached basketball, football, and baseball at North Carroll College in Naperville, Illinois.

In his seventh season at Babson, Olson has compiled an 82- 80 record, including one Naisouth Conference championship and two co-championships. His 1968-69 team won 17 games, a record for the college. His 1971-72 team won 23, best ever by a Babson basketball team.

Olson has been athletic director and associate professor of physical education at Babson since 1965.

official college that we may have difficulties this winter. The college may be asked or ordered by the M.A. degree to measure, either prescribed or voluntary, to cut down fuel consumption.

"Consequently, to stay ahead of the game, the staff has met and discussed different possibilities. We will meet again next week after we have investigated the ramifications of the proposed action. At that time, the committee could probably make a decision..."

"I would add, however, that anyone who has any specific questions, please come to us and let us discuss it.

Proposal to alleviate the oil shortage have ranged from changing heating equipment to closing down the campus for an extended time.

"I have always felt," pho- tographed Mr. Pottery in defense of the Book Store's monopoly power, "and I have no reason to change my mind, that the Babson College community is a small market.

The Book Store is here to serve the students. It seems to me that there is not just enough of a market to justify competition.

"I feel that the Book Store prices are reasonable in relation to drug stores in surrounding communities, in order to remain competitive we should have the exclusive market on our campus. I feel that students will get the best prices and best service through this particular market price."

Then concluded, "If we allow competition, then we won't be able to do what is most basically to give the students the best possible service. And that's what we are here for."

What is there to say? Congratulations to those soccer team. The Green machine is just superb. Best Wishes this weekend go on.

Intramural hockey is progressing nicely thank you. No one is conceding Team Canada the BILL Title yet, but I do think there would be too many takers for bets on other teams. The red and white Maple Leafs still appear to be the class of the league, All might challenge but the zone of Team Canada will probably win out.

Playing for Baby is no easy task. Tues. night a total of two and a half hockey players showed up to skate, including the goalie, one other forward, and yours truly with a knee injury from last week's classic confrontation which saw Baby go against the Coleman Pioneers. Last minute recruiting attempts made a game possible, but the new additions were just not enough for the tough skaters of Team Canada who just went through the motions in a very easy game.

In case you hadn't heard, Delta Sigma didn't actually feast on steak and eggs in preparation for their game vs. Theta Chi. At this point, however, it is little more than a trivia question.

The last night's game between the Bruins and Le Canadians caused me to experience a touch of "homelandishness". The Montreal Forum has got to be one of the finest buildings in the National Hockey League.

If the Bruins find the Montreal fans just a little less vocal this season, it is probably due to a change in organists, Claude ASCu, the only female organist in the National Hockey League was replaced by a gentlemans who, by my standards, is very unassuming. Could that be the reason for the Baby relatively slow start this season?
